Anne has plenty of competition, for in present-day Europe there is a plethora of unmarried princesses and they far outnumber the princes.

While Queen Elizabeth's only daughter is but fourth in line of succession to the throne—coming behind her brothers, the Princes Charles, Andrew and Edward—Europe has three crown princesses of marriageable age and dozens of just plain princesses.

The crown princesses are Beatrix, 26, of The Netherlands, Margrethe, 24, of Denmark and Sonja, 22, of Greece.

Princess Irene's chances of gaining the throne may be almost as remote as Anne's. Her brother, King Constantine, in September took as his bride and queen, 21-year-old Anne-Marie of Denmark, youngest daughter of King Frederik IX. Children are to them what some before Irene in the royal succession.

It was at the marriage of Constantine and Anne - Marie that the would-be matchmakers went to work on Anne of Great Britain, who was a bridesmaid at the Athens wedding.

SUGGESTS MARRIAGE

While a great concentration of kings, queens, princes and princesses was taking place at the Greek capital, the Stockholm newspaper Expressen said:

"It would be ideal to have a queen like Anne at Carl Gustaf's side. . . . The British monarchy would receive a stimulus should Princess Anne marry a king-to-be."

Prince Carl Gustaf, 18, is heir to the Swedish throne.

"Everything is being done," said the Stockholm newspaper, "to make Carl Gustaf a close friend of the children of the British Queen."

The crown prince was sent to England the summer before last and Anne's father Prince Philip, took the young man sailing with Anne and Charles. Last summer the Swedish crown prince was in Britain again connecting with Anne and her brother Charles.

Asked about this name-linking of Crown Prince Carl Gustav and Princess Anne, a spokesman at Sweden's royal palace said: "They're both children. It's all very ridiculous."

But blue-eyed Princess Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise is growing up all right, and she's a veteran around the marriage altars.

In 1960, she served for the first time as a bridesmaid when her cousin, Lady Pamela Mountbatten, wed London interior decorator David Hicks.

At the wedding of his aunt, Princess Margaret, she was once more a bridesmaid. She repeated the role at the weddings of the Duke of Kent, Princess Alexandra and then for the fifth time at the nuptials in Greece.

At 14, Anne is a large-bone, slightly buxom girl with plenty of curves in the right places.

LIKES RIDING

Vivacious, outspoken and, like her mother, a keen horsewoman, Anne is a boarding pupil at Benenden, a school for girls in nearby County Kent.

Before she entered Benenden last autumn, Anne had been educated by private tutors in a makeshift school room at Buckingham Palace.

Persons close to the Queen and Prince Philip say the idea of Anne attending a boarding school with 350 other girls was Anne's. Prince Philip heartily endorsed the idea, but it took the Queen some more time to agree.

At Benenden, Anne is a popular girl, but not an outstanding student.

During her vacations, she has been fond of her time riding, listening to records in which the Beatles are high on her list, fishing and sailing with her father. At school, she lives in a dormitory, makes her own bed and takes her turn at waiting on tables.

Her teachers call her Princess Anne. Her schoolmates call her Anne. It was at this same school that Princess Benedikte of Denmark was a pupil, graduating in 1958. Her friends called her Benny.

Princess Benedikte, 20, is one of Europe's prettiest princesses. Some think she's even prettier than her sister Anne Marie, now Queen of Greece.

WARM FRIENDSHIP

Benedikte's elder sister, Crown Princess Margrethe, is also intelligent, thoroughly relaxed in any company, a young woman with a sparkling sense of humor.

The crown princess's name has been linked with that of Henri de Laborde de Monpezat, a Danish diplomat now in Paris. But suggestions of a romance have been vigorously denied by Denmark's royal court.

Princess Benedikte is a quiet brunette, fond of hunting, of horseback riding. As far as is known, she has never been involved in any affair of the heart with a young man.

The Danish royal family has two unwed princesses, Margriet, 21, and Christine 17.

The Dutch royal family has guws de Bourbon last April and the Dutch minister confided that the thought of marrying off the remaining trio of princesses frightened him.

Don Carlos is a Roman Catholic. To marry Dutch Princess Irene, married Don Carlos Hugues de Bourbon last April and the Dutch royal family announced that a Dutch minister confided that the thought of marrying off the remaining trio of princesses frightened him.

STUDIES IN U.S.

The only single Swedish princess is Christina, 21, who established herself as an intellectualist last year by insisting on enrolling at Radcliffe, a U.S. college for schoolmaids, royalty if possible.

The contemporary mainstay of the House of Orleans is the Count of Paris, pretender to the non-existent French throne. The count has two married daughters and two single ores. The latter are Anne de France, 25, and Chantal de France, 18. Anne recently completed her studies and now has no specific occupation. Chantal is still in school. Both go out frequently. A family spokesman said no marriages are in prospect and "when they become engaged we will announce it."

In the Bourbon line is the family of Prince Xavier de Bourbon-Parma, father of Don Carlos, who married Princess Irene of Holland. The prince also has two unmarried daughters, Marie des Neiges 25, and Marie-Cecile, 29, who makes parachute jumps as a hobby. Said to be pretty and amazingly live, both girls stay out of the public eye in their travels between the family's two chateaux in the country and a Paris apartment.

Chosen from among 20 contestants as the most beautiful of the 20 - year - old anthropology student from the University of Victoria could only exclaim to those around her: "I can't believe it. I'm so happy."

Eighteen-year-old Joan Clarkin of Montreal, who was McGill University's snow queen was second in the judging and Miss Calgary Stampedtr, Kari Jonassen, 19, of Calgary, came third.

Miss Douma's prizes include a $1,000 scholarship and a $5,000 list of such tokens as a watch, a necklace, a console radio - phonograph, three weeks in Hawaii and a complete wardrobe. She is also guaranteed a job that will pay at least $5,000 a year.

Church Groups

WESLEYAN METHODIST W.M.S.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Rawlings, Dundas Street West, was opened for the monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Wesleyan Methodist Church on Thursday evening.

The invocation was given by Mrs. Joyce LeRoy followed by devotions conducted by Mrs. Lil Jeffrey. A poem was read followed by the prayer concerning various missionaries and their particular field.

A report was given on an outgoing missionary, Miss Joan Anglin, who is a member of the church and who flies to Puerto Rico on November 14th to teach in the Evangelical Dead Mission at Yaguilyu. Praise was offered that her monthly support promises are coming in well.

The ladies were reminded by the president, Mrs. Jean Locklin, to do visitation at the County Home, save CP labels and also presented a request for Christmas presents for mentally ill patients. It was also decided to send Christmas gifts to two local girls who are on Mission fields.

PRAYER SUPPORT

Mrs. Nora Elliott gave the topic on The Challenge of the Word, in preparation for our missions centennial. God's master plan remains unchanged "to make Christ known" and the part of the WMS is prayer support and inspiring the interest of others in evangelizing the world. The statistic was quoted that of 400 missionaries from India who were interviewed only 19 served more than one term. Why? was the question. Reasons for this involve poor adjustment, language problems, loneliness and health, but the speaker went on to say "would this statistic be different had there not been a lack of prayer support on the part of the folks at home?"

The continent of Europe was discussed and it was stated that "there are many people in Europe who have never seen a Bible than the entire population of the United States and Canada together" further, that in France alone there are 36,000 cities and towns with no Protestant church of any kind.

The president dismissed the meeting with prayer and refreshments were served by the hostess.

PERSONALS

The monthly meeting of the Belleville Red Cross Homemakers was held at the home of their supervisor, Mrs. J. A. Buchanan, 178 Dufferin Avenue, on Friday evening. After a brief business meeting, the homemakers enjoyed an informative, interesting talk given by Mrs. R. Kar concerning her native land of India. Refreshments were served with Mrs. Frank Hammond in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coleman, Geddes Street have returned home from Los Angeles, California where they have been visiting their daughter Mrs. Ray S. Wood and Mr. Wood.

Mr. William Baldwin has returned to Edmonton, Alberta, after visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Taylor and family. He also attended the funeral of his only brother, the late Albert E. Baldwin.

Breeding Tropical Fish Hobby of Oakville Girl Interested in the Theatre

By MARGARET NESS

LONDON (CP)—"She simply won't get at it and have her babies," said Clare Slater, peering in at the mother. "There she is, the one with her nose down and her posterior up."

Miss Slater moved on to another of some 100 tanks in the room and started dipping out what looked like swimming fishheads.

"I've got to get these babies into another tank before their mother eats them."

Breeding tropical fish commercially in the centre of London is a far cry from Miss Slater's more immediate setting and theatre background, both in Canada and England.

However, it does tie in, at least indirectly, with her studies in the sciences at McGill University. And she has been interested in tropical fish since high school days.

Every time she has settled down for any length of time she has bought a few tanks and some fish. And although she never expected to commercialize her hobby, a friend confessed she had a sudden need for ready cash.

BUYER'S CHANCE

She turned to the 30 tanks of tropical fish she had set up in her London flat and found space in a pet shop, moved the tanks in, added more, and started to "grow on" the fish.

At present Miss Slater is selling only the surplus but by Christmas she hopes business will be on its feet and self-sustaining so that he can go back, part time, to her first love, theatrical career of writing.

Clare Slater has already published a novel and a TV play, written during a stay in Sicily last year, and has finished a stint as assistant to J. Hutchison Scott, the English stage designer well known to audiences at Ontario's Stratford Shakespearean Festival.

Miss Slater certainly had no intention of going either into the theatre or tropical fish business. In fact she was 24 before she saw her first professional play.

Born and brought up in Oakville, Ont., she was always being urged to do things athletic. And she showed no interest in theatre as she worked toward her BSc at McGill, served with the Canadian Women's Army Corps during the war and served as assistant editor of the Community Planning Association of Canada magazine in Ottawa.

After several stays in London, during one of which she set up an unsuccessful business in literary art called Bede House, she found herself in Toronto.

She had always thought writing as a possible career and began by doing some documentary films for television as well as radio and TV plays.

It was Canadian comedienne Araby Lockart, now also a London resident, who launched Miss Slater's theatre career. Araby decided to do a revue at Toronto's Hart House Theatre. This was the first Clap Hands and Miss Slater became business manager and publicity agent.

PRODUCED PLAY

She worked two summers in the same capacity with the Red Barn Theatre at Jackson's Point on Lake Simcoe, then produced a play herself, The Tunnel of Love.

The city of London was still strong and in 1960 she returned. Laurence Olivier was just opening his season at Chichester, patterned after Ontario's Stratford Theatre, and Miss Slater became attached to the general manager.

It was after she bought her little house that she got back to tropical fish.

She gets her breeding stock from Florida and plans to concentrate on special types of fish, introducing new, stronger strains.

"Actually, it's slave labor in the fish business. They come by air freight and sometimes the airport will phone me at 4 a.m. to say a shipment has arrived. No one will insure their live delivery."

Women's Institutes

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The November meeting of Plainfield W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. R. Lightfoot with 16 members present.

The president opened the meeting in the usual manner.

Correspondence was read, including a thank you note from the Canadian National Institute for the Blind for $20.50.

The topic was home economics under the leadership of Miss Monroe of Napanee.

The motto was "Bread is the symbol of home, hope or hospitality."

Lunch was served by Mrs. Lightfoot and her assistants.

Epicurean Rote Grutze

By MARY MOORE

Now I'm happy. I've been to Lochow's German restaurant in New York and had Rote Grutze.

When Helen Campbell was director of a famous old Canadian magazine she served what she called "Rot Gut" to about a dozen press women and ever since I've been intrigued by it. Thirty years later on Thanksgiving weekend 1964, in New York I ordered and ate and enjoyed it. Testing by intuition and guided by some sketchy recipes — I made a better-than-reasonable facsimile and served it to two of the same people who were at Helen's press club luncheon. It was good and approved.

ROTE GRUTZE ("rot gut" to some folks — serves 6):

3 tablespoons minute tapioca, 2 tablespoons sugar, one 15-oz. package fresh frozen raspberries, ¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons hot water, 1/16 teaspoon salt.

Defrost the raspberries in a sieve over a bowl. Pour the hot water through them and when drained force through sieve until you have only about ¾ cup seeds left. Discard seeds. In top of double boiler mix together the tapioca, sugar and salt. Add the raspberry juice and puree to tapioca-sugar mixture, stir well and cook in top of double boiler over boiling water for 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Cool enough to pour into 6 stemmed glasses. Chill in refrigerator until serving time. Serve with rich pouring cream or generous dollops of unsweetened whipped cream. A simple but definitely epicurean dessert. Please try it.

Spaghetti and Meat Balls with Neapolitan Sauce; Bread Sticks; Shredded Lettuce and Red Italian Onion Rings Salad with Sour Cream Dressing; Lemon Meringue Pie; Coffee.

STANDBY CORNSTARCH PUDDING WITH FRUIT (serves 4 or 6):

If you do not have this recipe right at hand, clip it now for it will fill the gap many times.

½ cup sugar, 1/3 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ¾ tablespoon flour, 2¼ cups milk, 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Mix all ingredients but butter and vanilla in heavy pan. Beat very well. Cook, stirring, over high heat for 2 minutes, then reduce heat to simmer; stirring until thick. Stir until it has been over the heat for 5 minutes in all. Add butter and vanilla. Put some fruit such as sliced bananas or drained canned peaches or drained fruit cocktail in bottom of stemmed glasses or fruit saucers. Pour warm pudding over, let cool to room temperature. Garnish with cherry and serve with milk or cream.

NOTE:

If you do not have fruit on hand add ¼ cup coconut or 1 square cooking chocolate to mixture while it is cooking.

Ann Landers

Accuracy of Needle Test Cannot Be Explained

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We have two sons. For almost three years my husband and I have wanted another child but we've had no luck. About a month ago my sister said she'd like to try the needle trick on me to determine whether or not I'd have more children.

She took a threaded needle and rubbed it across my middle finger. Then she dangled the threaded needle over the top of my head, steadying it between her thumb and index finger until it stood perfectly still. If the needle remained still it meant I would not have any more children. If it moved back and forth it meant a boy. If it moved in circles it meant a girl.

ANN LANDERS

We tried it three times. Twice the needle moved back and forth, meaning I had two boys, which was right. The third time it stood still, indicating I would not have any more children.

This past week six different women tried it on me and the results were the same. I tried it on them and the needle was right every time.

I know this sounds nutty, but the accuracy of these tests is amazing. How do you explain it? — D.L.

DEAR D.L. — I won't try. But this I can tell you — If you want another child, just believe in the needle trick. Give away your baby buggy, your crib, the stroller and the diaper pail. Accept the fact you will not have more children. Chances are within a year you'll be pregnant. The frequency with which this has happened is more amazing than the needle trick.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please tell teen-agers not to marry to get away from home. If home is intolerable advise them to move out when they become of legal age — and their way through college or get a job and support themselves. Getting married to escape from tyrannical parents is always a horrible mistake.

I know whereof I speak. The man I married turned out to be twice as mean as my mother and father put together. I jumped from the frying pan into the fire and I've been frying ever since.

I wish there were a law which would force couples to wait for three months after registering their intentions to marry. I believe it would reduce the number of marriages by at least 30% and cut the divorce rate in half. Agree? — TRAVELLED THE ROUTE.

DEAR TRAVELLED — I agree. I often tell teen-agers if it's love it can wait. If it can't wait, it's not love — it's chemistry. And a marriage based on chemistry can't last because chemistry changes.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was one of those girls who heard people say time and again, "You have such a pretty face — if you'd lose some weight you'd be a knockout." Eight months ago I decided to do something about it. I went to my doctor and he put me on a diet. I followed his instructions and lost 45 pounds.

I feel 100% better and I look 200% better. The problem is I've lost three fat friends. I suspect these girls dropped me because they are jealous. They have all tried to lose weight but they can't stick to a diet.

Do you believe that when people lose weight they usually lose their overweight friends? — NEW CHASSIS.

DEAR NEW — It can happen and obviously it does happen. But such people are not friends. They are acquaintances. They are acquaintances who once shared a common misery. You've lost nothing of value. Forget it.

• • •

Too many starry-eyed lovers do not know the difference. Do you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Before You Marry — Is It Love Or Sex?", enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

QUESTION: I'm engaged and our marriage is set for late winter. I still call my fiancé's mother "Mrs. Smith," but I wonder if I should now call her by her first name or, perhaps, "Mother Smith." She's made no comments about what name she would like me to use. Should I give her a less formal title or wait until she brings up the subject? —C. A. K., Brooklyn, N.Y.

ANSWER. If she has a preference about what name you are to use in addressing her, let her suggest it. In the meantime, since she has not said anything about it, continue using her formal title, "Mrs. Smith."

Dr. Iva Taves Combines Role Of Wife, Job

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Iva Taves combines the distinct roles of wife and mother and her job—a pathologist.

As the recently appointed director of laboratories at the Kitchener - Waterloo Hospital, she performs an average of 150 autopsies a year—a fascinating job because "you never know what's inside."

"I wanted a home life and children and the regular pace of a general practitioner doesn't lend itself to this. After my marriage, during my final year of internship, I decided I would have to choose a post with regular hours. Pathology held my interest at medical school, and here I am."

Dr. Taves became associate pathologist at the 437-bed hospital in 1956. Her recent appointment as director makes her one of the few women in Canada occupying such a post.

She says she tries to end her day about 5 p.m., but pressure of work often means that after tucking the children in bed, she will be back in the laboratory until 11 p.m.

Her two small daughters, Mila Joy, 7, and Mary Margaret, 5, take her work for granted. "They don't think it at all strange for their mother to perform autopsies," she said.

U.C.W. Meetings

STONE CHURCH U.C.W.

The October meeting of Stone Church U.C.W. was held at the manse recently. The president, Mrs. Demorest opened the meeting with a reading on missions.

Mrs. C. Rushnell took charge of the program and chose as her topic "Trinidad" leaving many thoughts with her listeners about the great need for teachers, ministers and leaders, stressing the need for Canada and the church to send men and women to share this ministry with them.

Mrs. G. Evans conducted a well prepared Bible study with Mrs. Demorest, Mrs. V. Phillips and Mrs. Cooper taking part, after which all joined in a discussion period. This was followed by an interesting report by Mrs. Cooper of the regional rally held at Stirling. She told of the work being carried on in Africa by Miss Eleanor Beach who was present at the Stirling rally.

The president thanked the hostess for opening her home for this meeting and Mrs. Cooper closed with prayer.

The committees in charge served refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

Susanna's Family Fare

ROUGH BARS

Dear Susanna: I am the "Mr. Fixit" in our house so am always looking for short cuts to simpler homemaking.

Here is a method I have devised for putting a stop to the troublesome problem of towels slipping off the bathroom racks. Tape a piece of sandpaper, rough side out, to the back of the bar, and just see how nicely it keeps those slithery towels in place.

• • •

Here is something else I have found out. Little blackboard chalk ends that children discard have some very interesting uses. They are particularly handy for plugging up the nail holes that have been left after pictures are removed or their position changed. How often has someone in your family decided to freshen up a room with a quick coat of paint but didn't want to get involved in a messy plaster job? Well, blackboard chalk at ends are the answer. Take a small piece and tap it into the hole, then cut it off flush with the wall. Leaves a smooth surface neat as a pin.

• • •

I also take advantage of the fact that chalk rubbed on metal gives it a shine, so I always store a few ends in with my costume jewelry to prevent tarnishing. — K. T.

Your idea for roughening the back of the towel bar is a great help towards stiffening the backbone of those spineless little guest towels. Otherwise, one look; and they collapse in a cow ardly heap on the floor. — SUSANNA

District High School Holds Annual Graduation Exercises

CAMPBELLFORD — The District High School held their annual commencement exercises in the auditorium on Friday evening.

The program opened with the processional, principal L. Caughill, vice-principal J. Cheynoweth, speaker Mr. R. B. Cunningham M.A. the staff, the High School Board members and the graduating class with Miss Kathy Dart at the piano.

Mr. Caughill stated this was the 41st commencement for the school. He spoke briefly stressing the value of education, its demands and its privileges.

Out of 100 children entering grade school, 68 reached Grade 9 and 33 secondary school graduation and only 13 Second ary School honor graduations. Every graduating class is a privileged group, but with knowledge must be developed a sense of duty.

He went on to say great men existed at a strong sense of duty and named Sir Winston Churchill as an example. Neither education nor wisdom are gifts but must be sought after if security is assured in an ever changing world. Given responsibilities face young people, the changes taking place in social customs unable to govern themselves, the breakdown of morals and the advent of the space age.

"There is something going on in space and time," Mr. Caughill continued and "whether we like it or not it spells duty. Education requires the entire make-up of the individual. Education needs character and unselfishness, wisdom and devotion to duty or else one is never truly educated."

INTRODUCES STAFF

Principal Caughill introduced vice-principal J. Cheynoweth and the other 27 members of the staff.

Secondary school graduation certificates were presented to 39 pupils by Mr. Trevor Clarke member of the Board and Secondary School honor graduation diplomas were presented to 13 pupils by Mr. A. Buchanan.

Mr. A. Buchanan, chairman of the Board spoke briefly and said wisdom was knowing what to do, knowledge was knowing how to do it and success was the result. Mr. Buchanan introduced members of the board, Messrs. D. Bennett, D. Carswell, T. Clarke, R. E. Cryderman, H. Oliver, G.W. Rutherford, Mrs. Helen Vice, secretary-treasurer.

The school choir under the direction of Mr. J. Cheynoweth A.T.C.M. rendered three selections.

GUEST SPEAKER

The guest speaker of the evening was Mr. R. R. Cunningham, M.A., Acting High Commissioner for New Zealand to Canada. Mr. Cunninghame was Japanese translator in General MacArthur's headquarters during the war and lived in Japan for some time after the war.

MORE

Mr. Cunninghame gave a reflective speech on the "Importance of Imagination." Imagination is stirred by space machines, landing on the moon, but the human mind is a much more complicated machine, it has never been really explored as a result it is wonderful to be a person.

Imagination is developed by the acquiring of knowledge, but a sense of balance must be acquired as a counterpoise to much imagination. The address supplemented by quotations from Bertrand Russell and other deep writers of prose and poetry Mr. Cunninghame held the rapt attention of his audience.

DOWNWARD TREND

As a final thought he said, "Some time life runs into a downward trend due perhaps to religious doubts, failure to reach a particular goal, loneliness or illness, some challenge is almost certain to strike but can be met with courage and a good philosophy acquired by education, imagination and knowledge."

Mr. Cunninghame was introduced by Mr. P. D. Haley of the Campbellford staff and was thanked by Evan Myers, one of the graduates.

PROFICIENCY AWARDS

The proficiency awards were presented by members of the Board as follows:

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

In the course of his remarks the valedictorian Glenn Bennett, said

The last five years at this school have formed a small but interesting part of our lives. By doing our assignments either conscientiously or haphazardly at time, we have come to realize to a small degree the importance of a good education. Although some days seem monotonous and tiring, many were profitably spent. In developing our potentialities. This of course has required honest work on our part and at many times patience on the part of our teachers. During this time, we have learned to take responsibility to make decisions, to co-operate with others, to set standards of behavior and to determine what, when and how to study.

As a class, we were able to share our friendships, our knowledge, our faults and to compete academically and athletically with one another. One must remember, that a school is not only a place to acquire knowledge and then regurgitate it again, so to speak, on examinations but also a place where athletic programs and student organizations provide an opportunity to develop our physical abilities and to broaden our scope of learning in a particular field.

SPECIAL DEDICATIONS

We, as graduates, wish to take this opportunity to make special dedications — first to our teachers. It is said that what makes a school are the teachers. They lay the foundation towards our education and life. Our special thanks are extended to ten teachers of last year's grade thirteen who contributed immensely toward our success.

Next our dedications are extended to our parents. At times we tend to overlook their role in our education. They are the ones keenly interested in us and the ones who performed many extra tasks last year to allow us to spend our time profitably studying and reviewing. Our last but not least dedication is to our Heavenly Father who has helped us to fulfil our school motto, "Per Vias Rectas". Through His guidance our success has been obtained.

Alexander Pope in his "Essay on Criticism" says "a little learning is a dangerous thing" Shallow draughts of knowledge intoxicate the brain; drinking largely sobers us up again." In a nuclear age which we are now experiencing, such a statement seems to be justified. More and more is demanded of us.

Another example of this is the change in the grade thirteen curriculum. The redefining of the year's work by the equivalent of three weeks to allow students to study deeper in certain parts of the course shows that universities are demanding more of us. However, by following the stepping stones of education, we are better prepared to enter the world of work which education demands. Education is like a bridge. The students are the captains who must use their knowledge as charts to find success in many ports.

MUST LOOK AHEAD

We hope that we have been a credit to our teachers and principals. Although we have experienced some feeling of pride in leaving behind our teachers and schoolmates, we must look ahead. Thus we have all travelled in different directions — some to colleges, some to universities and others to nursing schools. In concluding, we would like to extend our congratulations to all our fellow students receiving diplomas and those of you receiving other awards. May you continue to achieve this high standard of excellency. To those of you not graduating, remember, success is just around the corner.

Girls Must Try to Earn Mother's Trust Bit by Bit

DEAR DORIS — We are two sisters, 16 and 17, and we are treated like babies. We are not allowed to date.

Our sister (who is 19) went away to Teachers' College last week, but when she was home we used to get a little more freedom. When we go to a dance, which is about every two weeks, we've got to go with our brother and come back with him.

Last Saturday night we wanted to go to a dance but they wouldn't let us go. I cried all evening. All the kids around here go to the dances and think it's queer we don't go.

Doris, we never did anything bad in our lives and they have no reason to distrust us. Please don't write because Mom will only keep the letter. — F. AND S.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR F. AND S. — If you aren't even to receive mail mother has plumb forgotten that you are people!

Could you seek permission to have a party at home? — One way to get your parents acquainted with your friends. Then they might soften up and let an obviously well-behaved young man escort you to a dance.

You should not, of course, go there alone.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — Reading the letter from the despondent stutterer brings back many unhappy years that I was a bad stutterer myself. I was a shy person and quite nervous until I reached the sixth grade.

After I turned 15 I started skating and mixing with people and fought off the stuttering by talking slowly, where I used to talk fast, and I believe this is where my problem may have started. I never needed a doctor for my case as I fought it myself and today I'm just fine.

Only at times, if I get extra mad or over nervous, I find it can bring back this stuttering, so I just calm down and I'm all right again. So I hope I can help this person to a happier life. — ONCE A STUTTERER.

• • •

DEAR ONCE — Through exerting the self-control to slow down, you relaxed and lessened the nervous tension which was at the root of your stuttering. Proves that at least some cases will respond to self-help. Thank you.

• • •

Confidential to PERPLEXED — Letters are addressed to a widow the same as to a wife. That is, using her husband's first name or initials: Mrs. William Smith. When it comes to signing letters or documents, she uses her own name. That is, Mary Smith.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — My father passed away in August and I have heard that my mother and I do not send Christmas cards this year.

Could you please advise me of the correct procedure? — DOUBTFUL.

• • •

DEAR DOUBTFUL — You can help your mother to pick up the pieces by resuming normal friendly customs as soon as possible. Your cards this year can still be sincere good wishes, without being frivolous.

A thoughtful card expressing a spiritual message, or a plainer card with your own written note on the bottom, will be reassuring to the friends who worry and wonder about you.

If your father's death had occurred at about card-sending time, you'd hardly feel like it. But that's different.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I think your reply to "Dreads Mirror" was positively cruel! Below is my message to her:

• • •

DEAR DREADS MIRROR — I know exactly how you feel, as I too have passed through that dreadful state of dreading the mirror because of my fallen-in face and my neck, once beautiful, a mess of strings. Got your face lifted, and your spirits life with it. I did, at more than 20 years your age.

I presume that your recent operation has wrecked the family budget, but now that over a year has passed since my face-life, I feel that the latter was almost a necessity because of the improvement in my mental outlook. If you would like to write to me or talk to me, you can obtain my name and address from Doris. — LIFTED IN SPIRIT.

• • •

DEAR LIFTED — O.K. I scorn nothing which can lift the spirit. Are you reading, Mrs. Dreads?

• • •

(If it's etiquette that's bothering you, ask Doris. She can tell you how things are done in Canada.)

Horticultural Societies Prepare for Centennial Year at District Meeting

PICTON — Help beautify the face of Canada in preparation for the Centennial celebrations in 1967, was the challenge thrown out to members of eight Horticultural Societies, which comprise District 3, at the annual meeting held Saturday in Napanee.

That societies in Kingston, Brockville, Gananoque, Collins Bay, Picton, Napanee, Sitting and Belleville are planning now to reap a harvest of beauty in Centennial year, as urged by District Director Phil Dodds of Picton, was evident in the reports presented by each Society.

Their growth and increased membership and outstanding record of achievement in many fields of beautification and civic improvement was highly praised by James Deeney of Niagara Falls, president, and Russell Gomme, Ontario Department of Agriculture, secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Association. Both challenged the district groups to increase memberships so that the association's membership may reach 50,000 in the Province.

Horticultural, historical and agricultural themes featured the afternoon and evening sessions at Napanee Memorial hall, with attendance exceeding 200.

Horticultural in that the program included an outstanding talk by W. S. Simpson of the Kingston Society who covered in detail the planning and carrying out of a successful flower show. That at Kingston, held in June, which he directed, had 536 exhibits and 151 arrangements.

Agricultural in that Victor Lord of Picton showed colored slides of the County Fair at Picton which revealed the importance of display and the beauty of the flower show in a garden setting. He also emphasized the Horticultural theme, with slides on flowers and other Horticultural topics.

Historical in that members took time out to visit the MacPherson House (1830) which is being renovated and restored by Lennox and Addington Historical Society. Also on this theme was a visit to the county museum, located in the memorial building and kept open for the occasion.

TEA SERVED

Although Napanee marked its Centennial this year, it was the first time a district annual had been held there and the local Society went all out to make it a memorable day. They served tea in the afternoon with Mrs. H. C. Burleigh and Mrs. L. Crossman presiding at the silver tea services, and added to the social hour in the evening meeting by serving pumpkin pie with whipped cream.

Creating much interest were displays of driftwood by Mrs. James Lovelace of Picton and Ed. Ford of Napanee. Clifford Farnsworth of Napanee had a wonderful display of redwood planters while the Napanee Society had artistic arrangement of fall flowers. Music during the social hour was provided by Miss Beatrice Baughan.

Ontario Association secretary Russell Gomme, covered a wide range of topics of interest to members. He urged attendance at the June convention in Guelph, that service to Horticulture be recognized by the presentation of available awards such as service diplomas, life memberships and junior service awards. He suggested formation of a district executive, listing of flower shows in Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity booklet; taking part in OHA competitions, taking advantage of every possible means of communications with the public, greater stress on programs for juniors, distribution of Ontario Horticultural judging standards for which there is a world wide demand. There is opportunity for formation of new Societies in the district.

236 SOCIETIES

There are 236 Horticultural Societies in Ontario and they spend $.00,000 on horticultural projects, said Ontario Association president J. Deeney. He asked each Society to increase membership by at least 30 to bring membership total to 50,000. He felt membership could be doubled and gave many helpful ideas on improving meetings and programs. A meeting conducted entirely by men, even to refreshments, was one of the ideas suggested. Some societies do not give prize money at flower shows but award points and these count towards prizes presented at the end of the year, he said. By increasing membership and horticultural promotion, Societies can get a greater share of the $40,000 which is allotted by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Introduced by the District Director, Mr. Gomme and Mr. Deeney were thanked by Mrs. F. C. Pile of Napanee and presented with Quinte cheese.

WELCOME EXTENDED

A civic welcome was extended by Councillor Clause Knight, a director of the Napanee Society. One of the projects of local interest is the development of the Napanee Valley authority. A welcome on behalf of Napanee Society was voiced by the president, Mrs. W. J. Barnard.

Phil Dodds of Picton was elected as District Director for a third term with Mrs. J. S. Shepherdson of Kingston as honorary director and Mrs. J. McHary of Kingston as secretary. W. R. Barrett presided for election.

Napanee Society honored its secretary, Miss Letha Scott with the presentation of a Service Diploma, awarded by the Ontario Horticultural Association in recognition of outstanding service to Horticulture. In paying tribute to Miss Scott, Napanee vice-president W. F. Barrett said she was a charter member, had served as director and as president for two years before becoming secretary. The award was presented by District Director Phil Dodds who brought congratulations from the Ontario Association on this well merited recognition.

Among those attending the meeting was J. B. Belshaw of Stirling, a member of that Society for more than 30 years. Visitors coming the farthest distance was Mrs. Lorne Forse, a daughter of Simcoe and District Society.

Urging all to 'plant now and reap a harvest of beauty in Centennial year', District Director Phil Dodds especially urged the planting of trees. If every home in Canada would plant one tree, there would be five million more trees which be termed as five million birthday candles to enhance the festivities which will take place in each community. Let us double our efforts in local community work, doing as much as we can on a Society level and then enlisting the support of municipalities and other organizations, he urged.

GARDEN PROPOSED

An old fashioned garden, containing flowers and shrubs common a century ago, was proposed as a project for Napanee Horticultural Society by district Director Phil Dodds at the district annual at Napanee.

It would be part of the restoration of the historic MacPherson House being undertaken by Lennox and Addington Historical Society, which took members of the Horticultural groups on a tour of the building.

A vivid picture of the romantic past of the white frame house on the banks of Napanee river, and the plans for the future, were painted by Judge Gerald Smith and vice-president Helen Hutchinson. They feel it will become a great tourist attraction when complete.

An example of Georgian architecture (1830) the house is in need of extensive renovations, but the visitors, too, were much enthused over the project. Part of the plans call for planting a garden and from this arose the suggestion that the Horticultural Society make it a project, with District Societies lending help in locating plants and shrubs which are fast disappearing.

Although there was no formal motion, it was generally felt that this would be an excellent project in which all district Societies would be interested.

4-H Club Awards Made At Meeting

PICTON (Staff) — Presentation of 4-H club awards night was held Friday night in the auditorium of Queen Elizabeth public school in Picton. There was a good crowd present to witness the presentation of trophies and certificates to the participating junior farmers. The guest speaker was Mr. D. A. Taylor, Agricultural representative, the Ontario Department of Agriculture from Woodstock.

Also attending the awards night was Norris Whitney, M.P.P. who conveyed his best wishes and congratulations to all many winners. Mr. Whitney said that within the Provincial Government there was great respect by many members for the Department of Agriculture and its important function. Mr. Whitney continued that the boys and girls were to be congratulated for their efforts. Not only does participation in 4-H work produce better farmers, but also better citizens he said. Lewis Wight introduced the guest speaker, Mr. D. A. Taylor. Mr. Taylor in his opening remarks said that in looking at this group of young people gathered for their awards night that he felt confident that they will never have any problems with citizenship. He stressed the importance of good citizenship and also praised the parents for their unfailing interest in assisting with the club work. Future leaders of the community, yes and even of the country itself should come from 4-H Club members.

Mr. Taylor continued stating that it was most difficult to keep up with the rapid changes in this modern day and take the young people will no doubt go ahead faster in the future, they must keep up to date and take every opportunity to keep up their education. The future belongs to those who prepare for it. Mr. Taylor emphasized that young people must first get a good general education and then specialize. In closing he advised 4-H club members to strive to be leaders in living and to keep their image good. The guest speaker was thanked by Bill Cunningham and presented with a hamper of Mc Intosh apples.

Two Jumpers Thrill Crowds At Flying Club

PICTON (Staff) — Sunday's good weather provided good conditions for the Prince Edward Flying Club's "Sky Diving Show". The events began at one and two jumpers thrilled the crowd with near excellent examples of parachuting. Some 10 jumps were made by the two men William Wacey of Trenton Air Station Para Rescue team and John Boudreau of the Army Postal Corp. who is employed in Belleville. The jumpers left the aircraft at varying heights from 2,500 to 7,000 feet. There was a fairly strong wind blowing at the time but all landings were made near target.

Eisaku Sato, Chosen Premier Of Japan, Is Pro-Western And Anti-Communistic

TOKYO (AP)—Eisaku Sato, designated by the ruling Liberal Democratic party to be Japan's new prime minister, is a thick-browed, tough conservative who pulls no punches in the political arena.

Friends recalled today that he used to laugh at banter about his first name—Eisaku—which literally translated means "creator of glory."

"He used to laugh," a friend said, "but you never knew whether he was laughing at the jokes or at you."

Sato, like retiring prime minister Hayato Ikeda, is pro-Western and anti-Communist and the close working relations between Japan and the United States are expected to continue.

But friend and foe alike know him for his blunt tactics and outspokenness.

Like Ikeda, Sato is an expert in economic affairs, an area of prime importance in this booming industrial and trading nation.

A law graduate of Tokyo University, Sato speaks English and German and has travelled widely. Although he is considered strongly anti-Communist and pro-Western, these beliefs are not expected to interfere with his interests for Japan.

"Friendship should not be permitted to interfere with a person's decision when he has any bearing on his course of action in public life," he once commented.

USE SAME PHILOSOPHY

He presumably will adopt this philosophy to his administration's foreign relations.

Sato's political career was relatively unspectacular until after the Second World War. Then, in 1946 Shigeru Yoshida, who served seven years as prime minister and now is a leader in the one-time political force, appointed Sato as his cabinet secretary.

That same year Sato joined Yoshida's Liberal party, a party of the present Liberal-Democratic coalition. He was elected in 1949 to the House of Representatives from a Yamaguchi constituency and has been returned to his seat ever since, occasionally serving concurrently as cabinet and party posts.

Sato was given a test of diplomacy between 1957-60 when he served in his older brother's cabinet as international minister and chief troubleshooter among big businessmen. He appeared successful.

Kishi, who changed his surname after being adopted by his wife's family, once described his brother as "a man born to be a politician."

Most Japanese know Sato as a sombre, studious individual who only occasionally flashes a winning smile. But he loves singing and occasionally entertains friends with a rendition of a popular German or English song, in a rich baritone voice.

Sato, married and the father of two adult sons, also likes to putter around his garden, and fish. Like many of his countrymen, he is a keen golfer and is rated a better than average player.

New Premier Retains All Old Cabinet Ministers

By KENNETH ISHII

TOKYO (AP' — Japan's new premier, Eisaku Sato, completed formation of his cabinet tonight. Official sources said he retained all the ministers in the government of his predecessor, ailing Hayato Ikeda.

The new government also is expected to carry on Ikeda's firmly pro-Western foreign policy.

Sato, 63, and an economics expert, formed his cabinet a few hours after Parliament elected him to succeed Ikeda. After four years in office, Ikeda resigned because of a throat tumor. But he and Sato are members of the ruling Liberal Democratic party.

In the voting in the lower house of the Diet (parliament) Sato received 281 votes, Socialist Jotaro Kawakami got 137, Soehiro Nishio of the Democratic-Socialists got 23, and Sanzo Nosaka, a Communist, got four.

GIVEN MAJORITY

The 250-member upper house, voting simultaneously, gave Sato 146 votes, a majority.

Sato's election was assured earlier today when the Liberal Democrats nominated him for the post after a prolonged struggle within the party. State Minister Ichiro Kono, and former foreign minister Aiichiro Fujiyama also were contenders.

Ikeda, who announced his retirement Oct. 25, settled the contest with a note from his hospital bed recommending Sato.

Sato takes office at a time when, following Red China's atomic blast, pressures are mounting for a new look at relations with Peking. Japan does not have diplomatic relations with Red China but would like to trade more with its Communist neighbor.

Will Open 401 From Lancaster To Quebec

TORONTO (CP) — The most easterly section of Highway 401 in Ontario, an eight mile stretch from east of Lancaster almost to the Quebec border will be opened to traffic for the first time at 11 a.m. Tuesday, provincial Highways Minister C. S. MacNaughton announced today.

All four lanes of the highway as far as the border have been completed, but because the province of Quebec is not ready to open a similar multi-lane highway to meet 401 an existing north-south road on the Ontario side approximately a quarter-of-a-mile inside the border will be used as a temporary link with Ontario's Highway No. 2.

Last July two additional lanes for westbound traffic were opened from Cornwall east to Lancaster.

Total cost for the eight mile stretch is estimated at $6,480,000, Mr. MacNaughton said.

Suit Against Baker Settled

NEW YORK (AP) — News-week magazine says a lawyer for Robert G. Baker, former secretary to the Senate Democratic majority, agreed Oct. 5 to an out-of-court settlement of a suit against Baker, with the proviso that it be kept secret until after the elections.

The magazine says it was agreed to settle a $300,000 suit brought by Ralph Hill, president of Capitol Vending Company for $30,000. Hill's suit charged that Baker used his influence to keep a vending machine contract from his company.

The suit led to a U.S. Senate investigation of Baker's business activities. Baker, who also was head of the Servi-Co Corporation, resigned his Senate post after his business activities came under fire.

Newsweek says the agreement was kept secret until after the Nov. 3 election because "Republicans would have given their eye teeth to have known about it."

The Senate is to resume its investigation of Baker's financial dealings Dec. 1.

Bandits Steal Jewelled Cover Of Book of Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Two masked bandits smashed open an armory display on Sunday and fled with the bejewelled covers of a book hallowing the names of 7,000 American soldiers who died on the battlegrounds of four wars.

The loss was estimated at $75,000 by Col. John J. Bellew, commanding officer of the 7th Regiment Armory.

It was Manhattan's second big theft in nine days. The first netted more than $3.5,000 in precious stones from the Museum of Natural History. Three men have been charged with that crime but the loot has not been recovered.

Taken in Sunday's robbery were the jewel-embedded covers of the regiment's remembrance book and a 24-inch gold cage-armor studded with jade.

The book contains the names of the regiment's battle dead from the civil war, Spanish-American war and the two world wars.

QUEUE FOR RICE

MADRAS, India (AP) — Queues lengthened in front of rice shops here Sunday as people tried to beat a government-imposed cut in the state's rice ration from 1.5 quarts to one a person daily. The government said the new ration — effective today—is necessary to build up a buffer stock for family ration distribution expected to begin Nov. 18.

Sino-Soviet Differences Could Go on for Years

MOSCOW (Reuters)—The secret soundings going on in Moscow between Chinese and Russian leaders to see whether they can patch up their profound differences could go on for years, diplomatic experts said Sunday.

Chinese Premier Chou En-lai heading the strongest delegation to Moscow in more than 18 months, is probably engaged in taking soundings of the new Kremlin leadership and little more, the diplomats said.

They said the removal of Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev who seemed to be leading the Soviet Union toward a complete break with the Chinese Communist party, has opened the way for talks but it is too early to think of negotiations.

Rumors of an early Soviet-Chinese summit in Peking were treated cautiously since it was pointed out that such a meeting would presuppose some kind of understanding and this would probably require lengthy negotiations "running into months and years."

More likely is a continuation of the present soundings in both capitals, through "friendship visits."

WANT ASSESSMENT

One reason why the Chinese would move with stealth in their resumed negotiations is that they probably wish to assess whether the present collective leadership phase in Soviet rule would outlast the previous attempt.

After the death of Stalin in early 1953, which ended a long period of despotic, one - man rule, the first post-war attempt at collective leadership began with Georgi Malenkov as premier and Khrushchev as party boss.

On this occasion collective leadership finally crumbled after four years and there were many foreign observers who thought that it had never worked really well.

Now Khrushchev has fallen, the new phase of collective leadership seem to be firmly in the hands of Party Leader Leonid Brezhnev, President Anastas Mikoyan, Premier Alexei Kosygin, chief ideologist Nikhail Suslov and Nikolai Podgorny, a senior presidium member.

It was pointed out that Chou and his delegation would want, in separate talks, to evaluate the degree of cohesion among this powerful leading group on the China issue and other matters.

MIGHT BE FUTILE

If the Chinese conclude that collective leadership is not solidified to the Soviet genius, they might judge it futile to embark on discussions of principle until the Moscow leadership issue has been resolved.

Finally, the Chinese must determine whether there has been any real change of heart on issues dividing Peking and Moscow among the Kremlin rulers following the removal of Khrushchev.

There was little doubt among expert Western assessors here that the Soviet leadership would like to arrange a truce in the ideological dispute.

Some Western diplomats in Moscow think the Chinese hold many trump cards and have come here to extract concessions rather than compromise. But the Soviet leadership has indicated it will not yield on points of principle.

Diefenbaker Says Liberals Accuse PCs of Obstruction Because of Own Failures

HALIFAX (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Saturday the "trudeaniac" Liberal government of Prime Minister Pearson was accusing the Progressive Conservative party of obstruction in an effort to cover up its own failures.

Mr. Diefenbaker, speaking to more than 1,000 delegates of the Nova Scotia Progressive Conservative Association's annual meeting here from Ottawa via closed circuit television and telephone, said charges of obstruction by the Liberals seem to indicate they are laying the foundation for calling an election.

He said criticism of the government was beginning to be felt and the Liberals were resorting to personal attacks against him. He said this was indication that the government was realizing its failures.

Mr. Diefenbaker, replying to charges made by Tom Kent in the floor as relayed by George Nowlan, Commons member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings, said former finance minister, said the general feeling across Canada was that the government was inept.

SCORE IS HIGH

"Our score is high across the country" he said, "and people believe that the government has too many people calling the signals, including the New Democratic Party, the Social Credit ites and the Creditistes, he said.

The current session of the House was a "very difficult Parliament because the government doesn't know where it is going," he said.

Mr. Diefenbaker said important legislation has been delayed by the flag debate. The Opposition forces acting the government to proceed with the important legislation, including the proposed pension plan and the redistribution bills, and the Liberals continue to call the requests "obstruction," he said.

Mr. Diefenbaker said it now was being forced into Mackenzie Banks, deposed head of the Seafarers' International Union, had been pampered by the Liberals

TRIED DEPORTATION

He said his government had tried to deport Banks but was unable to do so because the former Liberal government had given him landed immigrant status.

Mr. Nowlan told the meeting there was no question of leadership being at stake in the Progressive Conservative party."

He said Mr. Diefenbaker "dominates the Commons in a way that no other Opposition leader has ever done." The party may have made mistakes in details and some may have criticized his tactics but "I have never known Mr. Diefenbaker to be wrong on fundamental matters of principle," he said.

Earlier in the day Dalton Camp, national president of the association, said the party's first task was to get rid of the government.

Allis-Chalmers Strike Starts Despite Progress

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Negotiators striving to reach a contract settlement between the Allis - Chalmers Manufacturing Company and the United Auto Workers Union were reported to have made progress in a solid weekend of bargaining but failed to meet a strike deadline.

The full impact of the strike by 10,700 farm implement workers at five plants in three states was not expected until the start of today's shifts, when the union said full - force picketing would start even as talks were set to be renewed.

Marathon talks began Saturday morning and continued past the strike deadline of mid night Saturday, but hour token picketing was begun at the main plant in suburban West Allis.

The bargaining continued almost without interruption until late Sunday evening.

Spokesman said discussion on local issues would resume today but said no definite hour was set.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

TORONTO:- Professional hockey owes its minor counterpart a large debt of gratitude because practically all its players got their start in the "grass roots" of the sport, National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell told the Ontario Minor Hockey Association annual convention here Saturday.

"We are most grateful to you. We are not so remote from you and I would like to say that one of the main reasons of your success is your quality of self help and self determination!" he told over 600 delegates and guests. "Our relations are both cordial and beneficial."

He explained the draft rule saying that the N.H.L. does not claim the lifetime services of a youth; the clubs merely control the management of the boys up to 18 years of age. There is no obligation on the part of the young players.

He deplored the attacks on referees and officialdom by people who sometimes get a life suspension for their trouble. These men work for the good of the game and everyone connected with hockey should have respect for law and order as represented by referees and other officials.

The average pay of a National League player is $19,000 including bonus, Mr. Campbell pointed out. The league has the most generous pension plan in the world with players and league participating.

A player playing five years can draw $145 per month. A ten-year player collects $350 a month at 65; a 15-year player draws $1,850 at 65 and a 20-year man $3,845 monthly at 65.

Mr. Campbell foresaw expansion of the National Hockey League with the addition of two clubs. This has not been done before because of the economic situation. Each new club has to have an earning potential of one million dollars. This is why Victoria or Vancouver have not been added.

Asked in an interview if the National League planned to do anything player-wise for the Boston Bruins, the president said he would like to see the Bruins do better, but there is nothing the league can do about it.

"We have approved some changes, but getting help actually is the responsibility of the clubs themselves." Mr. Campbell said.

Other special guests at the post-convention banquet included Mayor Philip Givens, "Mr. Hockey" W. H. Hewitt and the presidents and other officials of the various hockey organizations.

During the business session the convention approved the change of the lowest classification from "squirt" to novice . . . also that any novice player can play for a peewee team in the same town.

It defeated an amendment whereby players playing for more than one team in B. C. and Ontario shall play for the lower team first and that team shall have priority claim.

It, sanctioned referees fees for OMHA playdowns other than semi-finals and finals as not more than, peewee $4.; bantam $5.; midget $6. and juvenile $7. In semi-finals and finals not more than, peewee, $5.; bantam $6.; Midget, $6. and juvenile, $8. plus 10 cents per mile one way, with two men in one car where possible.

It approved an addition to the helmet rule whereby all helmets shall have a chin strap properly fastened and defeated a move that bodychecking at centre ice be allowed in the bantam "A" division only.

It ruled out of order an effort to have teams in the immediate vicinity of metropolitan area of Toronto be allowed to enter teams in the Toronto Hockey League in age groups below peewee for which the OMHA does not provide competition.

The executive went into its second term of office with no changes. President Albert Watkins, first vice Doug Patterson, Stirling, second vice, Stan Stokes; third vice Gordon Howes, secretary-treasurer Gary McLeod and registrar Vern McCallum will carry on in their various capacities.

W. Berrell, Lloyd Davidson, Jim Kinkley, Albert Moore, Wes Oswald and John Roxburgh Jr., were re-elected to executive office. Ron Smith of Galt is the only new member, defeating George Hazlett, Newmarket and Leo Jefferies of Gananoque in the election.

Goaltenders Outstanding ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Wings Win Another; Habs Lose Pair

By TED BLACKMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

National Hockey League players are earning an average salary of $14,868 this season and the league's goaltenders must be convinced they're worth every cent.

Four games were played during the weekend and in every contest the goalie on the winning team was the difference:

—Chicago's Glenn Hall, who kicked out 47 shots as the Black Hawks defeated Montreal Canadiens 3-1 Saturday night.

—New York's Jacques Plante, who turned in a 27-save shut-out to anchor the Rangers 1-0 win over Toronto Maple Leafs Saturday night.

—Boston's Ed Johnston, target of 43 shots in the Bruins 3-3 victory over Chicago Black Hawks Sunday night.

—Detroit's Roger Crozier, who continued his selfish streak by allowing Montreal Canadiens just one goal on 26 shots during the last two periods of the Red Wings 2-1 victory Sunday night.

The results increased Detroit's point-total to three points over the pack. Further more, the Red Wings have played at least one game less than the other five clubs.

HALL WAS SUPERB

Hall was nothing short of superb as he frustrated the Canadiens and a Forum crowd of 15,243 with his acrobatics, kicking out 19 shots in the first period alone and holding the Habs scoreless until Bobby Rousseau ruined his shutout bid late in the finals.

Kenny Wharram ended a scoreless duel at 17:50 of the second period by casually deflecting a passout from Dan Mikita past Montreal goalie Charlie Hodge. Wharram's three goals have all been scored on Forum ice.

Youngsters Phil Esposito and Chico Maki added clinchers in the wide-open third period as Montreal outshot the Hawks 16-14. Rousseau finally proved Hall wasn't invincible when he slapped home Claude Larose's pass at 15:18.

Plante, summoned from the minors to replace an injured Marcel Pelle, displayed his form of old in a game that was still in doubt up to the final second. Camille Henry got the game's only goal at 19:10 of the second period while Toronto's Kent Douglas was penalized for slashing.

Plante turned in several key saves and came up with his best of the night when Don McKenney, as the Leafs pressed with six attackers during the dying seconds.

"I was just lucky on that shot," said Plante, who, driven across the net to make a spectacular save. "It was a desperate save. I saw it at the last minute and shot across. The puck hit my fingers."

The Rangers now have to decide whether Plante goes back to Baltimore when Pelle returns.

"He brought clothes for only one game," he explained. "That's all they told me."

The Bruins erupted for three unanswered goals in the second period to score their second victory of the season, both over Chicago.

The leaders:

N.H.L. Scoring Statistics

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago's Bobby Hull earned two assists during the weekend to move into second place in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Hull's output moved him past Toronto's Frank Mahovlich and gave him a total of 13 points on eight goals and five assists. Chicago's Stan Mikita picked up one point to maintain his hold on first place with 14 points.

Centre Norm Ullman of Detroit made the biggest jump in the last week's action, picking up seven points to move into a two-way tie with Mahovlich for second spot in the Eastern Division of Toronto at 10 points.

The leaders:

	G.	A.	PTS.
Mikita, Chicago	8	6	14
Hull, Chicago	8	5	13
Ullman, Detroit	4	6	10
Mahovlich, Tor.	4	6	10
Delvecchio, Det.	4	5	9
Douglas, Toronto	4	5	9

Dean Prentice tallied twice and Johnny Bucyk added a third as Boston swept into a 3-0 lead before 13,381 home fans. Then Johnston blocked the door as the Hawks rallied in the third.

Matt Ravlich and Elmer Vasko knocked rookie Stan Mikita of the third as the Hawks poured on the pressure. But Johnston came up with 15 saves, stopping Stan Mikita's last effort with one second left.

WEATHERED BLITZ

The red-hot Wings got goals from Parker MacDonald and and Norm Ullman in the first period and then weathered the Montreal blitz after Claude Provost narrowed the margin in the second.

Crozier faced only two shots in the opening period, out made 12 saves in the middle frame and 13 in the closing 20 minutes.

The victory, before 14 463 Detroit fans, extended Detroit's unbeaten string to eight games After losing their first two games, the Wings have won seven and tied one of their last eight.

The Wings are three points in front of Toronto and Montreal tied for second with 14 points, and four more than Chicago and New York, locked at 11 points apiece. Boston is creeping up from behind with five.

The schedule resumes Tuesday with a single contest, Detroit at Boston.

Rough Riders Reach Finals Easily

Whip Als 27-0

By BEN WARD

DEFENSIVE PLAY — Two Ottawa Rough Riders, Ed Ulmer (23) and Larry deGraw, reach to intercept a pass from Montreal quarterback George Bork. The pass is intended for George Dixon, with back to camera. The sudden-death semi-final game between Ottawa and Montreal was played in Ottawa Saturday. (CP Wirephoto)

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders settled down to a week of heavy training after they shelled Montreal Alouettes 27-0 Saturday in the Eastern Football Conference sudden death semi-final.

Riders hardly had to work up a sweat in sidelining the Alouettes who turned in one of the weakest offensive performances seen on a Canadian football field this year.

They face a far different assignment next Saturday when they meet the Hamilton Tiger-Cats here in the opener of the two-game total-points final that will decide the east's Grey Cup entry. Second game of the set is at Hamilton Nov. 21 and the Grey Cup is at Toronto Nov. 28.

Saturday's game was a lop-sided affair all the way Riders crunched to a touchdown in 11 plays the first time they got the ball and piled up a 22-0 lead by half-time.

ALS NO THREAT

Alouettes didn't have the ball on Ottawa's end of the field until the third quarter and in the entire game had only two plays inside the Ottawa 50-yard line The only time they had any thing close to a threat going, Riders intercepted a pass to put out the spark.

End Ted Watkins got a touchdown on a 23-yard pass from quarterback Russ Jackson; halfback Dave Thelen scampered 47 yards for another, and Jackson plunged from the one-yard line for the third.

Moe Racine kicked three converts and a field goal and Ed Ulmer got three sings with towering punts.

After the game Alouette players were generally disgusted.

"It was the worst game we've played all year," said quarterback George Bork. Most of the 18,214 fans were in agreement

Coach Jim Trimble, who had talked for a week about the "new look" of his Montreal offence, had no excuses.

"They beat us real soundly," he admitted.

Coach Frank Clair, elated at the way his Riders performed, called it "the best game we've come up with this season."

Riders piled up a net offensive total of 382 yards against Als—207 rushing and 155 passing. Als managed 140 yards rushing and 65 through the air.

Jackson completed seven of 13 passes for 115 yards and Bob Dyllkroch, who replaced him in the final quarter, clicked on three out of four for 40 yards. One Jackson pass was picked off.

Bork completed seven of 14 throws for 58 yards; Jim McKean two out of seven for 36 and Jerry Fields had his only throw intercepted.

Riders made six pass interceptions, Dyllkroch and Ulmer each taking two for more yardage than any Montreal passer-receiver could manage in the game.

Montreal's defensive unit gave Jackson plenty of trouble smothering the Ottawa ace six times for a total loss of 49 yards. End John Baker got him four of those times.

Senior Title To Argos

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It seemed like an early winter for Northern Ontario Sunday as Toronto East York Argonauts snowed North Bay Trappers 56-7 in North Bay to win their second straight All-Ontario senior football championship and London Lords crushed Sudbury Hardrocks 57-6 in the All-Ontario Senior B championship.

Argo quarterback Gord McTaggert, Gerry Burrows and fullback Ray Williams led the touchdown parade with two each. Casper Pohl and Pete Warren also scored touchdowns and George Stringer nailed Trapper-Cat quarterback Butch Dupuis in his end zone for an East York safety touch. Doak Walker kicked six converts.

John Pelletier crashed over from the East York one-yard line for the North Bay touchdown with Dupuis passing to Joe Moylan for the convert.

At London, quarterback Rich Hawkins riddled the Sudbury secondary for 488 yards in the air. Tom McKenzie and Jack Gardiner scored three London touchdowns apiece with others going to Tom Whealy, Hawkins and Dalt Coleman. Jim Murphy added two converts and single.

Sudbury's only touchdown came on a spectacular 98-yard kickoff return late in the first quarter by Dave Morris.

BCI Drops One-Point Thriller

By DAVID TEMPLER

Saturday afternoon at the Belleville Fairgrounds, Peterborough C. I. edged B.C.I. 27-26 in the COSSA semi-finals. Peterborough will now travel to Oshawa on Wednesday to battle for the Senior A Central Ontario Championship.

Roger Sage led the P.C.I. squad to victory by rushing 116 yards in 19 carries to collect one touchdown himself and set up two others. He also kicked a convert and threw a touchdown pass.

P.C.I. started off quickly after the kickoff. A B.C.I. offside penalty gave Peterborough a first down on Belleville's 53-yard line. Doug Hiram dashed 9½ yards around the right end and Sage picked up the first on the 38. In two carries Sage went to the 17 where a beautiful fake to the fullback by quarterback Richard Playford gave Hiram his chance to sweep around the end for the first score in the game.

Allan Mott returned the kick-off to B.C.I.'s 27. The next play Bill Hallam dropped a long pass in Mott's arms. Mott sprinted to the Peterborough 17 before being brought down by Tom LaBranche. But Belleville couldn't capitalize on their position. Lyn Stabler threw Terry Wellsley for a 9-yard loss and a screen pass lost two more yards. Trying for the rouge, Ron Walsh punted into the end zone but Bill Moebus made a return to the four and the B.C.I. drive was stopped.

Finding no running room, Richard Playford quick kicked and the Collegians started again from the 32. Hallam hit Mott on the 19-yard line. A pitchout to Kirk Lightfoot advanced the ball to the three. With a first down and goal to go, Hallam went up centre but after the final down P.C.I. had the ball on their own six-inch stripe.

On the next play, P.C.I.'s Doug Hiram fumbled and Allan Mott recovered. Terry Wellsley went around the right end to tie the score. The toe of Doug Purcell gave BCI a single point advantage in the first quarter.

In the second quarter a pass interference penalty gave B.C.I. a first down on the 36 yard line. Lightfoot carried on the draw to the 20. Hallam fired a pass to Murray Swan on the four. Hallam went over on the keeper to give B.C.I. a 13-6 margin. The convert was unsuccessful.

Later a 15-yard roughing penalty put P.C.I. in position for a quick kick. Keith Blewett hit Mott for the rouge in the end zone.

With less than three minutes left in the half, P.C.I. culminated a drive in the end zone from Sage. Sage kicked the convert to put P.C.I. in the lead 14-13.

B.C.I. took over on the 28 after the kick-off. Ron Walsh took the direct centre, found daylight and tore 38 yards for a T.D. Doug Purcell converted. Gary Cracknell went with him supplying two key blocks.

Later in the third period P.C.I. marched from the 50 in nine plays to allow quarterback Playford to dive from the one for the major, that made the score 21-20.

With six minutes remaining in the final quarter, Roger Sage climaxed a spectacular series of going by going from the three to score the touchdown.

Ron Walsh received the kick-off and with a beautiful piece of strategy quick-kicked the ball over the heads of the oncoming Peterborough players.

Jim Mairs, rushing down field, smared the ball as it careened off a Peterborough player's hands and B.C.I. took over on the 18-yard line.

A determined Collegian line battered a hole for Lightfoot to dash up the centre for five yards. Hallam found Mott in the end zone to bring the game within reach. A bad snap blackened B.C.I's hopes as the convert missed and P.C.I. still led 27-26.

Peterborough stalled the clock for the last three minutes to preserve the game.

P.C.I.'s comparatively weighty linemen gave them the edge in endruns, off tackles and quarterback bucks, but the B.C.I'S speed and versatility almost made up the difference. This was a hard fought thriller right to the end, enjoyed by a good crowd.

The three-year-old gelding captured the feature race in a rapid 207 3/5 over a track made dull by a drizzling rain. He had been out of action since finishing fifth in a stakes event here Oct. 20.

He paid $6.20 for the win and boosted his earnings to $9,745 for the season.

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Sir Herbert turned a strong stretch drive into a 2½-length victory Saturday to tie the featured $3,825 Branford Stakes at Garden City Raceway and give owner William Herbert his third stakes victory in a week.

Running fourth entering the back stretch, six Herbert pulled away from the 13-horse field to win over Johnny Laird, owned and driven by Clure Atchderki of Brampton, and Ozark Peter, from Bev Maguire's London stable.

Sir Herbert, Canadian trotter of the year in 1963, raised her season's earnings to $5,319.

Saturday's attendance of 4,683 was four short of opening night's record at the new raceway. However, the pari-mutue handle of $182,013 was a record and the ninth race set a single-race mark of $33,600.

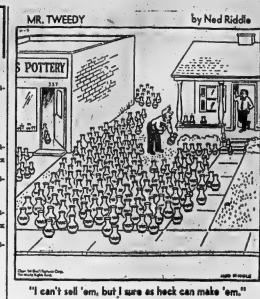
Toronto Lad Ends U. S. Win String

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Day, 18-year-old Toronto rider, won the Royal Winter Fair Challenge Trophy test Sunday night and in the process broke a streak of seven international victories by the United States in the National Horse Show.

A crowd of about 10,000 in Madison Square Garden watched Day—making his first tour with the Canadian international squad—pilot Sir Dunchee to a faultless journey over 11 fences in 59.3 seconds.

Until Day, who won the opening event of the horse show last Tuesday, got on the course, Bill Steinkraus, U.S. captain, had it all wrapped up. Steinkraus, first out with Sinjon, was faultless in 42.2.

One by one, the other riders went down until only Day remained. He went all out knowing a slow but clean ride would be worthless.



IS THIRD

Lieut. Carlos A. Marcelli of Argentina was third with a clocking of 42.8 on a clean ride, and Tom Gayford, Canadian was fourth. He didn't have a fault on Maplehurst and was timed in 49.7.

"It was luck," said Day, who was the leading rider in the Pennsylvania National Show in Harrisburg last week. "I really pushed him and he made it. If I had bad luck, I would have hit every fence."

Saturday night, Kathy Kusner of the U.S. team pushed into the lead for the individual championship by winning the Grand Prix of North America jumping event before a crowd of 14,000.

Day was fourth on Comet.

"I can't sell 'em, but I sure as heck can make 'em."

At Omaha, Jean-Guy Morissette got his third shutout of the season, making 18 saves.

Defenseman Noel Picard scored twice to pace the Knights.

OPENS TONIGHT
SEAN CONNERY

Connery, of course, loves the James Bond character as well as anybody else. However, he says, he doesn't want to be "typed" as the smug private eye to the detriment of his dramatic career. That's why he has a clause in his contract with the James Bond producers which permits him to accept other roles and his part in "Woman of Straw" is one of these.

Connery broke into show business when a dancer in a British stock company playing "South Pacific" injured his foot in London at a time when Connery happened to be visiting friends there. He was offered the role, learned to dance in 48 hours, and got the job. From this he went into lesser British movies where he was "discovered" by the producers of the Ian Fleming stories who had just bought the film rights to them.

"Woman of Straw" in color, opening tonight, was produced by Michael Relph and directed by Basil Dearden.

On the same program "The Raiders of Leyte Gulf, General MacArthur said: "I shall return. The Raiders spearheaded this historic attack at Leyte Gulf.

Both attractions are first showings. One complete show starts at 7.20. "The Raiders of Leyte Gulf" at 7.20; "Woman of Straw" at 9.10 p.m.

$250 FEE FOR BEAR — Charlie the bear kisses his manager and handler, Johnny Welde, after playing in a segment of children's TV series. The 500-pound black Alaska bear, whose off-stage name is Carol, was acting the part of a boxer in the "Forest Rangers" that will be shown on both the English and French networks in Canada. Charlie, at a fee of $250 a day, finally after eight hours of frustrating cajolery did as the script required. (CP Photo)

No Biz Like Show Biz - Even for a Bear

By DAVID QUINTNER

KLEINBURG, Ont. (CP)—Charlie was the ungainliest actor on the set.

His enormous girth—60 inches around the waistband of his ever grimy shorts — and his awkward posturing before the cameras were the director's despair.

But the film crew was patient. Charlie, at a fee of $250 a day, was acting the part of a boxer. Since early morning, and after several changes of pants, the director and Charlie's manager had tried to make him understand his role—he was to rush over to his opponent knock him down and then dash from the ring.

Just after 4 p.m., after eight hours of frustrating cajolery, Charlie did as the script required. The shivering actors, huddling beneath blankets and topcoats in the near freezing weather, sent up a cheer of relief.

Charlie was unmoved by the roar of approval. It had been a long, hard day for him too.

But then, snowbusiness is particularly hard on a bear.

This black Alaska bear, 500 pounds of passive brawn, had been reared in the atmosphere of stage lights, bustling technicians and applauding crowds. And here, on location, his efforts were but one part of a TV series for children that is being shot at this combined indoor-outdoor film site, 20 miles northwest of Toronto.

AIDED BY RCMP

Directed by Ted Holliday, this was a segment of the Forest Rangers series—shown on both the English and French CBC networks in Canada and also seen in Britain and the U.S.

Forest Rangers has received an approving nod from the federal and Ontario departments of lands and forests and the RCMP, and these agencies offer their expert guidance to the show's four writers who present life at Indian River, a fictional northern Canadian settlement.

Working with Charlie was not altogether a novel experience for Holliday and his team. During the last two years—the present season is in the second season on the air—they have employed such creatures as a tame moose—a regular on the show—and a rattlesnake, their most delicately handled cast.

On Charlie's day before the cameras, costs soared beyond the usual $7,000 daily minimum expenditure needed to keep the film crew, actors, makeup and property personnel and the ever - present coffee-wagon, in operation.

But no other bear in North America would have done as well.

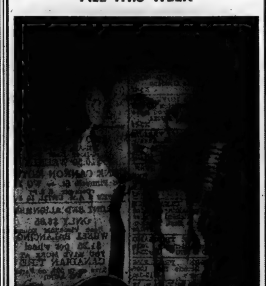
Charlie, whose off-stage name is Carol, has been seen by millions in such movies as The Incredible Journey, The Greatest Show on Earth and Man's Favorite Sport and on TV in such programs as The Ed Sullivan Show and The Steve Allen Show.

With Carol wherever he goes is his manager and handler, Johnny Welde, a Norwegian-born circus high-wire artist who has reared Carol since he was a six-months old cub.

TEAM INSEPARABLE

Where Charlie acts, Johnny acts. One is never hired without the other, and they have toured the U.S., Canada and Central America together for more than eight years.

So much in demand have man and beast been, that Johnny hasn't seen his Tampa, Fla., home for three years, and now his wife travels with them both to keep the family together.



The driving force behind Forest Rangers is attractive, blonde Maidie Samuels, a former TV personality in her own right who now heads her own company, ASP Productions, from her office above the sound stage at Kleinburg.

She says Forest Rangers is a $2,500,000 enterprise that is beginning to earn money after its first season enabled it to repay bank loans; that it is the most popular show on Canadian TV in its time slot; and that it is the nucleus of what she "is certain" will become a major television industry in Ontario.

Already slated for production in March is a series of hour-long TV programs to be filmed along the entire length of the St. Lawrence Seaway, a series already sold to and backed by British interests.

Dramatic Series Promises To Be Welcome Addition

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—John W. Davis won the U.S. Democratic presidential nomination on the 103rd ballot in 1924, and Oscar W. Underwood not only lost the presidential bid but also failed to be returned to the Senate.

He lost because he resolutely turned his back on the Ku Klux Klan, whose votes controlled the nomination.

That was the story of NBC's Profiles in Courage series in its premiere Sunday night. Based on the best-selling book written by John F. Kennedy, it promises to be an intelligent and most entertaining addition to a season notably lacking in interesting dramatic fare.

Underwood's opposition to the Klan was partly strategy to eliminate a rival, William G. McAdoo, but more than that, it was personal conviction. The Klan came when Underwood was offered the votes of delegates controlled by the Klan—if he would promise not to make the organization a campaign issue.

"I think I'll go out and get some fresh air," said Underwood.

Sidney Blackmer as Senator Underwood of Alabama, played with dignity and, blessedly, without heroics.

With the program coming to a close in the end of the most recent U.S. presidential race, some of the most interesting scenes were colorful sidebars suggesting how the panoply of politics has changed, but the basic problems remain.

All in all, it was an auspicious start.

Recommended tonight: The Jonathan Winters Show, NBC, 9-10—Mickey Rooney and Connie Francis are guests in the first of six specials starring the comedian.

COMEDIAN NOW RANCHER

CAMARILLO, Calif. (AP)—Comedian Danny Kaye is the new boss of a 270-acre spread near Camarillo, it was disclosed Friday. The $700,000 purchase of the Fassbauer ranch was filed at the Ventura County recorder's office.

Lawyer Seeking Releases

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg lawyer said Sunday he had been hired by the parents of two teen-agers to work for the boys' release from two Winnipeg junior hockey clubs, who tied them up under a draft system.

Lawyer Bruce Forrester told The Canadian Press Bill Fraser, 16, and Gerald Forgie, 16, had been denied permission by the clubs to play for Flin Flon, Man., in the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League.

The players are graduates of the Greater Winnipeg Minor Hockey Association and had been drafted by two Winnipeg junior Hockey League clubs which have agreements with Flin Flon of the National Hockey League.

All four clubs in the MJHL are from Winnipeg. The boys' parents have Forgie and the Monarchs have Fraser. Boston also has an agreement with a third club in the loop and New York the fourth.

APPEAL TO MAHA

Parents of both players appealed to the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association recently to allow the transfer to Flin Flon, but the registration committee denied the request.

Forrester said he had written to commissioner Maha and Bill (Bob) Alexander challenging the decision on the grounds that a committee member was Bill Addison, manager of the Braves, who has a personal interest in the case. Forrester said he is also exploring the possibility of other legal action.

He said no decision had been made whether to test the validity of the system that allows Manitoba junior clubs to draft players from the minor hockey association here.

Parents of both boys involved lodged protests against the system in letters published Saturday in the Winnipeg Free Press.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (AP)—Wheatley Stable's Queen Empress won the $168,000 Gardenia at Cherry Hill, N.J., Saturday in a tight three-horse finish and virtually clinched the 1964 two-year-old filly championship at Garden State Park.

Ridden by Bill Shoemaker, Queen Empress survived a foul claim by Shoemaker on the chief rival for juvenile honors, Marshua, handled by the veteran Eddie Arcaro, and signed Chambers contended that Shoemaker interfered with Marshua with a quarter mile to go as Queen Empress, her stablemate, Discipline, and Marshua charged for the wire noses apart. But the stewards disallowed the claim.

Queen Empress ran the 1 1-16 miles in the fair time of 1:46 and won by a neck over Marshua, who just got up to take second money by a nose over Discipline.

HAS EARNED $319,262

Queen Empress earned $112,854 for owner Mrs. H. C. Phipps Ogden, boosting her total earnings to $319,262.

The entry of Queen Empress and Discipline cost $4,000 each, and $2,460 in the mutuels. Marshua returned $4 and $3.

At New York's Aqueduct, Steeple Jill, a consistent money earner but never winner of a stake, came from behind for a front-running victory in the $50,100 Ladies' Handicap.

The three-year-old hit the end of 1¼ miles with 3¼ lengths to spare over Lea Rica. Miss Dungee Lady, an 88-to-1 shot.

T. S. Nichols' Tona, the second choice, trailed by another three lengths for third money.

Steeple Jill, ridden by Johnny Rotz, was the fifth of the 7-year-old mare's 10 starts. She earned $30,415 for her third victory in nine 1964 starts.

Although never winner of a stake the Widener miss went off the third choice of the crowd at 40.50. She paid $13.20, $6 and $5.20. Dupage Lady returned $5.80 in the shopping mall at $50.70 and $19 while Tona was $4.20 to show.

TORONTO (CP) — Beeclift Point, leading money-winning horse in Western Canada this season, won his first race in Ontario Saturday as the meet closed with a rush to take the $13,975 Sandown Stakes at Greenwood Raceway.

With Frank Inda in the saddle, the four-year-old colt owned by R. Rudi Lawson of Calgary had to come to the extreme outside of eight other horses.

Doolin Point moved up to lead and returned $73.30, $25.60 and $8.30 to his few backers in the $2,000 event. Lawson's Bonnie Point could manage only a fifth place finish.

Beeclift Calita was second by a head and Dr. Giddings was third, a half -length further back.

Opponents Line Up

Chuvalo Ready For ? - ?

HULL, Que. (CP) — It's fight night tonight for Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo and one of four possible opponents, three of whom are clamoring to get into the ring.

Chuvalo, the ham-fisted Toronto slugger ranked fourth among world heavyweight contenders, was originally signed to meet unranked Don Warner of Philadelphia in a 10-rounder at the Hull Arena.

But early Sunday night Warner, who dropped a disputed decision to now-champion Cassius Clay during his career, hadn't shown up. His telephoned promoter Jean Belleau to say he was driving here and would be on hand for today's 2 p.m. EST weigh-in.

Last Thursday, when Warner missed his' first appointment here, Belleau sent out for a replacement just in case Warner backed out entirely. He lined up Wendell Newton, 22, of New Orleans, who is just back from a European fight tour.

Sunday Newton blew in along with two more leading boxers who heard of Belleau's problem and came up on their own to seek a meeting with Chuvalo. They are Calvin Butler of Cleveland, who once fought Sonny Liston, and Johnny Gardner of Toronto, who met Chuvalo once before and was knocked cold.

THERE'LL BE FIGHTING

Belleau said Sunday night: "There'll be a fight all right, but we're not sure who'll be in the fighting. It will be Warner if he shows up, otherwise Newton or Butler in that order."

Chuvalo, obviously angry at the whole situation, said he'll be ready to take on one or all of them.

The champ wants Warner most of all because the Philadelphian was ranked a few years ago and has fought a lot of name boxers. Warner's record is 32 wins, including 12 knockouts, and 10 losses.

Chuvalo is seeking to battle his way to a world title fight and is at a peak with 309 pounds after intensive training. He won his last bout month against New Yorker Doug Jones and is hoping for a fight a month until he gets a crack at Floyd Patterson, Liston or Clay.

Bears Get Weekend Win, Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hershey Bears, a distant second place behind Quebec Aces in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League, cut the distance a trifle during the weekend by picking up a win and a tie—the best showing in the two days of the season.

The Bears tied Baltimore Clippers 3-3 Saturday night and beat Buffalo Bisons 7-3 Sunday. Quebec won its only game, a 5-0 shellacking of third place Springfield Indians, for the 12th victory in 14 starts.

The Western Division leader Rochester Americans, could salvage only a single point from two games, a 4-4 scoreless overtime tie with Buffalo Saturday night and dropping a 3-1 decision to Pittsburgh the next night.

Providence Reds deteriorated to the cellar with Springfield downed Pittsburgh Hornets 7-1 in other Saturday action. Reds clinched a 5-4 decision from Providence in overtime in the other game

STANDINGS UNCHANGED

The weekend action left the standings unchanged, with Springfield, Providence and Baltimore running third, fourth and fifth respectively in the Eastern Division, and Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Cleveland coming behind Rochester in the western section.

Bills Still Undefeated

Colts, Browns Continue Pace

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

While Baltimore Colts and Cleveland Browns slam their way toward a National Football League playoff meeting, Buffalo Bills continue to battle every team that stands before them in the American League.

For the three teams, Sunday was a day like just about every other Sunday — Baltimore battered Chicago Bears 38-14 for their eighth straight victory, Cleveland hammered Washington Redskins 34-24 and Buffalo whipped New York Jets 20-7 for their ninth straight win in as many games.

Bills are the only undefeated team in U.S. pro football so far this season.

It was a day for substitute quarterbacks in the AFL as Daryle Lamonica came off the bench to pitch the Bills to victory while former Toronto Argonaut Tobin Rote performed a similar service for San Diego Chargers in their 31-20 win over Oakland Raiders. Rookie Pete Beathard carried Kansas City Chiefs to a 42-7 romp over Oakland Raiders.

Quarterback Bart Starr put on an unusual running display Sunday as Green Bay Packers swept to a 30-7 victory over Detroit Lions in the NFL while St. Louis Cardinals edged Pittsburgh Steelers 34-30, Dallas Cowboys dumped New York Giants 31-20, Los Angeles Rams defeated Philadelphia Eagles 30-10 and Minnesota Vikings defeated San Francisco 49ers 24-7.

Baltimore now holds a 7½ game lead over Los Angeles and Detroit in the NFL's Western Division while Cleveland leads the Eastern Division by two games.

Lamonica directed the Bills to their uphill decision over New York before a record AFL crowd of 60,300 at Shea Stadium.

He passed 80 yards to Glenn Bass for a touchdown and set up two field goals by Pete Gogolak, enabling the Bills to hold their 2½-game Eastern Division lead. Cookie Gilchrist, another former Toronto Argonaut, broke loose on a 67-yard scoring jaunt in the last minute of the game.

Starr's running had something to do with the Green Bay triumph as the veteran passer picked apart the league's toughest line for 40 yards in three carries. Two of those dashes helped Green Bay to a touchdown the first time it had the ball.

Paul Hornung contributed three field goals and Starr a touchdown pass before Detroit finally scored with nine seconds left on Milt Plum's 23-yard pass to Gail Cogdill.

The Colts, who mauled the Bears 52-0 earlier in the season, tallied 16 points before Chicago scored. Three field goals by Lou Michaels followed a two-yard touchdown smash by Lenny Moore. That score gave Moore an NFL record of 13 consecutive games in which he has scored a touchdown.

Cleveland's Jimmy Brown recorded his 100th touchdown and passed for another. Sonny Jurgensen tossed three scoring passes for Washington, two to Bobby Mitchell.

Substitute Bill Nelsen threw two Pittsburgh touchdown aerials in the fourth quarter, but St. Louis already had built an imposing lead on two scoring passes by Charley Johnson and Dale Meinert's 18-yard touchdown run with an intercepted pass.

New York lost the ball five times on pass interceptions and fumbles and the Cowboys' Don Meredith threw three touchdown passes, two to Frank Clarke.

Los Angeles moved into a tie with the Lions by holding Philadelphia to one touchdown—King Hill's 36-yard pass to Ollie Matson. Les Josephson set up the Rams' first score with 75-yard run to the Eagle 11.

Tommy Mason scored Minnesota's first touchdown on a 16-yard pass from Fran Tarkenton after Rip Hawkins recovered a Gloer fumble by Dave Parks deep in San Francisco territory.

Player Uses But: End On Referee

NORANDA Que. (CP) — Norman Coates, a referee who was struck in the abdomen by the butt end of a hockey stick wielded by a player who had just received a game misconduct penalty, is undergoing precautionary tests for possible internal injuries.

His doctor said Saturday no signs of serious injuries had yet been found. Hospital officials described the condition as satisfactory.

Coates, a referee for the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, was struck and knocked unconscious during a game Wednesday night by Jean-Guy Thibault of Noranda Aiouettes.

The NOHA has yet to rule on whether action will be taken against Thibault, who faces possible suspension.

Lancaster Sparks Riders

Last-Quarter Eruption Stumps Stamps

BY RON MacDONALD

REGINA (CP)—Saskatchewan Roughriders scored four last-quarter touchdowns Saturday against Calgary Stampeders and carry a nine-point wage into tonight's second game of the two-game total point Western Football Conference semi-final series.

The second game starts in Calgary at 10 p.m. EST with the Roughriders ahead 34-25. It will be televised on the CTV national network.

Rider quarterback Ron Lancaster, playing with a plastic protective vest over a rib injury, was cheered constantly by 14,462 Regina fans as he tossed three touchdown passes in the final 15 minutes and engineered the fourth last-quarter touchdown.

Lancaster completed a fourth touchdown pass in the third quarter and gained a total of 276 yards through the air on 28 completions in 35 pass attempts.

Riders were hampered by penalties at crucial stages in the first 45 minutes of the game and trailed 7-0 after the first quarter, 14-1 after the second quarter and 24-8 entering the final 15 minutes.

Fullback George Reed scored two touchdowns for Saskatchewan and halfback Ed Buchanan, flanker Hugh Campbell and end Jim Worden got one each. Tackle Reg Watchorn got three converts and a single on a missed field goal in the second quarter.

Calgary quarterback Eagle Day and halfbacks Ted Wood and Jim Dillard got a touchdown each. Larry Robinson kicked three converts and a field goal and Jim Furlong booted a single on a towering punt from the centre stripe in the fourth quarter.

Calgary head coach Bobby Dobbs said after the game: "Any time an opposing quarterback hits for 28 of 35 attempts, you have to say he's picking your defensive unit apart. He knew Lancaster would still be hurting from that rib injury but he played a great game despite it."

Saskatchewan head coach Bob Shaw said he wasn't worried in the first three quarters—"I was just burned up." He said in the first part of the game his players were crippling themselves with penalties and poor execution of plays.

Shaw said Riders' nine-point bulge was "better than being behind 26 points."

Last year the Roughriders went into the second game of the semi-final series 28 points behind Stampeders, but with an incredible comeback won the series by one point.

Reed was the key man in the Roughriders offence, picking up 120 yards on seven pass receptions and another 41 yards in five carries.

Calgary fullback Lovell Coleman went 44 yards in 11 carries and another 42 yards on five passes. Woods gained 91 yards on 23 of them on a breakaway touchdown run—in six carries.

DEFENDING CHAMPS WIN

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — St. James Rams broke loose for 18 points in the fourth quarter to defeat Port Arthur Mustangs 26-19 in a Western Canada senior football sudden-death semi-final Sunday. The victory put the defending Canadian champion Rams into the western final against Edmonton Prospectors. Edmonton beat Vancouver Millionaires 2-0 in the other semi-final Sunday.

Totems All Alone

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seattle Totems moved into sole possession of first place in the Western Hockey League during the weekend without scoring a goal.

Shut out 2-0 Saturday night in Victoria, Seattle held Los Angeles Blades to a scoreless overtime tie Sunday to take a one-point lead over second place Portland Buckaroos.

Portland had edged into a first-place tie with Seattle by taking a 5-4 overtime win from Lo. Angeles Saturday night.

In other action Sunday Vancouver Canucks, led by Bev Bell's two third-period goals, defeated San Francisco Seals 4-3 to move into third place—a point ahead of Los Angeles.

JAILED IN SON'S DEATH

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Wilson T. Turner, 37, has been sentenced to five years in prison for the traffic death of his 12-year-old son, Randy.

Orr Puts Generals On Top

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sixteen-year-old Bobby Orr, star defenceman for Oshawa Generals, helped his team to an important pair of victories over Montreal Junior Canadiens during the weekend and took a healthy step toward breaking his own scoring record.

Orr, who still has four years of junior hockey to play, counted twice when the Generals beat Montreal 4-3 in a game played at Kingston Saturday night, and got the winning goal in a 3-2 decision the next night at Montreal.

The pair of victories pushed Oshawa into first place in the league, two points up on Niagara Falls Flyers and Toronto Marlboros. Last season, the Flyers were humiliated 3-0 by the tail-end Kitchener Rangers while Toronto edged Peterborough Petes 4-3, both in Sunday games. In other Sunday action, Hamilton Black Hawks barely held Hamilton Red Wings third-period attack for a 4-3 decision.

Peterborough and St. Catharines now are tied for fourth place with nine points each, seven back of Toronto and Niagara Falls. Montreal has seven points, one more than Kitchener. Hamilton is last with five.

Orr, who set a record for defencemen in the league last year with 30 goals, now has 10 goals in 12 games so far this season.

SCORES TWICE

At Kingston, Orr counted in the first and third periods, matching Montreal goals in those frames by Craig Patrick and Mike Hyndman. Jim Blair and Ron Buchanan scored two unanswered tallies in the second.

The next night in Montreal, Orr got credit for a goal that came when his pass from behind the net was knocked in by Montreal goalie Rocky Farr early in the third. Earlier Canadiens defenceman Serge Savard had deflected a shot by Oshawa centre Jim Booth that went in for another goal, and Booth scored a legitimate counter in the first. Rene Drolet got both Canadiens goals.

In Toronto, the Petes held the edge in play out but cut on the scoring. Barry Watson counted twice and Mike Corrigan and Jack Chipchase once each for Marlboros. Don Grant had a pair for Peterborough, with Andre Lacroix getting the other.

At St. Catharines, the Black Hawks had built up a 4-0 lead by the five-minute mark of the third period, on a three-goal performance by right winger Ken Hodge, and Brian McDonald's single. Hamilton fired 22 shots on St. Catharines goalie Bob Taylor in the last period, with shots by Peter Mahovlich, Fred Speck and Jim Mair eluding him before time ran out.

The game at Kitchener saw a scoreless first period. But Ken Gratton and Bob Jones sent the Rangers ahead in the second and Pete Brennan added another in the third. It was the first shutout of the season for Kitchener goalie John Voss, who stopped 27 shots.

Tuesday night, St. Catharines is at Oshawa and Toronto at Niagara Falls.

In the final championship match, Warner defeated Art Burns of Scarborough 12-6.

More than 591,000 Canadian automobile owners pay too much for gasoline.

They're people with cars designed for medium-octane gasolines. Up to now they have been buying the available top-rated premiums and, since their cars can't use all of that power, they've been wasting octane and money.

Now, BP makes better sense with horsepower by adding two new Super gasolines in the medium-octane, medium-price range. Perhaps one of them is just right for your car.

Check the recommendations at a BP station, then make the switch from top-priced gasolines and save 2¢, even 4¢ per gallon . . . enough to buy up to 900 extra miles of driving in a year.

Hints for Winter Servicing

By EUGENE B. MILNOR

The battery which served your car so adequately during the warm months may not be near strong enough to shoulder the burdens imposed by near zero temperatures. Trying to squeeze an extra few weeks or months service from a weak battery only invites unnecessary headaches and expense — especially if your car is an automatic transmission model which cannot be push-started.

The same advice applies to spark plugs. Although they may not be fouled, eroded, or oil-gapped enough to prevent engine operation, they may be incapable of furnishing the hot, fat spark needed for fast starts on frigid mornings.

The manifold heat control valve is another winter trouble maker. If it sticks in the open position, you'll probably never be aware of it during warm months. . .but in the winter, this condition will not only cause starting trouble, but the engine warmup period will be abnormally long, thus promoting excessive wear, sluggish operation and passenger discomfort.

J. L. writes: "At 30 m.p.h. or less, my engine oil light starts flickering. Could this be due to valve trouble?"

It can cause valve trouble. Evidently, oil pressure has dropped for some reason and you should have your mechanic find out why.

From T. C.: "My brother-in-law claims that the original brake linings on his '63 sedan are still in good condition after 32,000 miles. I say this is impossible. Please settle the argument."

It's possible with twice that mileage. Good driving judgment plus a lot of clear-road, long-distance driving can really stretch brake lining life.

D. B. writes: "If the pump-to-carburetor fuel line is disconnected and cleaned, yet very little gas comes through when the engine is cranked, isn't fuel pump trouble obvious?"

It is — if the tank-to-pump line isn't blocked or leaking.

From R. G.: "Here's a helpful hint. Unlike car door locks, garage door locks usually have no shield. To prevent lock freeze in winter, just keep a strip of adhesive or friction tape over the key opening."

There's an easier way. . .use a graphite lubricant. It can keep locks from freezing or free them when they do.

RAPS JEWS

TORONTO (CP) — The three branches of Judaism here are guilty of "more wilful and narrow - minded misunderstanding than those in any other place in North America," says Rabbi Gunther Plaut of Holy Blossom Temple. Rabbi Plaut's charge against the reform, conservative and orthodox branches of Toronto's Jewish community was made Friday night during a panel discussion following a sermon by Rev. J. A. (Jock) Davidson of Sydenham Street United Church, Kingston. It was the first time in years that a visiting Christian had preached in the synagogue.

Argentina: The Country Without A National Conscience

Though it's one of the world's great meat-producing countries, Argentina has been forced to ration steak as it battles runaway inflation and growing debt. Paul Kidd of the Hamilton Spectator, writing for The Canadian Press, explores the country's problems in this story.

By PAUL KIDD

BUENOS AIRES (CP) — Argentina has been described as a study in self-contempt.

It is an appraisal not without cause. The Argentines do, indeed, seem to hate themselves.

Recently, I was talking with an affable and loquacious Buenos Aires banker.

As we discussed Argentina's myriad political and economic woes, he suddenly launched a sneer-tinged attack against his nation and fellow-countrymen.

"There is a story," said the banker, "that when God made the world, He made Argentina first.

"After God had almost finished shaping earth, He has still contained beautiful mountains, fish-filled rivers, fertile land, rich pasturelands, dense forests, oil fields and a temperate climate.

"God placed them all at the bottom of South America.

"It seemed unfair, however, that any one country should have such an abundance of natural wealth and assets.

"So, to even things up, He populated the country with Argentines."

FRIEND, SOY YO'

My banker friend told the story against his comatriots—and, indirectly, against himself—with gleeful derision.

Rather than trying to hide the Argentines' character deficiencies, he was embellishing them.

In a sense, the story summed up the root cause of Argentina's troubles: the utter lack of national conscience and cohesion felt by the bulk of its 22,000,000 citizens.

Nowhere in Latin America is self-centredness so overt as in Argentina.

"Primero yo, yo," proclaims the Argentine. "I am first."

Argentina is a baffling place. It is filled with talented people and its literacy rate of more than 90 per cent is the highest in Latin America.

In its incredible pampas, the vast sweeping plains, the republic has one of the great natural treasures of the world.

Economically, Argentina reached the take - off point nearly a quarter-of-a-century ago.

Yet, to this day, it has not taken off.

The country continues to career between crises and seems to be going nowhere.

FEARS MILITARY

A year ago, Arturo Illia, a 63-year-old country doctor, was elected president following 18 months of military rule.

With the 113,000-man armed forces lurking in the background, ever ready to interfere in the political scheme of things Illia's grip has been a gentle one.

Meanwhile, the economy of this rich land of wheat and beef has been steadily deteriorating.

Zooming inflation has carried the cost of living upward by more than 30 per cent this year.

Runaway government spending and featherbedding are expected to leave the treasury with the highest debt in Argentine history, about $30 000,000 by the end of 1964.

The deep, rich grass of the pampas, and the cattle that graze there, should aware the Argentine that, whatever happens, he will always eat steak. But, this year, even steak is rationed.

With herds decimated by two years of drought, the beef industry is in bad shape. Although there are some 40,000,000 cattle on the pampas, it is not enough to meet both domestic and foreign demand, and cattlemen are holding back stock as they struggle to rebuild.

TWO MEATLESS DAYS

As a result, Monday and Tuesday have been decreed by law "meatless days."

On either of these days, it is not possible to find a giggle meat dish on the menu of any Buenos Aires restaurant, and any eating establishment violating the law faces a stiff fine.

Now, the Argentines are faced with the ignominy of importing beef from neighboring Uruguay and Paraguay for the first time in history.

That is not all. Argentina is finding it cheaper to import eggs from Ireland, potatoes from Peru and rice from Japan than to produce them at home.

In the midst of this economic mess, the government continues to prop a shaky peso as gold and foreign exchange reserves drop and piles of paper money mount.

Since the beginning of the year, the money supply has been going up at the rate of three per cent a month, with prices following suit.

The total debt, public and private, is now placed at more than $3,800,000,000.

Yet, somehow, these frighten ing facts and statistics seem less ominous as one walks the streets of Buenos Aires.

This city, with its fashionable and well-stocked stores, wide avenues and spacious parks, is one of the great capitals of the world.

Sidewalks are thronged with well-dressed people while the streets are filled with late-model cars.

Buenos Aires, in the words of one Argentine, is the product of "British capital, Italian labor and Spanish bureaucracy."

The sidewalks are thronged with well-dressed people and the streets are filled with late-model cars. Buenos Aires, in the words of one Argentine, is the product of "British capital, Italian labor and Spanish bureaucracy," (CP Photo)

Yet, despite the widespread nationalisation of once British owned enterprises such as the Argentine railways may have diluted the commercial influence of the U.K., a strong social hangover from the investment invasion of a half-century ago remains.

This is to be found in the huge Anglo-Argentine colony in Buenos Aires, estimated to number between 100 000 and 200,000 members.

They include long-established settlers and the children and grandchildren of British immigrants who came to Argentina during the great economic expansion boom.

In the homes of many who vividly remember Argentina's so-called "golden age," when treasury troubles were unknown, such traditional English rituals as afternoon tea and private card parties are still observed.

There are still Buenos Aires stores carrying such names as "The London Tailor" while most of the best Argentine private schools are shaped in the British tradition.

A well-written and well-edited English - language newspaper, the Buenos Aires Herald, is published daily in the capital.

NOT 'ONE OF THEM'

One afternoon, I was talking with an attractive and intelligent young secretary who, like many members of the Anglo-Argentine colony, was equally fluent in both Spanish and English.

"Oh, I was born in Argentina and I have an Argentine passport," she said, "and I suppose you could call me an Argentine citizen. But I honestly don't consider myself one of them."

Because of her father's British citizenship, the secretary had dual nationality and, as she emphasized, she always thought of herself first as British and last as Argentine.

To think otherwise, would be to become, in her words, "one of them."

It was yet another factor contributing to the chief malaise afflicting this frustrated republic — the lack of a true national identity.

"We are really not Latin Americans," the Argentines protest as they scorn their neighbors and model themselves on Europeans.

The result is that the Argentine, in the words of novelist Ernesto Sabato, "is neither Latin American nor European. He is nothing."

Thus was delivered a typical indictment of self-contempt.

DIES IN CELL

TORONTO (CP) — Ethel Kaske, 58 - year - old drugstore clerk, died of a stroke in a cell of a police station here Saturday, less than five hours after she was arrested on a charge of being drunk. Coroner Kenzie Setter said Sunday an autopsy showed death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage. An inquest has been ordered.

She used to be bothered by backaches and tired feeling. When she learned that irritation of the bladder and urinary tract can result in backaches and tired feeling, she took Dodd's Kidney Pills. Smart girl. Dodd's Pills stimulate the kidneys to help relieve the condition causing the backache and tired feeling. Soon she felt better—rested better. If you are bothered by backache, Dodd's Kidney Pills may help you, too. You can depend on Dodd's.

REVISED PENSION PLAN INTRODUCED

Liberals, NDP Win Seats In Two Byelections

Big Upset Seen In Waterloo South

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two federal byelections Monday left Liberal strength in the House of Commons unchanged from the 1963 general election, cut Progressive Conservative strength by one in a New Democratic Party upset, but gave little indication of national influence in the two contests.

In Westmorland, a traditionally - Liberal New Brunswick riding, Margaret Rideout, wife of the late Liberal member Sherwood Rideout, won easily over Progressive Conservative and NDP candidates. In Ontario's Waterloo South, the son of the late Progressive Conservative member lost to NDP standard-bearer Max Saltsman. Mr. Saltsman unsuccessful last year in the Ontario provincial election, led throughout the counting.

The results left the House of Commons standing at: Liberals 128, Progressive Conservatives 96, NDP 18, Creditistes 13 and Social Credit nine. Monday's byelections filled the only two House vacancies.

Mrs. Rideout became the first New Brunswick woman to win a federal or provincial seat.

Mrs. Rideout, 41, won over Progressive Conservative J. Edward Murphy, a Moncton barrister and Henry Landry of the New Democratic party.

With all 218 polls reported, the total for Mrs. Rideout was 20,320, giving her a plurality of 6,220 over Mr. Murphy, who polled 14,017. Mr. Landry received 2,596 votes. In the 1963 general election, Mrs. Rideout's husband led his nearest opponent by 3,633.

The seat was formerly held by her husband, who died of a heart attack on a Moncton-bound train May 29.

Mrs. Rideout was born at Bridgewater, N.S., where she graduated from high and commercial schools. Her father, Vance L. Saunders, was once mayor of Bridgewater.

She has three children: George, 19, a student at the University of New Brunswick; David, 15, a Moncton high school student, and Robert, 12.

Westmorland has voted Liberal in eight of the last 12 general elections. The last Conservative win was in 1958.

TO BUILD PLANT

TORONTO (CP) — Beaver Charcoal Ltd. will build a $1,000,000 charcoal briquette plant in South River, 40 miles south of North Bay.

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas said Monday night there are 40 to 50 constituencies in Ontario which might have produced the upset victory as the NDP in Waterloo South riding.

He told reporters that while he isn't predicting NDP victories in that many ridings in the next general election, the resounding defeat of the Liberal candidate and the smashing victory for the NDP "indicates a trend."

"We fought the election by saying that Waterloo South had a chance to speak for all the people of Canada in telling Parliament to get down to some bread - and - butter issues. The voice of the electorate in this matter has been heard, and I hope it will be heard by Parliament."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said through a spokesman that he was naturally disappointed at not regaining the old Conservative seat. He blamed it on a set of circumstances which drove Liberal voters into the NDP camp.

A Liberal spokesman said the failure to win the seat did not come as a complete surprise. Because of a turn of events in recent weeks, he said, the party had not expected to do much better than second.

Among political observers, the NDP victory in Waterloo South had more significance than the official spokesmen for the parties appeared ready to admit yet. The subject is certain to have its repercussions in the Commons in the next few days and—as Mr. Douglas told reporters Monday. He began his campaign to obtain sum-sum retirement benefits.

Phil Cutler, International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) counsel in Montreal, said late Monday night the men had agreed to return to work after being given notice negotiations over the retirement fund would resume.

Mr. Cutler was a member of an LIA delegation which met twice Monday in Ottawa with Labor Minister MacEachen, who offered liberal union department conciliation if the men returned to work.

Other federal labor conciliators will meet with ILA and Shipping Federation of Canada personnel and industry secretary to discuss the retirement fund, Mr. Cutler added.

Montreal, Trois - Rivieres, Quebec City, Halifax and Saint John ports represented by five men and the ship owners by five trustees on the board set up to administer the present pension plan.

The walkout was ordered Sunday by St. Lawrence River ILA locals following the breakdown of a meeting of the pension fund trustees last week in Saint John, N.B.

Shipping was paralyzed in Montreal, Trois - Rivieres and Quebec City. There were no pickets and no incidents as the stevedores obeyed an ILA direction asking them to stay away from the ports.

Trenton Skipper Testifies

By GERRY McNEIL

QUEBEC (CP)—Two masters and an assistant Monday their ships were in the correct lane in the north channel of the St. Lawrence when they collided in a fog bank 57 miles northeast of here Sept. 5.

Capt. Walter Bowen, 65, Trenton, Ont., told a transport department inquiry his 18,000 ton bulk carrier Lecellye Hall, owned by the Hall Corporation of Canada, had been sagging the north inbound lane on a course of 258 degrees.

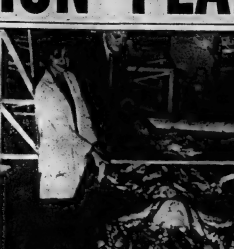
Capt. Ioannis Andreou, 51, of Athens maintained with certainty that his 11,000 - ton freighter Apollonia, outbound, was well in its south lane on a 75-degree course.

The testimony of the captains would place the vessels at least half a mile apart when the collision occurred. The Leclerc Hall, loaded with 24,000 tons of iron ore, sank four hours later with the loss of three lives while the badly-battered Apollonia limped to drydock here.

Each captain said the other vessel appeared to be veering across his bow. Capt. Bowen said the Apollonia, owned by Hary J. Navigation Company of Panama, had been spotted on radar 38 miles ahead of him and appeared to be no danger of collision

But when he first sighted it visually, it was swerving north across the channel.

Chief Officer Irving said the Leclerc Hall loomed out of the fog to his starboard, "crossing me."



Versions of events after the collision also differed.

Capt. Andreou said he went aboard the Apollonia, after putting all aboard his crippled vessel in a lifeboat, and tried to it push his ship to shore. He said the Apollonia's rudder just changed. The vessels were then located by the wreckage of their bows.

Capt. Andreou, however, said he asked Capt. Bowen if anyone was aboard the Leclerc Hall, and when he learned there wasn't, resumed efforts to beach it. Where the tug Foundation Vibert arrived, Capt Bowen "went away."

Stevedores Return To Their Jobs

MONTREAL (CP)—The 3,500 stevedores who walked off the job in St. Lawrence River ports Monday returned to work today following another truce in their negotiations to obtain sum-sum retirement benefits.

Federal Govt. Spent More In Quebec Last Year Than It Made Is Report

OTTAWA (CP)—In the 1961-62 fiscal year the federal government spent more in Quebec than it collected there. The same was true for every province except Ontario.

This is one broad conclusion that can be drawn from Ottawa's first attempt to allocate federal expenditures and revenues by provinces.

The results, bound to be controversial, are shown in material tabled in the Commons by Finance Minister Gordon at the request of Leon Balcer, Quebec leader of the Conservative caucus, who asked particularly about his province's position.

Everywhere in the material is the warning "use with caution."

The government notes it had to make a great many assumptions in allocating both income and outgo among the provinces. With alternative assumptions, any analyst could have "significantly different results."

For example, how does one allocate defence spending among the provinces? What of the CNR deficit? And debt charges, in the form of interest payments to bond holders? And how do you apportion among the provinces the federal revenues from sales and excise taxes?

The finance department had to choose from among various methods of doing these things. The result is one relatively simple table of allocations — but with 19 pages of explanation, and 12 footnotes to the table itself.

That said, however, the table shows this pattern:

For every $1 in federal revenue collected in Quebec in the 1961-62 fiscal year, the government spent approximately $1.13 in that province. The same was true for British Columbia.

For every $1 collected in the other provinces, less is what they received in the form of federal expenditures: Newfoundland $2.61, Prince Edward Island $2.70, Nova Scotia $2.01, New Brunswick 2.03, Ontario 85 cents, Manitoba $1.35, Saskatchewan $1.35, Alberta $1.15.

Liberal Caucus to Decide When Flag Debate Starts

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons faces a future of debate on important legislative items and the proposed new flag but temporary uncertainty about just when the flag debate will start.

Prime Minister Pearson is expected in council his cabinet and the caucus of Liberal MPs this week before making a final decision when the Commons should be asked to approve the design recommended by the Commons flag committee.

Informed said there are two possibilities being discussed—starting the flag debate next Monday or grouping all-out first with important legislation until near the end of the month before turning to the flag.

The brief postponement received backing from Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and New Democratic Leader Douglas in three meetings of the opposition party leaders with Mr Pearson

The government was prepared to go along but, as Mr. Pearson told the Commons Monday, Mr. Diefenbaker wouldn't agree to a time limit on the flag debate and a time limit on one of the other legislative items also couldn't be arranged.

Mr. Pearson made it plain in the Commons that the government will not back away from the flag issue.

He read a news report quoting Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) as stating the government had backed down in earlier crises and of fical Opposition members had thought of bringing the government to heel by refusing to vote supply.

"Mr. Speaker, we do not intend to back down on this one or come to heel," Mr. Pearson said.

The legislative items on the pre-Christmas program are the Canada Pension Plan, the redistribution bill, the national labor code, the remaining 1964-65 spending estimates and the flag report.

Pastor Found Guilty

CHATHAM (CP)—Rev. Russell D. Horsburgh was convicted today on five counts of contributing to juvenile delinquency in a 57-page judgment by Juvenile Court Judge W. H. Fox.

The United Church minister was found not guilty on another three charges.

It is expected he will be sentenced when court resumes this afternoon.

Mr. Horsburgh, free on bail since his court hearing concluded a month ago, had said Monday night that he "doesn't matter how the verdict goes. I intend to turn this tragedy into a triumph."

At the hearing—350,000 words of evidence in 14 court days—witnesses told of teen - agers making love in a vacant church janitor's apartment at Park St. United Church here, where Mr. Horsburgh is minister.

PLANS TO APPEAL

Monday night Mr. Horsburgh said it would be a bigger shock to him than to anyone else if the verdict went against him.

"But if I lose, I'll be doubly confident of winning the appeal," he said.

Asked to explain his "triumph from tragedy" remark, Mr. Horsburgh said: "Well, if I went to jail it would be a new experience for me. I've never been before, but I'm expecting an acquittal."

Most of the Crown witnesses were young teen-agers who told of having sexual intercourse in the apartment, sometimes during Friday night dances at the church, or on weekdays after school or Saturday nights while Mr. Horsburgh was rehearsing his sermons in the sanctuary under the apartment.

Most of the children referred to the building, 44-year-old minister as "Rev." or "the Rev."

One 16-year-old boy testified the minister stood with him in the apartment doorway watching a couple having sexual intercourse on the apartment floor during a dance.

Another boy swore he had slept overnight with two girls on two couches pushed together in the church parlor. One girl said the minister had come in to check on them in the small hours.

Old-Age Pension Tied To Cost-of-Living Index

BY DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — The third version of the complex Canada Pension Plan took legislative form Monday in the Commons. It is a brute of a bill, a half-inch thick and marked with complications for the lives and livelihood of 5,000,000 Canadians.

Introduction of the 125-section bill, one of the longest and most complex pieces of legislation ever seen in Parliament, came after a four-hour debate on the preliminary resolution to start it. During which opposition MPs pledged careful scrutiny but refused an immediate objections.

These are the next steps:

Second reading, or approval in principle, will be sought by the Commons. At this stage government speakers will deal with the financial and economic underpinning of the scheme. The government Monday night declined to reveal the projections these aspects of the plan, though the actuarial report already is in government hands.

Next step is to set up a joint Senate-Commons committee to study the bill in detail. It will have before it the detailed actuarial and economic reports. The committee likely will call expert witnesses, including officials of the insurance companies now administering private pension plans.

If both houses of Parliament subsequently give the bill final passage, the legislation will take effect in 1966 and will apply everywhere except in Quebec, which will have its own pension plan, or in any other province that sets up substantially the same scheme.

MAIN CONTRIBUTORS

The federal plan will be compulsory for an estimated 4,500,000 to 5,000,000 Canadians. Forced to contribute will be all employees and employers but those $50 a month or $600 a year, and all self-employed persons taking in more than $800 a year.

Rates of contributions and benefit levels are the same as those spelled out in the government's white paper last August. Briefly, the plan would start like this:

The first $800 of annual earnings is exempt. On the rest up to the year's maximum, 1.8 per cent would be paid by employer and employee each, and 3.6 per cent by the self-employed.

Benefits would be payable at 65 to persons who had contributed for at least three years. Those who had contributed for 10 years would get a pension equal to 25 per cent of their average earnings. Those who had contributed for the maximum 40 years would get 75 per cent.

Benefits would be payable to widows and widowers of contributors, to children of contributors and to disabled contributors.

Pensions would be adjusted annually to the cost-of-living index.

P. M. Wins First Test In House

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson has won his first big House of Commons test —and it seems his biggest—threat came from fog.

Eighteen fog - delayed Members of Parliament from Scotland, Ireland and Wales, tired of nerves, trooped into the House Monday night in time to give Wilson Labor government a seven-vote edge on a Tory motion condemning steel nationalization.

The fog, and illness among some Labor MPs, probably threw more of a spare into Labor strategists than the some what wavering attack launched on steel renationalization by the Tory opposition, led by Iain Macleod.

When the vote finally came the socialists tallied 307 compared with 300 for the Tories in the 630-member House.

FOG HURTS OPPOSITION

As it turned out, the fog apparently damaged the opposition more than the government

Two Tory members were stranded in northeast and northern England and unable to reach the Commons in time for the vote. The absence of a third Conservative backbencher has not yet been explained.

Allowing for two Liberals on either side and the fact that six Labor members were 'paired' with six Conservatives, the government vote was only one short of its maximum.

Five pairs were arranged to cover members of an all-party delegation from the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association to Jamaica The sixth pair was between Conservative Brian O'Malley and Tory Sir Eric Errington, who is on a private visit to Russia. The pair originally been offered by the Tories to cover the absence of Wilson, who is chairman of the board of trade, but Jay returned early from Geneva and the pair was not necessary.

Three Older Than 100 Years Don't Want to Live Much Longer

TORONTO (CP) — Phoebe Evans, Sam Vale and Sanford Leppard have many things in common.

They are all older than 100 and they dont want to live much longer.

They came from long-lived families, with no deaths before members reached their 80s.

They believe in their church Bible and an after-life

Their chief joy is music.

Mr. Leppard, blind since infancy, will be 103 Nov 19, "if I can stick it that long."

He was born on a farm near Newmarket, Ont., before Confederation. He was a fifer in Toronto's Queens Own Rifles, bent on keeping Upper Canada recognized as a free British railway depot from Irish American raiders—bent on making Upper Canada annexation.

Later Mr. Leppard became a piano tuner. He tuned his last piano at 76, the year his wife died. The Leppards had three sons—one was drowned and another died of diphtheria. The third, Dr. Leon Leppard, is a Toronto health board physician.

Miss Evans, who reached 100 last week, says French speaking Canadians should have equality with other Canadians "It would be nice if we all spoke English and French.

Miss Evans attended school as "a little hayseed from farm near Alliston, Ont. She attended and taught in a "little red school house" there before coming to Toronto in 1907.

After retirement, she operated a school here for "slow learners" until she was 85. She tried to run the strap only once during her 50 years of teaching. "Then the little boy was so poor and thin that he took off his ragamuffin jacket, couldn't stomach him. I started to cry myself."

Mr. Vale will have a cake with 101 candles on it Nov. 22.

London-born, he played violin around the world on the Penin sula and Oriental Line ships

He enlisted in the Canadian Army at the age of 52 in the First World War and served on the front as a cook.

"Then one day the bandmaster fell ill and me playing the violin for the boys outside the tents. I was a better violinist than cook so they put me in the band."

After the war he taught violin, mandolin and banjo in Toronto, and until he was 80 played the violin at a United Church Sunday school.

All three live in rest homes.

British Astronomer Is Expecting TV Programs From Other Worlds

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—A distinguished British astronomer, Dr. Fred Hoyle, speaks of the possibility of "live" TV from other worlds.

And by "live" he means people—other space people, possibly who may live on planets like ours on the other side of the milky way.

Hoyle thinks it's highly probable that such planets and people do exist. So do a lot of other scientists.

They think some of the radio waves hitting the earth right now contain messages from those people and there is some scientific effort under way to decipher these messages, to make sense of these radio waves which would also transmit TV.

What could we see and hear on this "celestial" television?

Hoyle says he could look. Of Men and Galaxies (University of Washington Press), says some of these unknown civilizations have evolved further than we and would therefore be able to tell us, for example, how to avoid a nuclear war.

During an interview here, Hoyle said he wasn't so worried about mankind destroying itself in a nuclear war—"it's the boredom that worries me," he said.

Boredom of the human race in our technological, organization-oriented civilization is what he said worried him.

He said he didn't think we would be able to personally visit those other inhabited planets since they are too far away and might take 10,000 or 1,000,000 years to find.

Council Approves Building Of New Secondary School In West Bridge Street Area

Belleville city council last evening gave approval for the construction of a new Bay of Quinte District high school to cost an estimated $2,942,352.

The city's share of the cost of the new school to be built on West Bridge Street in the Drive-In Theatre area, would be an estimated $368,000, the balance of the cost to be paid by other participating municipalities and through Dominion-Provincial grants.

In its five-year capital works program, the city has already provided for an expenditure of $1,000,000 for the erection of the new school.

The district high school board in an accompanying letter to council, said that the new school actually was required for September of 1965 but as it would be impossible to have the building ready by this time a target date of Sept. 1966 was being set.

Enrolment of the three present high schools is 3,737 or about 200 above the rated capacity. In five years enrolment is expected to increase to 4,810.

ISSUE DEBENTURES

Government grants would furnish $1,608,341 for the new building, leaving an estimated $1,334,011 to be raised by the school district. The city would issue the debentures for the $1,334,011 with each participating municipality paying its share of principal and interest over the term of the debentures.

Other municipalities in the high school district are Sidney, Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Ameliasburg townships, and Frankford village. Of the total present enrolment of 3,737, 59.9 percent of the students come from the city.

Mayor Jack Ellis told council that a new concept in school planning was being considered for the new high school.

He said plans were for a semi-windowless, completely air-conditioned school with board members being confident that such a structure could be built at the same cost or ever, less cost, than a conventional building.

The school library, sound economics and other departments not requiring exterior light were planned for the centre court, he said.

Ottawa Man New Garbage Collector

Harold C. Graham of Ottawa will be Belleville's garbage collector as of January 1st and no J. C. Moore of this city as had been expected.

When the city garbage collection job came up for tender this fall, Mr. Moore was the lowest bidder and was awarded the contract on condition that satisfactory bonding arrangement could be passed.

But yesterday city council was told that Mr. Moore would be unable to provide the necessary bond, and the garbage collection contract was given to Mr. Graham at a price of 23 cents per capita per month. This is about five cents per capita per month higher than Mr. Moore's bid.

Mr. Graham last night assured council that he could provide the necessary performance bond and said he would be using new fully-enclosed packer type equipment.

More Education Need of Future

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kerr of Belleville attended a conference at McMaster University, Hamilton of World Literacy (Canada) Inc. over the week end.

Mr. David Cloe of the Ontario Department of Education spoke of the future world citizen of the year 2002 A.D. where mutual understanding would replace hatred between peoples and would probably be a plural society of many customs. Christianity may become a minor religion.

Society would be different with only ten percent of the population doing tasklike jobs. Greater automation and use of computers would result in increased leisure becoming a challenge. The average marriage age would be younger and life span longer with birth rate controlled.

Because of many factors the need for better education and communication between peoples was essential. Education would become an integral part of each country's development, to aid the needs of its seven hundred million illiterates. All the newer teaching techniques would have to be employed to accomplish this great need in our present world society.

The literacy primer developed by UNESCO to this end has been adopted by the United National and will cost 30 million dollars.

Local History Is Outlined At Meeting

Guest speaker at the recent meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society was Gerald Boyce, president of the Hastings County Historical Society.

Approximately 40 persons attended the meeting in the Napanee Collegiate and heard Mr. Boyce outline the close historical relations between the neighboring counties.

Eighty slides depicting life in Hastings County from 1784 to 1914 were used to show the development of this area. Since several of those attending the meeting had been born in Hastings County or had attended the old Albert College, there was considerable interest in the talk.

The meeting was also shown a few pictures of the present Hastings County Museum and of the Faulkner House on Belleville's East Bridge Street, which Mr. Boyce described as an outstanding example of late Victorian architecture and interior decorating.

Earlier in the meeting Mrs. Norman Hubbs spoke briefly on the restoration of the Macpherson House at Napanee, and the carpenters employed on present renovations were introduced.

A letter was read from the Hastings County Historical Society's October meeting in which its executive and Addison Society was congratulated on this restoration project and also on its compilation of a history of the County. This history was published in August by the County Council and copies are available in Belleville from the local museum.

At the conclusion of the meeting, light refreshments were enjoyed and the guest speaker explained how the Lennox and Addington Historical Society might organize a slide collection to depict the history of the County.

1,000 Voters Added to Lists In Last Year

Over 1,000 more voters will be eligible to go to the polls in this December 7th municipal elections than was the case last year in Belleville.

City Clerk Allan Stalker reports a total of 18,379 names on the voters list this year. This includes 16,636 on the regular list and 1,743 persons eligible to vote under the Municipal Franchise Act.

Municipal franchise voters are entitled to vote for city council and on the fluoridation question.

Fringe areas in the east and west ends of the city and areas in which multiple family apartments have been constructed showed the biggest increase in the number of eligible voters.

Thursday evening at city hall County Judge J. C. Anderson will hold a court of revision for adding of eligible voters whose names have been missed from the voters' list. Time of the hearing is from 7:30 to 8:30.

Mudslide Destroys Homes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rain was predicted today in South California, where storms triggered mudslides struck Monday with avalanche fury across saved earlier from dry season brushfires.

One mudslide sluiced down a fire-reded canyon and into a residential street, sweeping fleeing housewife with it.

Mrs. Lorraine Miller may have been carried three quarters of a mile and en tombed in thick basin-along with cars, furniture and household debris—in a 20-foot deep mass of mud.

Her husband, William, 49, singer Frank Sinatra's accompanist, had to leave his wife from their crumbling home, and also was swept away. Firemen rescued him as he clung to a car in the swirling flood.

Their daughter, Meredith, 17 clinging to the side of a tree in family's canyon home twisted and cracked under the onslaught of mud.

EIGHT OTHERS WENT

The Miller home was destroyed and eight others damaged in the Sycamore Canyon section of Burbank, a Los Angeles suburb.

Other mudslides hit the Santa Barbara area, 100 miles to the north, which lies at the foot of mountains ravaged by fire last September

The current rains were the first heavy downpour of the winter rainy season in Southern California.

Monday's rains were accompanied, in West Los Angeles and coastal regions, by a tornado—a rarity in California. Scores of white shredded patios, un shingled roofs, faced a house splitter in the opposite direction, and scattered a manufacturer's store of 40,000 artificial Christmas trees over a two-block area.

The worst damage, however, was from the mud, and the worst-hit area was Burbank's Country Club Drive section.

OTTAWA (CP) — John B. Aird, 41, of Toronto has been appointed to the Senate, Prime Minister Pearson announced today.

Mr. Aird is a partner in the law firm of Edison, Aird and Berlis and has wide business interests, the announcement said.

The appointment fills the only Ontario vacancy in the upper chamber. The remaining three vacancies in the 102-seat chamber are in Newfoundlaid, Quebec and British Columbia.

In the present party standings are Liberals 62, Progressive Conservatives 34, Independents 4 and Creditiste 1 and one Senator.

Mr. Aird has been active for a number of years in the National Liberal Federation.

Dr. F. Comell To Be Speaker At Meeting

Mr. Robert Laughlen was appointed chairman of the Belleville Chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation at a recent meeting held at the home of Mrs. Gwyn Black. Mr. Laughlen succeeds Mr. John Pringle as chairman.

Five "In Memoriam" stands were delivered for distribution to the five funeral homes of the city. A canvass is planned for December 7th and 200 kits, 2 mail placards and five large cards have been ordered for use, as well as 1,000 car stickers.

At the October meeting plans were made for the dinner on Thursday, November 17th at Hotel Quinte. Dr. Ford Connell of Kingston will be the guest speaker on this occasion. Entertainment on will be sent to Dr. Cronk, Dr. Loynes, Dr. Totten and six students.

At the meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. J. Pringle, Mr. N. Moore gave the financial report for the past year. Showing $600.00 collected in last year's canvass, and $400.00 contributed to the "In Memoriam" fund.

Mr. Feashy reported that the heart pamphlets had been delivered to all local doctors' offices, and the balance would be taken to dentists' and lawyers' offices.

Low Cost Family Housing For Senior Citizens Is Seen

Belleville will request the Ontario Housing Corporation to proceed with the necessary planning and development to provide for senior citizens and low cost family housing in the city.

The request will be for provision of 36 units of senior citizens' housing and for 40 low-cost family units.

Ald. Kenneth Boyle, chairman of a special committee, said a survey had shown there was a great need for this type of housing in Belleville.

Under the plan all capital costs for the provision of senior citizens' housing and low-cost family housing is borne by the provincial government.

The city in turn sets a maximum municipal property tax of $25 per unit, the difference between the $25 and the regular city taxes to be made up out of the general fund.

MAYOR PRAISES MOVE

Ald. Boyle said the Ontario Housing Corporation was fortunate to have an integration of senior citizen and low cost housing units in residential areas and was also interested in purchasing existing dwellings.

Mayor Jack Ellis said the need for senior citizens' housing for Belleville was the "finest thing we have ever done."

He said it would be a start in the right direction to help low income group into "existence" level housing.

He cited from a survey report which indicated large numbers of houses in the city without proper toilet, bathroom and inside toilet facilities.

Labor School To Be Held In This City

Plans for a weekend labor school to be held in the spring were outlined last night by the Belleville and District Labor Council. The two-day school will be held March 20 and 21 at Club Canada in Belleville.

One course on problems of organizing a union, proposed by the council executive was voted down by the council' membership last night.

Chairman for the program will be Leo Lucciola, chairman of the committee and Mrs. Jean Cunningham. Larry Wagg will be director of the institute and Frank Daniels will be registrar.

Want Liquor Store Open on Friday Nights

City council will forward a request to the Liquor Control Board of Ontario to have the Belleville liquor store remain open on Friday evenings.

Council will make the request at the suggestion of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, the Downtown Businessmen's Association and the Industrial Commission.

The request will be for the local liquor retail outlet to extend its present hours to 9.00 o'clock on Fridays, both as a convenience to the public and in order to conform to the existing retail store hours.

The above organizations originally submitted their request to the Liquor Control Board of Ontario and that such requests must be submitted by the local council.

Armistice Day Program Held By Rotarians

Members of the local Rotary Club held their annual Armistice Day program at their regular meeting held on Monday at the Hotel Quinte.

Immediately before the meeting began, members observed the traditional two minutes of silence in remembrance of those who gave their lives during two world wars.

Present to address the club on this occasion was Father. Wilfred Dunphy of the Sacred Heart Parish in Batawa.

Father Dunphy recalled to mind the reason why we celebrate Remembrance Day — a memorial tribute, he said, to those "who gave their lives on the altar of sacrifice."

Father Dunphy noted the changing world and how these men gave their lives that we might go on living to enjoy these changes.

Detailed Plans For Centennial Project Asked

An early announcement of detailed plans for the city's Zwick's Island centennial project is being asked by members of the parks board so that plans will not conflict with their own long range plans for the city parks system.

Alderman Don Joss, chairman of the city parks board, told council yesterday that the board would like to know of the centennial committee's plans before the board proceeds with any complicated work on the Zwick's Island park.

The deadline for municipal applications for approval of centennial projects has been extended to August 1965.

The council was also urged that representatives from the horticultural society, Belleville minor sports, the community planning association and the parks and recreation committee be included on the centennial project committee.

Nov. 11th Not Holiday for City Employees

City council yesterday decided that Remembrance Day will not be a holiday at city hall or at the public works garage with employees wishing to attend Remembrance Day services will be permitted to do so.

Under the terms of their union contract city employees are not legally entitled to Nov. 11th as a holiday, but the matter, nevertheless, saw spirited debate before a personnel committee recommendation not to close city hall on Remembrance Day was carried.

Aldermen Frank Murray and Don Whalen led the debate opposing the motion, noting the purpose of Remembrance Day was to pay homage to war heroes. They said the city should take leadership in this respect and hoped that the day would soon come when Nov. 11th would be a national holiday.

But Alderman Ben Corke, chairman of the council finance committee, pointed out that police and firemen do not get a holiday on Nov. 11th nor did the majority of city utilities.

He said his committee was unanimous on the matter and had decided that until Remembrance Day was made a national holiday, it could do but one thing and that was to expect all employees to work.

Kiwanis Club Will Present Travel Film "Bible Lands"

The Kiwanis Club of Belleville will present its second program of its "Travel and Adventure Series" on Thursday evening in the Belleville Collegiate auditorium. The photographer-lecturer will be Dr. Charles Forbes Taylor, who will present his travel film, "Bible Lands".

Dr. Taylor who was born in England, made his first public appearance at the age of four, singing to a thousand men, addressed by his preacher father. His first public speech was made in England to 2,000 people at the age of nine. He emigrated with his father to the United States when he was 13 and has addressed an average of 500,000 people a year for 40 years.

His interest in photography began at 16 when he photographed the burning steamship "Congress" on which he and his father were passengers, after climbing down rope ladders into lifeboats. His pictures were published by newspapers all over the world.

"Bible Lands" is a unique presentation, representing a lifetime of work covering extremely interesting and important lands from Bethlehem to Armegeddon. Included is the story of Moses and his travels; the city of Bethlehem and its many sacred spots and on through Nazareth to the River Jordan and many other places referred to in the Bible.

Al-Anon Group Marks Anniversary

Belleville Al-Anon family group is holding an open meeting to mark their fourth anniversary at Tabernacle United Church on Sunday afternoon, November 15.

Guest speakers will tell of their experiences before and after finding Al-Anon. These groups are made up of relatives and friends of alcoholics who realize that by banding together they can better solve their own problems.

The groups constitute a sharing of experience rather than giving advice. It complements rather competes with one's profession.

Appointments Are Approved

City appointments to the Belleville Retarded Children's School Authorities Board were approved at city council yesterday.

They are J. R. Blackbourn, Ed Burkley, Rodney Cameron and Bruce Kerr whose appointments will be confirmed by-law.

Other members of the school board are Thomas Stovell and Mrs. D. W. Madocks.

Kelso Roberts Pays Visit To Sandbanks

PICTON (Staff) — Hon. H. Kelso Roberts, Minister of Lands and Forests, visited the site of the new Lands and Forests Park at the Sandbanks Monday afternoon. There are tentative plans for greatly enlarging this area for a Lands and Forests Park. During the height of the tourist season this summer the park was used to accomodate the overflow campers and picnickers from the larger Outlet Park. Over 26,000 people used this site during the summer months.

Mr. Roberts also inspected the Wellington area where the Sandbanks terminates. The distance from the Park area to Wellington across the strip of dunes is approximately 5 miles. Wellington Reeve Moore and Wellington citizens generally seem in favor a road across this strip to shorten the travelling distance around West Lake and to increase tourist business in the town. It is not known at this time whether or not this plan will be approved.

Mr. Roberts was most impressed with the progress already made by Lands and Forests officials in providing an attractive camp area and was most enthusiastic when shown proposed plans for the enlarged camp area situated so near the beach. Mr. Norris Whitney, M.P.P., accompanied Mr. Roberts and other top Lands and Forests officials.

PICTON (Staff) — Plans have been made for a Junior Farmer bus trip to the Royal Winter Fair on Friday, Nov. 20th.

ZONE 2 SAFETY CONFERENCE

At the Zone 2 Safety Conference held in Stirling recently Mr. H. E. Wright, farm safety specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, announced that the Farm Safety Council would emphasize falls in 1965.

In Canada last year 10,255 people lost their lives in accidents. Of the accidental deaths almost half are traffic fatalities. But falls cause over 25 percent of all the non-traffic fatal accidents. Last year in Canada over half the fatal falls happened right in the home where 810 people died. One surprising fact about the location of falls is that you don't have to fall far to get hurt. Falls on the same level accounted for 497 fatalities in 1963, while falls from one level to another caused only 351 deaths.

Like most accidents, falls are caused, in an overwhelming number of cases, by human failure — failure to correct an unsafe condition known to exist and failure to notice and adjust to an unsuspected hazard.

Here are some things every farmer can do to reduce his chances of having a fall:

He can make sure that steps are in good condition and free of litter — that ladders are in good repair and are placed on a firm footing at a safe angle — that he moves the ladder as needed, instead of trying to reach too far from it.

Spills on floors should be wiped up immediately. Loads should be carried so vision is not obstructed.

A farm worker should always use the steps and handholds when mounting a farm machine and he should be careful about slippery mud or snow on the bottom of his boots.

Good lighting inside farm buildings will help prevent tumbles, too. A coat of whitewash on walls increases visibility inside the barn or shed.

'Throwaway' Glass Bottles Are Opposed

PICTON (Staff) — Mr. Earl Mackey, new county construction safety inspector, submitted his first report to County Council on Monday. He took his new post on Sept. 15. It was not a lengthy report. However he did mention that some hazards in county construction had been observed.

A Perth County resolution to seek the support of the Minister of Agriculture and Minister of Highways to prohibit the use of throwaway soft drink containers made of light glass was endorsed by County Council. It is considered that these glass containers might be injurious to cattle if carelessly thrown in fields, and also a danger on the highways if persons were to throw them from automobiles.

A letter was received from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Assoc. supporting the continued maintaining of the Picton Armouries. A reply to the letter was forwarded to Douglas Ahrebrack M.P., for his consideration.

New Heating Method

One of the more surprising developments of the post-war era has been the increasing utilization, in Ontario, of electricity as a means of heating homes and other buildings.

Paradoxically enough, the first impetus for this development came from the Trans-Canada Pipeline. When Western natural gas started arriving in Ontario, the officials of HEPC immediately realized that competition from gas would reduce the demand for electricity, or, more accurately, would slow the increase in this demand. Having operated under conditions in which demand was continually threatening to run away from available supply, it would have been understandable if Hydro had overlooked the possibility of a radical change. But it did not. It started a vigorous sales campaign, even though it was at the same time scratching the bottom of the barrel of undeveloped water-power resources. Not only did it seek to protect territory it held, in existing and in water heating, but it quickly developed the practically untouched field of house heating.

Surprisingly enough, it has been able to provide this service at a price sufficiently attractive to win customers. There was a time when this would have been considered feasible only if some method could be devised to use off-peak power, and the development of some system whereby home-heating units could be turned off, like flat-rate water-heaters, during peak hours, without inconvenience, would still be of major importance. However, it is no longer really accurate to say electricity cannot be stored. This is true if water is diverted from a normal river flow, where, if it is not used, the power available from it is lost. But more and more of our Hydro power projects involve the building of great dams to create water storage basins, and while electricity cannot be stored the water can.

Now, from Britain, comes word of a new development which may eventually reduce the cost of using electricity for home heating. Because of the density of population in Britain, and the resulting congested nature of its villages, towns and cities, there are more underground electricity cables in that country than anywhere else in the world. As demands for power increase, ways are being sought to cheapen the cost of underground cable. One way to do this is to make each cable carry more current. When a cable carries current, it gets hot. If the current is increased too much, this heat damages the cable. So the British are cooling the cables by laying plastic pipes beside them and having cool water flow through these pipes. The water gets so hot it has to be removed from the pipes. Now an effort is being made to devise a method by which this hot water can be utilized to heat houses.

Difficult technical problems are involved. But perhaps Ontario cities, with their ugly maze of poles and the expensive outlays for maintenance which overhead wires often entail, may some day strike a bonanza—a way to finance the change to underground cables by having these cables heat the buildings past which they run.

Correct This Oversight

Last week, in his column on this page, Richard Jackson suggested that the leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition in the House of Commons should be given the free use of Government aircraft, to speed him to and from his appointments outside the capital. Mr. Jackson maintains this would help ease the physically exhausting strain imposed on the Opposition leader by the fact that he must now fit his duties into the framework of the schedules of commercial airlines.

He has a point.

As he says, the Leader of the Opposition is the second most important man in Parliament, entranced only by the Prime Minister. He receives the same salary as a Cabinet minister. But unlike a Cabinet minister he cannot call-on the Transport Department to provide him with a Viscount or Lockheed Jetstar when needed. This seems likely to be more the result of an oversight than of a deliberate effort to rank him below Cabinet level. There was a time when the Government did not possess aircraft, when this means of stretching out time, or squeezing together space, was not available to anybody. The Government should catch up with progress and accord the Leader of the Opposition his due.

And there is no time like the present to correct the existing situation.

None can love freedom heartily but good men; the rest love not freedom but licence.—Milton.

Ottawa Offbeat

Diefenbaker a Real Pro In Opposition Business

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It just was not the same harried and harassed Hill last week with the Old Warrior, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker off to the political wars across the country.

The tension was gone.

The pressure was off.

It was almost as if the House of Commons was on some sort of part-time holiday, with nobody getting any real steam up about anything.

The fight had gone out of it — literally — with Dief changing his political battleground from the Hill to the hustings.

For say what you will — and the Liberals have been saying plenty, not all of it printable — about the man many used to know as, and still call "Fighting John Diefenbaker," he attends to the work, the hard slugging of "opposing," as no other Opposition Leader in living Parliamentary memory.

He has been blamed and blasted, discounted and denigrated for allegedly paralyzing Parliament through a running blockade of Liberal legislation.

But it isn't quite that way — in fact, Dief has only been doing what any Opposition Leader worth his Parliamentary pay would do — and an increasing number of taxpayers seem to be agreeing, with the public opinion polls giving him much higher marks than they ever gave Prime Minister Pearson in all his six years at the same job.

THE LONG SHOT

True, they both fought their way free from political wilderness of the "outs," to the seats of power of the "ins."

But for Diefenbaker it was a far more of a feat than for Pearson. For with the Liberals so long in power through the 22 years of Mackenzie King and St. Laurent, Government almost expected of them, as Opposition was of the Conservatives.

The very Federal establishment, through a whole generation of appointments — plainly political to Government boards and bureaus, and supposedly non-political to the Crown Corporations and Civil Service — itself became a built-in and perpetuating Liberal power structure.

It became fashionable, the "in" thing, at least around the Capital, to be a Liberal, with Conservatism perhaps a brave, but decidedly forlorn lost cause.

All the Conservative Opposition Leaders from Robert J. Manion through R. B. Hanson, Gordon Graydon, John Bracken and George Drew found it that way.

Then along came John Diefenbaker, fighting like fury, as an opposition leader before had fought. Often mean, even miserable. But tough, always hard as nails. Giving no quarter and asking none. A scrapper from away back in the hard, unrewarding, disappointing but never completely defeating Prairie political days.

He smashed the Liberal mould in Ottawa that produced our government after another through the late '30's, the '40's, and deep into the '50's.

Now he is at it again. And he is still mean, often miserable. Always tough. Never giving up. Fighting, fighting, fighting for the principles, the beliefs, the traditions by which he lives.

NO PRIZES

He is not lovable. Perhaps he is not even personally popular.

But is he supposed to be?

If everybody liked him, would he be doing his job?

Critics are seldom idolized, especially when much of what they say obviously appears only as the unpleasant truth.

But look at this man. He has always been a tall, and now, it seems, an increasingly lonely figure.

Watch him, as stiff and unbending, he strides across the Parliamentary Restaurant, his head grayed but unbowed in a lifetime of public service.

Critics have been crawling all over him, in the daily and periodical press, but especially over the publicly-financed CBC radio and television networks. And almost contemptuously, he has shrugged them off.

Outwardly, he carries his head high and his shoulder straight.

But inwardly, you suspect, they are getting to him, and suspicious now of almost any and every newspaperman and broadcaster, he is becoming more remote.

It is a sad thing. For so many of them were his friends. And now he seems to feel betrayed — perhaps he is. He sort of reminds you of a brave old buffalo bull, cut off from the herd, and alone, as the wolves close in.

For look at it with clear, objective eyes and you see a man grown old, approaching 70, in the dedicated service of his nation. With his talents, drive, friction, and clear toughness of mind, he could have made a fortune in law, perhaps become a millionaire in business. But, instead, he chose to serve. He invested a lifetime. If he regards it as a mission, if he makes his job his friends life, then give him his due and acknowledge the public debt owed him.

His greatness is that on some questions he may be on the wrong side but, as his ground swell goes, never knowingly on the side of wrong.

Five-Minute Miles

Ottawa Citizen

The same Ethiopian, Abebe Bikila, who won the marathon in the Rome Olympics four years ago did it again at Tokyo. This time he established a world record for the 26 miles 385 yards. As an observer has noted, a five-minute mile isn't much nowadays since so many runners can cover the distance in four minutes or slightly under; but 26 five-minute miles in succession is something very remarkable indeed.

Strictly Personal

Most Words Do Not Travel Well

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

My recent column, on the ways in which words become perverted and acquire a "secondary" meaning which then replaces the original meaning, was scarcely cold in type before an item in The New Yorker recalled another familiar example.

The magazine, in one of its little "newsbreaks," commented on the misspelling of "chaise lounge" for "chaise longue" in a furniture ad. A was surprised to see the comment, for more than nine times out of ten the phrase is misspelled as "chaise lounge," not only in ads but in editorial copy as well.

In French, of course, the phrase means "a long chair, one for reclining in." But in English, the similarity between "long" and "lounge" has turned it into "chaise lounge," no matter how purists may scream about it. The same has happened to dozens of other foreign words we use in English.

Even more interesting example was a menu I saw not long ago. It advertised a meat course, and added "with au jus." Since "au jus" in French means "with gravy," the menu read "with with gravy." But no doubt "with au jus" is here to stay, despite its grammatical redundancy.

Americans, when they go to Paris and order "pie a la mode," are often surprised to learn that the French do not know what they're asking for. Most Americans seem to think that "a la mode" means "with ice cream on top," but it means nothing of the sort in French, and never has. It is a unique American perversion of the phrase, "in the style."

Foreign words, adapted to native use, become degraded as well as perverted. In France, "de luxe" has a definite and restricted meaning — a "de luxe" hotel is one that is really at the top of the heap, both in facilities and in cost.

But in America, "de luxe" means absolutely nothing, and is applied without the slightest discrimination to the cheapest and shoddiest of commodities, as advertising filler. A "de luxe" dinner in most restaurants is simply a more ample one, not necessarily a better one.

Likewise, we imported the word "limousine" from France, where it meant a car with a closed compartment for passengers and a separate front for the driver, outside but covered with a roof. In American parlance a "limousine" now means any long and expensive car, with or without a chauffeur. Most words, like wine, do not travel well; and when decanted in a new country, have an odd flavor indeed.

Diet Pills Can Make A Person Irritable

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can the constant use of diet pills be dangerous? Can they make a person irritable at times? I am 29 and have been taking them for eight years.

I have to increase the dosage now. If I don't take them, I have an enormous appetite. I am so tired I don't have the energy to do my everyday housework. I have two children. — Mrs. J.W.

Yes, diet pills can make a person irritable, and they can also be dangerous. That is one reason why I flatly oppose their use except under medical supervision.

Eight years is a long time to have been using them. They are not intended for continued use, but rather, may in difficult cases, be a temporary crutch until new and better eating habits are learned.

Obviously you haven't gotten down to the root of your problem. You are still "on crutches" instead of "learning to walk." Learning how to eat properly, that is.

Being too tired to do your housework doubtless means that you are not getting sufficient exercise, which only adds to your weight. Worse, there may be some thyroid imbalance or other disorder of metabolism, or there could be anemia — being heavy does not indicate that you are free from this problem. Have a physical examination to find out what if anything needs to be done medically. Tell your doctor exactly what pills you have been taking, and let him help you control your weight more successfully. Don't ruin your disposition and endanger your health by relying on pills.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain fibromyositis — cause, treatment and cure. The word appeared in my husband's insurance papers. Eight specialists said he had a disease of the fibrous sheath, "myo" for muscle, and "itis" for inflammation.

Identifying the cause may not be easy. It can involve some form of infection, strain, nervous tension, injury or faulty posture.

Why eight specialists? Why not let one study the case before the cost of having eight take a quick try at it?

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: What does leukoplakia look like? I have small patches of whitish skin with tiny white bumps on the inside of both cheeks. It is not sore or painful in any way. — Mrs. W. K.

Leukoplakia is a white, patchy growth in the mouth (inside the cheeks or on tongue or gums). Except for that, it is very difficult to describe, and the only reliable answer I can give you is to have your doctor or dentist take a look.

These patches are frequently found in smoker's mouths; they sometimes disappear spontaneously when smoking is stopped.

The danger is that leukoplakia may be a forerunner of cancer, although not always by any means. If patches begin to spread, it may be wise to remove them. In any event, they should be watched to make sure that they do not begin to show danger signs.

Letter to The Editor

Protests Editorial Misinterpreted Item

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

It was with regret that I read your editorial of October 28th, stating the Canadian Legion was seeking an inquiry of the CBC over the appearance of George Lincoln Rockwell on a TV program.

The Ontario Intelligencer is known for its high calibre of editorials and is no doubt read by all who subscribe to the paper. To misinterpret a news item and brand the action of one branch of the Royal Canadian Legion as speaking for our national organization is regrettable.

Some may say the Royal Canadian Legion is known for its strong stand on retention of the Canadian Red Ensign as our national flag. This is true, but only through the proper channel of submissions to our members of parliament and the federal cabinet. We are not a pressure group parading around protesting freedom of speech which is allowed in a democratic country, such as our great Dominion.

With Remembrance Day close at hand, it is appropriate I should point out that the Legion is a non-partisan organization, church or centoptah to commemorate and pay tribute to, the more than 100,000 of our fellow Canadians who were less fortunate than ourselves and gave their lives that we may live in freedom.

It might well be that most members of the Legion feel the program referred to was in bad taste, in that it was the type of anarchy experienced which we fought against and our comrades died to suppress. It might also be that the CBC did all Canadians a service in that they were able to bear the sins of a fanatical group existing in our society. Forewarned of the dangers of such men as Rockwell and his type, they will be better equipped to reject anything of this sort which infringes on our free and democratic way of life.

To publish the statement of one branch in Toronto in such a way that the public could only interpret it as speaking for the whole Royal Canadian Legion, is an injustice to the other 2,000 branches and 365,000 members. I hope you see fit to correct the erroneous impression created.

Jack Rashotte,
Zone Commander F 3,
Belleville.

B.C.	641.9	725.4
Territories	13.0	16.3
Total	6,386.8	7,586.1

The figures may not add due to rounding.

Some of the explanations:

NOT COMPLETE PICTURE

Activities of crown corporations are not included. Thus the table is not a complete picture of the federal influence on the economy.

Based only on one year, the figures do not reflect basic shifts in the pattern of federal spending and tax revenues since then. Also, the spending figure for Saskatchewan was "abnormally high" that year due to some large, special items that do not recur.

Personal and corporation income taxes were allocated to the province just as in the federal - provincial tax arrangements.

But how was sales tax revenue to be handled? This is collected from manufacturers, wholesalers and consumers. Often, the tax is paid before the goods are shipped across provincial boundaries. Any sales tax burden that the analysts sought to trace the place of collection. Answer: General sales tax revenues were allocated according to the 1961 distribution of personal disposable income.

A simple population basis was used to allocate both defence and external affairs department spending, on the ground that all Canadians benefit equally.

SAME APPROACH USED

The same approach was used for the costs of "national overhead" — the cost of maintaining Parliament, collecting taxes, maintaining the government building in Ottawa and Hull, paying debt charges and so on.

The population system also was used where the special national allocation could be devised." Included were the CNR and TCA deficits, railway subsidies, costs of the national research council and the bureau of statistics, federal costs of the RCMP and so on.

Payments into and out of the old age security and unemployment insurance funds are left out of the table.

About 40 per cent of the spending took the form of payments direct to people, their provincial governments or institutions, such as universities. These could be allocated to provinces easily.

Many expenditures were allocated to where they were actually made. Handled in this way, for example, were expenditures of the post office and public works departments, farm rehabilitation, the parks branch, ferry subsidies, the air services branch of the transport department.

But freight assistance in moving Western feed grain to the East was allocated to provinces on the basis of the province to get the grain. The St. Lawrence Seaway deficit was allocated according to the origin and destination of seaway traffic.

Spending in the departments of agriculture, forestry and fisheries was allocated by using indexes of production in the various provinces such as cash income from the sale of farm products, fish landings, value of forestry production and so on.

Immigration costs were allocated to the provinces to which the immigrants went. Costs of the penitentiaries service were distributed according to the province where the sentencing was done.

LAKEVIEW GENERATING STATION just west of Toronto will be one of the biggest in the world when completed in 1968. Ontario Hydro has announced that Stephens-Adamson of Belleville has a $750,000 contract for coal handling equipment for the final four generating units, to be added to the left of the installation shown in this picture. Coal handling equipment in the units now in operation is also supplied by Stephens-Adamson.

Hydro Gives Big Contract To Stephens-Adamson Co.

Ontario Hydro has announced award of a $750,000 contract to Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Company of Canada Limited, Belleville.

The firm will supply and install coal-handling equipment for the final four generating units at Hydro's Lakeview Generating Station on Metropolitan Toronto's western outskirts.

One of the largest coal-burning power stations in the world, the Lakeview station will have a capacity of 2,400,000 kilowatts in eight units when completed in 1968. With its huge coal storage areas, switching yard and other facilities the station occupies a 164-acre site beside Lake Ontario.

The first two, 300,000-kilowatt units, for which Stephens-Adamson also supplied the coal handling equipment, were placed in service in 1961 and 1962. A third generating unit commenced operation earlier this year, and a fourth is scheduled for initial service next month.

The Belleville company, which submitted the lowest tender, will commence delivery of the new equipment in April, 1965.

Sidewalk for North Side Of W. Dundas St. Approved

Although there is no hope that the work can be done this year, city council yesterday voted for the construction of a five-foot concrete sidewalk for the north side of Dundas Street West, between Park Street and the westerly city limits.

The walk would be built under Section 8 of the Local Improvement Act with 50 percent of the estimated $20,000 cost to be paid through the general rate.

The Ontario School for the Deaf has offered to pay the full cost of $6,850 for the walk in front of the school property discussed in city council on several previous occasions, but because of resident objections or for other reasons, had not been proceeded with.

Mayor Jack Ellis admitted that the walk had been previously discussed in council but said conditions in the area had now changed.

Avondale School had been enlarged and the new Sir Mackenzie Bowell School would see more children using Dundas St.

Also, under changed circumstances, costs to the individual had gone down, he said.

Should Preserve City Hall Tower Says Alderman

Belleville's city hall tower is an impressive landmark and one that should be preserved.

That is the feeling of a number of Toronto business executives who recently visited the city.

Alderman Don Joss told council last night that he had entertained the Toronto executives who had never before been to Eastern Ontario.

The alderman said he had plugged the tourist and fishing industry while on a boat trip down the bay, but what impressed them most was the city hall tower.

"The city hall lower is one thing that makes the city stand out and should certainly be preserved," Ald. Joss quoted the visitors as saying.

DIVIDENDS RISE

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian dividend payments should sustain a record this year, J. R. Timmins and Co. stockbroker says. Total for the first 11 months of this year was $818,076,781, eight per cent ahead of the same period of 1963.

Peterborough Will Duplicate Trenton Vote

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—At least two Ontario municipalities propose to ask voters to express their opinions on how schools are financed. Two questions are at issue: Whether the provincial government should take over the collection of education taxes; and whether the tax burden should be shared by more people than property - owners alone, as at present.

The municipality of Trenton first planned such a plebiscite and has invited a number of other communities to do the same. Monday night Peterborough decided to put such a question during the Dec. 7 municipal election, provided there is time for it to be added to the ballots.

Red Cross Society Requests Use of Old Police Station

The present century-old police station on the market square need not become an anachronism building when the police department is through with it.

The local Red Cross Society would like the old building restored and used to house its work room.

It is also suggested that the old police station could be used to house the Opportunity Shop, the St. John Ambulance Society, the Chamber of Commerce and other such organizations.

The above request was made last night to Council in a letter from Mrs. George K. Graham, head of the Red Cross work room.

Ald. George Wishart said the hospital women's auxiliary was concerned about needed expansion for its city hall based Opportunity Shop, while Ald. Geo. Brown suggested the Arthritis Society might also be housed in the old police building.

Council referred Mrs. Graham's request to the city manager to be brought up again next year.

Advisory Board Rejected by City Council

City council yesterday turned down a motion calling for formation of a "Municipal Advisory Board" to provide background studies on projects for which council does not have time to do its own research.

The advisory board as proposed by Alderman Enos David would have been made up of non-elective senior citizens with experience in municipal and legislative affairs.

Alderman David said the such a board could provide intelligent leadership and would prove to be the "right arm" of any council.

But the idea was not received favorably by Alderman Ben Corke, who said there were many dangers involved, one of them, being that such board members would have no direct responsibility for their actions.

Such a move, he said, "would be getting the city into hot water."

Alderman William Jarvah in replying to Ald. Corke said it was unfair to ridicule a motion placed before council in good faith. It would be sufficient either to approve or disapprove, he said.

Study Guild Has Discussion On Merit of Joining U. S.

At a recent meeting of the Women's Study Guild, Mrs. R. Roulet provided much food for thought, and provocative questions for discussion, on several topics of current interest to the ladies. Using three widely varied topics from the "For the Sake of Argument" pages of Maclean's magazines, Mrs. Roulet posed some pertinent questions on the contents which caused much comment and brought out many differing views from the members present. The first one, "Let's join with the United States", with questions advanced by Mrs. Roulet, "Do the arguments in this article have any merit ... "Would we lose anything by union, and if so, what?" "Will union ever come, and if so, when?" These aroused considerable heated discussion, particularly question two.

The other two papers on education, "Let the drop-outs drop out," and "Let's bring back midwives like any other civilized country," also proved most interesting, especially to the ex-teachers and the nurses who were present.

Mrs. J. Reynolds, president of the Guild, conducted the meeting which was held in her home. The constitution of the Guild was read, that the newer members and visitors might be informed of the aims and objects of this somewhat unique organization. A recent letter from the Tunisian girl whom they support, was read, and a picture of some of the members which will be sent to her was circulated.

GIFTS FOR PATIENTS

A request from the White Cross organization for Christmas presents for the women patients at Cobourg Mental Hospital was read, and the members of the Guild moved that a shower of these gifts be brought to the November meeting.

Since October was Thanksgiving month, Mrs. L. Lantz chose this as the theme for the worship service. Pointing out that Canadians, too, live in a land of promise as did the Israelites of old, she said that it behooves us to offer thanks and gratitude for our many mercies. So many people see only the ill and evil things about them; so many are selfish and think only of themselves, not of others; so many today are "self-made" people and do not recognize any power greater than their own. Thanksgiving season is a time when one should give thanks for the many rights, privileges and material things too which we enjoy, not by our own efforts, but by those gracious mercies granted by God.

Mrs. G. Wishart and Mrs. R. Ellis were hostesses for the social time at the close of the evening.

E. M. O. Talk Given at I.O.D.E. Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the Armories last Wednesday.

The flag was brought forward and the meeting was declared open for business. Reports were given by the different convenors. A successful rummage sale was held and all those responsible were thanked. Mrs. Birkenshaw reported presenting Katharine Maund of Nicholson College with a $100. scholarship. Mrs. Cunningham presented Mrs. N. D. Sayer, a new member and she was inducted and presented her with I.O.D.E. pin.

Mrs. Duffy spoke on E.M.O. and it was suggested that Col. Duffy be invited later in the season to speak. His talk was most interesting at a previous meeting at which time he showed an informative film. A full attendance is requested to see and hear more of this important subject.

Mrs. Mac Smith has five members to attend the cancer clinic on November 10th. Mrs. Refouse read a poem based on the theme of Armistice. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Duffy will place a wreath on the Cenotaph Nov. 11th. A picture of the Queen will be presented to the Sir Mackenzie Bowell school at a later date.

Mrs. Duffy had on display an impressive group of sewing and knitting done by the members. She also read a letter of appreciation from H. Q. in reference to the increase in the work of the educational department. A reminder was given re Centennial fund.

After some discussion a tentative date was set in January for the annual Winter Fantasy Ball.

Regent Mrs. E. F. Smith attended the semi-annual conference meeting held in the Royal York in Toronto and gave an interesting report of the same. During the session a wreath was laid on the cenotaph at the City Hall. Several hundred adopted schools were recorded including Canada and the West Indies.

The December meeting will take the form of a pot-luck dinner to be held in the Arm. ories.

New Ways With Vegetables

By MARY MOORE

Cauliflower, Brussels sprouts and broccoli are the subject of this little dissertation.

In our part of this wide country I can still buy these three Canadian-grown vegetables at reasonable prices, so for three dinners in succession we have had them.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Bacon and Baby Beef Liver with Onion Gravy; Rosebud Beets; Fresh Frozen Green Limas; Tomato Aspic with Cucumber Dressing; Standby Cornstarch Pudding with Fruit (see Monday); Tea.

BLUSHING CAULIFLOWER:

Wash and separate into flowerets a medium cauliflower, leaving some of the tiniest green leaves attached to the flowerets where you can manage it. Cover with boiling water, add 1 teaspoon salt and boil covered, until barely tender. Do not overcook. A slight crispness is delicious. Drain and turn into Blushing Sauce: (to serve 4) Mix together in small saucepan 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 4 teaspoons flour, 1 teaspoon sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt. Stir over low heat until blended, then stir in ¾ cup tomato juice and ¼ cup boiling water until thick.

NOTE:

This treatment transforms cauliflower into a "color" vegetable, so desirable on vegetable plates. Delicious with crumbled fish fillets.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS WITH HERBS (serves 4):

Wash well and trim outside leaves from one pint box or one lb. Brussels sprouts. Cover with boiling water and add 1/16 teaspoon baking soda. Boil, covered, until barely tender. Do not overcook. Drain well. Turn into hot vegetable dish. To 2 tablespoons butter or margarine add 1 teaspoon green onion flakes, 2 teaspoons chopped fresh dill and ½ teaspoon salt and stir over low heat until nearly bubbling. Pour over sprouts.

NOTE:

If you do not overcook the sprouts they will remain bright green. We served these with Barbecued Spareribs.

SAVORY BROCCOLI:

When I want to serve broccoli at its very best I make Hollandaise sauce to serve over it. But my object today is to give you simple inexpensive variations of these 3 cabbage-type vegetables.

About 2 lbs. broccoli will serve 4 generously after it has been washed and stems trimmed and coarse leaves discarded: Wash well, cover with boiling water, and cook until tender but not mushy. Again, be sure not to overcook or it will turn an unappetizing olive green as you well know. Drain well and turn into preheated vegetable dish. In small saucepan mix together 3 tablespoons olive or salad oil, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ clove garlic finely chopped (or ¼ teaspoon garlic powder), 3 teaspoons green onion flakes, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and ½ teaspoon sugar. When heated through pour over hot broccoli in vegetable dish. For special occasions to garnish attractively, hold sieve over broccoli and push through it one hard-cooked egg yolk. Guide the sieved yolk so that it falls near the centre of the dish. For Sunday dinner I served this with Roast Beef and Yorkshire Pudding.

Ann Landers

Mothers Have Privileges Which Must Be Respected

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a nine-year-old girl with a big problem. My father bought a brand new car two weeks ago. It is shiny and beautiful. My father said it is up to all members of the family to keep the car looking nice and new.

ANN LANDERS

The first law my father made was that nobody is supposed to eat in the new car. A neighbor boy I like very much rides to his music lesson with me every Thursday. My mother picks me up right after school.

Last Thursday Ed got into our new car eating a baloney sandwich left over from his lunch. My mother told him to finish the sandwich before he got into the car. Ed said "O.K." but I could see he was very embarrassed.

I told my mother later I didn't think she should boss other people's children. She said to write to you for advice. So I am writing. Please answer. — MONICA.

* * *

DEAR MONICA — Your mother is not "bossing other people's children." She simply told Ed he could not eat in the car, which is her privilege.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You'd better check your arithmetic with reference to a recent column about the fellow who loaned his brother $2,000 two years ago and is having trouble collecting.

You said "If his brother had paid him $25 a month the debt would have been half repaid by this time."

According to my calculations, $25 a month over a period of two years is $600 — and that's a far cry from one half of $2,000. I would love to borrow money from you, Ann, on the basis of that kind of figuring. How about it?

I enjoy your column very much. Keep up the good work. But get yourself a calculating machine. — DAVID G.M. OF NEW BRITAIN, CONNECTICUT.

* * *

DEAR DAVID — I can offer no explanation for the error except the obvious one. Stupidity.

Ten lashes with the cord of an adding machine for Granny Annie. I am utterly ashamed of myself (and the character who is supposed to check my arithmetic.)

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You missed the boat in your answer to "Toe Tapper," the woman who complained because one of her relatives is constantly asking her to "hold the phone" while she lets the dog out, answers the door, turns down the flame under the soup, and so on.

Doesn't "Toe Tapper" realize the world doesn't stop revolving when the phone rings? Kids don't suddenly become angels. The dog doesn't know he is supposed to wait until his master gets off the phone. The person at the door doesn't know whether you are on the phone or not.

Maybe the woman who is irritated because she is hanging on the line should take the hint and get off. She is the rude one, in my book.

That particular column was sent to me in a plain envelope with no signature and I think I know who sent it. Next time the witch calls I plan to cut her short and tell her I have more important things to do — like letting the dog out or answering the doorbell. — ANOTHER MOLLY.

* * *

DEAR MOLLY — If your friend reads my column, and obviously she does, you won't need to tell her anything. After she sees this letter in the paper I doubt that you'll be hearing from her.

* * *

Confidential to FINDING IT DIFFICULT TO LOVE MY NEIGHBOR — Granted. It sounds cheap and disgraceful, but nobody is asking you to love them. Pull down your own window shades and get some rest.

* * *

Confidential to YOUNG AT HEART — Congratulations. If you marry this chicken I hope your heart can take it, Dad.

Butler's Pantry Used to Teach Handicapped

REGINA (CP)—Leda Jean Davis started teaching handicapped children in the butler's pantry of a renovated Regina home 19 years ago.

"At that time some people couldn't see the point in teaching a handicapped child.

But since then, partly through Mrs. Davis's efforts, attitudes have changed, and when she retired this year she left a post at a modern, well-equipped centre.

"I'm proud of my kids," she says. "I'm thankful I've been allowed to see my students go on to university or vocational training and then take their place in society."

Her first classroom was the butler's pantry of a house used as branch headquarters by the Junior Red Cross. Classroom hours were two hours a day.

"I'd go home frustrated for I felt I couldn't accomplish anything with the children in this short time."

She launched a campaign for longer teaching hours for her disabled children and in 1947 won support from the board of education for a normal school program.

She taught as many as 16 youngsters in grades 1 to 8—"not much different from country schools."

In 1949 the Junior Red Cross moved to Regina General Hospital and she got a bigger class room and more children.

In 1953 she moved to the Regina Physical Restoration Centre and was given added staff. Eventually she was required only to teach high school grades and look after administration.

Honor Silver Cross Mothers At Annual Armistice Tea

STIRLING—On Sunday a tea was given in honor of the Silver Cross Mothers of the district at Stirling Legion Hall by the wives of the members of the Stirling Legion Branch.

A memorial wall showed the pictures of the sons who had been lost during the war. The mothers who attended as guests of honor were Mrs. M. Woods, Mrs. Russell Stapley, Mrs. Oliver Stapley, Mrs. W. Rae, Mrs. C. Hansey and Mrs. Eliza Woodbeck of Coe Hill.

Royal Canadian Legion Zone Commander Jack Rashotte and Mrs. Rashotte, Tom Purdy, and Major Fraser were special guests on this occasion. Major Fraser who is well known in Stirling for his work with Pee-Wee hockey and softball has been a patient in Belleville General Hospital for the past six months, but was permitted to attend the tea, before he returned to the hospital.

ART EMPIRE

There are almost 900 national museums, apart from the Louvre, in France.

Wreaths and poppies were the decor theme, Sunday afternoon at the Belleville Branch 99 Royal Canadian Legion Hall, as the local Silver Cross Mothers gathered to enjoy a tea in their honor.

The 13 ladies were the guests of the Col. Phay Wills Executive women's Branch, and were addressed by the Branch Padre, the Ven. Archdeacon A. S. Mc. Connell. Saluting the guests of honor, he said that at this time their personal sacrifice was the centre of a free country's thoughts. The Padre regarded the tea as a memorial service together with Armistice Day, perpetuating a feeling of fellowship, pride and sacrifice.

Mrs. Janet MacDonald, president of the Branch, welcomed the mothers while Mrs. "Billie" Kirby introduced representatives of the other veterans' organizations that included: Zone Commander Jack and Mrs. Rashotte; Branch 99 President Dick Kirby; from the Poppy Committee, Chairman Claude MacDonald, Mrs. Marion Draper and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Liddle; Mrs. Betty Hodge, president Branch 99 Ladies' Auxiliary; Miss Bessie Buckley, president ANAF Auxiliary and Bill Stone, the RCAF Association.

The Silver Cross mothers who could attend were: Mrs. J. Kelleher, Mrs. Shoener, Mrs. E. White, Mrs. A. Howe, Mrs. W. Embury, Mrs. P. Way, Mrs. J. Cunningham, Mrs. F. Parsons, Mrs. A. Sharpe, Mrs. T. Barrett, Mrs. T. Holland, Mrs. Collins and Mrs. H. Bedell.

The tea was convened by Mrs. Cathy Smith and will be continued as an annual event.

BUTTON UP!

Dear Susanna: It would suit me fine if I never had to sew another stitch, but since my whole family seem to be constantly pulling apart at the seams, that sure isn't likely to happen. Here are a few elementary rules I use that certainly make this task easier:

To avoid tangled thread, always use the end that comes from the spool when you thread your needle.

When working on light, delicate fabrics, have a cake of French chalk or magnesia handy and use it frequently on clammy hands to keep them dry.

A convenient sewing basket item is a small piece of beeswax. Then, if you find you don't have any special twisted thread for sewing buttons on tailored garments, simply run what you have through the wax. This protects the thread and keeps it from wearing away so soon. Your buttons will stay firmly in place much longer. Mrs. Eliza-beth Lyle

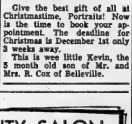
LUMBERS STUDIO BABY OF THE WEEK

Give the best gift of all at Christmastime, Portraits! Now is the time to book your appointment. The deadline for Christmas is December 1st only 3 weeks away.



This is wee little Kevin, the 5 month old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Cox of Belleville.

OUCH! SPLASH!

Dear Susanna: We have a small boy who suddenly developed an aversion to the bathtub. I didn't want the situation to progress into a war of the worlds but how was I going to get him into the tub each night in a pleasant subtle way? Well, I knew I was going to have to pull out my big guns on this one, so I decided to appeal to his animal comforts. I made that bath so appealing, it got so that I was nearly pushed aside so that he could get in

I had the room nice and warm. I used a good deep tub full of water at just the right temperature. I added sweet-smelling, fluffy bobble bath, and I launched a new boat every now and then. Bubble T-U-B was successful. — Commander-in-Chief

What more can I say? — SUSANNA

MENU Magic from the CHEF'S KITCHEN

Potatoes Are Modest

If you serve baked potatoes stashed so that their insides are steaming out of their skins, they're almost immodest . . . till you cover them with a big blob of butter. Then they're even more glamorously by adding cottage cheese or dairy sour cream, and finely ground pepper, crumbled bacon bits, chopped chives or parsley. Sometime try adding grated cheddar and parmesan too.

"Minted" Carrots

Want to know a different way to glaze carrots once you've cooked them? Just heat them for about five minutes in a few tablespoonfuls each of butter and mint jelly, or in butter and a little dried mint.

Sweet Potato Gems

Here's a dish both the children and the men of the house will love. Cook one sweet potato or yam per person, mash with butter, and shape into mounds on a cookie sheet. With a teaspoon, make a small depression in the centre of each. Brown a few minutes in a hot oven, then just before serving fill the depression with cranberry sauce.

Daily Quota

If you've been wondering just how many servings of vegetables children should enjoy every day, here's the answer. Canadian nutritionists recommend that both children and adults include one daily serving of potatoes, and at least two servings each day of other vegetables, especially the green and yellow ones, and frequently served raw and crispy.

Sleight of Hand

The smallest way to slip leftover vegetables into the menu is to serve them "au gratin." Which, translated, simply means to dress them up in your very best cream sauce, sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and grated cheese, then broil until bubbly. Our choice of cheese? Either Canadian Cheddar or Parmesan fills the bill to perfection.

Gourmet Touch

Here's a new twist for serving hot green beans or spinach to guests. Just blend 1 or 2 tablespoons of light table cream and about ¼ teaspoon celery seeds into a 4-ounce package of soft cream cheese. Then stir the cheese into the hot cooked vegetables and heat carefully until the cheese melts.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER

As a participation sport for adults, hockey is far behind curling, golf, bowling and a number of others.

But, as crowds at hockey rinks shrink year by year, more and more of the ex-fans appear to be donning skates, at least in this neck of the woods.

"House league" type operations are taking up a good deal of the ice time in Memorial Arena these days.

There are four such leagues that we know of going full swing right now — and that's just in the Belleville rink.

Few of the players will win awards as "athletes of the year" or take a crack at breaking into one of the NHL club lineups next year.

But the boys, and we use that term loosely, since some of the players make Jack Benny look like a miner in the age department, are having themselves a ball.

Two of these leagues operate on Sundays.

The Northern Electric Inter-Department loop has four teams in action every Sunday morning, from 10.45 to 12.45. Teams are the Flyers, Comets, Indians and Hornets. The N.E. loop is a regular, operating here for many seasons. In schedule openers Sunday, Comets topped the Hornets 6-3 and Flyers clipped the Indians 5-4.

Later on Sundays, the new "Gas House" League takes over for games at 8.00 and 9.00 p.m. There was some misunderstanding about the names and entries when the league executive released its schedule last week. The teams are officially: Marysville, Mulroney's Sunoco, Joyce Realty (not Business Men) and the Kometes (not Circle TV). In opening games this week, Jayces whipped Marysville 8-2 and Mulroney's slipped Kometes 6-5.

Moving to Monday nights, the Interdepartmental league, also with four teams, takes to the ice for games at 8.00 and 9.00 o'clock. Entries in this league are the Public Utilities, Police Department, Public Works and the Ontario Intelligencer. Players must be employed by the team's backer in order to play.

Thursday nights see the Quinte Hockey League stage its weekly double-header. Games are played at 8.00 and 9.15 p.m. Teams participating this year are the Ter-Haar Daubers, SACO (Stephens-Adamson), Rossmore and Horlock Electrics.

Teams in these leagues pick up their followers quickly and most of the time they are real die-hards. A casual drop-off at the rink might think the Hawks and Leafs were playing, the way some of the fans lend vocal support to their favorites.

As in any sport league, the secret of success is balance. It is even more important in the house leagues. Everybody likes to win but the game is the key thing.

Most of the groups have very strict rules of eligibility, making ex-OHA players wait out a year or two before being allowed to play.

The league executives do their best to keep it clean. Suspensions and fines are the order of the day for those who stray from the rules of sportsmanship.

Each group has a few different rules but each is trying for the same thing: good recreation for those who prefer a hockey stick to a curling broom.

We may have missed a league or two in the above but these are the only schedules we have right now.

Surrounding towns, such as Trenton, also have much hockey along these lines. The addition of artificial ice in places like Wellington and Tweed is adding to the growing list of those who would rather play than watch.

The Prince Edward North Shore League, for one, moved its scene of operations to Wellington last year. It will play there again this year, with Melville, Demorestville, Picton Siler, Cherry Valley and Albury taking part. Games are played each Thursday at 7.00 and 8.30 p.m.

With so many such leagues operating, it might prove interesting next spring, providing the various championships are settled early enough, to see some sort of knock-out tournament staged

Champions from each league could battle it out, elimination style, with the title of "House League Champions" going to the winners.

It's just a thought but we do think it might prove interesting.

P.S.: To the various league publicity men . . . results must be in this office early the morning after games in order to be published.

TKO In Third

Chuvalo Has Easy Win

HULL, Que. (CP)' — A few hours before Monday night's fight a reporter asked George Chuvalo if he was disappointed at having to miss the football playoff on television.

"What time does it start?" Chuvalo asked, and was told that it was at the same time as his scheduled 10-round bout against Calvin Butler of Cleveland.

"Heck, I'll miss the kickoff," Chuvalo said, without a trace of a smile.

The Canadian heavyweight champion was only a bit off. He had his technical knockout victory wrapped up at 2:35 of the third round and caught the Western Football Conference semi-final midway through the first quarter.

Most of the Hull-Ottawa area fight fans stayed home and caught it all. Only 1,594 attended the fight.

Butler, a last-minute replacement for Don Warner of Philadelphia who signed for the bout but didn't show up backed away from Chuvalo for two rounds but was caught by a series of savage body blows in the third and crimpled three times before the referee called it off.

The 218-pound Cleveland Negro, who was previously knocked out eight times in 19 fights, looked flabby. Chuvalo, who had been in training most of the time since his victory last month over Doug Jones of New York, was a rock-hard 211 pounds.

Stampeders Crush Roughriders 51-6

By BOB TRIMBEE

CALGARY (CP) — Undermanned Calgary Stampeders blasted aside a Saskatchewan Roughriders' jinx Monday night en route to a crushing 51-6 victory that gave Calgary a berth in the Western Football Conference final.

The victory before 18,455 fans and Stampeders' final 75-40 edge in the two game tots, point semi-final were the most one-sided since the WFC expanded to five teams in 1954.

Calgary will play the best-of-three final against British Columbia Lions at home Saturday at 4 p.m. EST. The second game is scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 18, at 11 p.m. in Vancouver. If a third game is needed it will be played Sunday, Nov. 22, at 5 p.m. also in Vancouver. All will be televised nationally, the first by CBC and the others by CTV.

There was no stopping the Stampeders Monday night even though Calgary played two men under the maximum 30-player roster limit because of injuries. The Riders held a 6-0 first quarter margin entering the game, but Calgary pulled ahead by the end of the first half and went ahead to stay early in the third quarter.

Calgary held quarter margins of 10-6, 15-6 and 31-6 before it turned the game into a rout with a 20-point outburst in the final 15 minutes.

SCORED TWICE

Calgary quarterback Bobby Taylor gathered in two touchdown passes and halfback Jim D'Orazio caught one. Fullback Love Coleman and quarterback Eagle Day also scored on two-yard runs. Defensive end Jim Furlong got Calgary's sixth touchdown late in the game after he recovered a fumble.

Halfback Larry Robinson, the league's top scorer during the regular season, completed Calgary's scoring with two field goals, five converts and four singles.

Fullback George Reed bulled over from two yards out for an unconverted Saskatchewan touchdown after three minutes of play.

It was aided by a fumble by safety Harvey Wylie on a punt and two consecutive pass interference penalties that moved the ball 45 yards to the Calgary two.

"We were never more ready mentally," said Calgary coach Bobby Dobbs, who lasted the bitter pill of defeat in both 1962 and 1963 when Calgary appeared almost certain of victory.

"I tell you we just weren't going to be beaten. Our boys were ready, real ready."

'KNOCKED GOOFY'

Coach Bob Shaw of the Riders acknowledged Stampeders' hard-hitting after the game—"two or three . . . guys were knocked goofy."

Quarterback Ron Lancaster, who picked apart Calgary a year ago and again Saturday in the series opened when he completed 28 of 35 pass attempts, couldn't get untracked in the second game. He had five passes intercepted and was able to complete only eight of 24 for 97 yards.

"We just couldn't move the ball on offence and naturally that put too much pressure on our defence," he said after the game.

"They were really hitting. That Coleman . . . I haven't seen him run that hard a years."

It was Coleman's running, 159 yards on 23 carries, and Day's passing, 214 yards on 16 completions in 26 attempts, that sparked Calgary.

Dobbs said Stampeders came out of the game without further injuries. He predicted his club would use the same lions in the final.

Saskatchewan rushed 65 for 29 first downs on Day's rushing and 237 passing Day, Coleman and Jerry Keeling combined to click on 16 of 28 pass attempts.

Saskatchewan rushed 65 yards and, with the 97 yards passing, had 12 first downs.

Player, Fan Behavior Slips

English Soccer Faces Problems

LONDON (Reuters) — England's soccer administrators, who have the task of organizing the 1966 World Cup, must be worried about the unsavory image being presented to the world by the black record of incidents in this season's league soccer.

Spectator and player behavior is the worst in many years, with 26 players being sent off so far this season.

New depths were reached last Saturday when the First Division match between Everton and Leeds was stopped for nearly 10 minutes by the referee so that the players could "cool off." Tempers had flared from the start and Everton's left-back Sandy Brown was sent off after only four minutes.

The 43,000 fans screamed abuse, booed and whistled. Apple cores, coins and other missiles were thrown toward the field. After the game, extra police had to be called to dispense angry fans outside the dressing room entrances.

NEVER DONE BEFORE

The referee's cooling-off recess, called on two occasions, was unprecedented in English league soccer, but much is happening which causes grave concern.

Some blame the removal of the maximum wage limit for players. It is claimed that the big money, usually based on league position and performances, is tempting players to win at all costs.

Managers also have come under fire. With the remarkable turnover in managers, the scapegoats for poor performances, it is being said that some urge their players to extreme methods in order to produce results and safeguard their jobs.

Others point accusing fingers at the referees. Officials have been instructed to enforce the rules more rigidly. The result is that more players have been sent off and suspensions of guilty players have been longer. But the game has not become any cleaner.

This is the problem which faces England's soccer chiefs—the men who must prove to the world that England is capable of staging soccer's showpiece, the World Cup, without the threat of hooliganism by spectators, the lowering of playing standards or lack of efficient control by officials both on and off the field.

IMPOSES STRAIN

It also imposes a strain on the selectors and England team boss, Alf Ramsey. The England selectors were out ill force Saturday to report on candidates for the team to meet Wales at Wembley Nov. 18.

Ramsey is to announce his team today and some changes are likely after England's disappointing display against Belgium two weeks ago.

England has slumped badly in the international field, and the finals of the World Cup are only 18 months away.

After the Welsh match, England meets Holland in Amsterdam and is then without a game until it plays Scotland next April. Therefore, Ramsey might be prepared to blood new talent in a match which should not extend England.

One key man who probably will be missing is West Ham skipper Bobby Moore, who entered hospital during the weekend for a groin injury.

PRAY TO MECCA

Devout Moslems are required to pray towards Mecca five times each day, and all mosques are oriented towards Mecca when built.

OMHA Games Here

The OMHA schedules for five divisions were made available here yesterday and show Belleville entries in all five of the Association's divisions.

First scheduled games will be played here in Memorial Arena Wednesday nights, in the bantam and midget sections. Gananoque teams will be here against Belleville Oddfellows for bantam play at 8:00 and midget play at 9:00 p.m.

It is expected Belleville novice and peewee teams will have exhibition games, possibly against Napanee, earlier in the evening.

The novice division, changed from "squirt," does not open until Saturday, November 21, when Belleville visits Wellington and Napanee goes to Picton.

The peewee division starts this Saturday, November 14, with Belleville at Picton and Napanee at Gananoque. Belleville Rollins' first home game will be against Gananoque on Wednesday, November 18.

In the juvenile section, Wellington will open the schedule here in Belleville on Sunday against the city Twillers. That game is scheduled for 4:30 p.m.

Marlies Have Top Scorers

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros, tied for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings, have three of the league's four top scorers.

Paul Laurent of the Marlboros has a one-point edge over teammate Brit Selby and Bobby Orr of the league-leading Oshawa Generals.

Laurent has 12 goals and 13 assists for 25 points.

Selby with 14 goals and 10 assists, and Orr, 10 goals and 14 assists, are two points ahead of Marlboros' Mike Corrigan.

Hernie Parent and Doug Favell of Niagara Falls Flyers, tied for second place with Marlboros, lead the goaltenders in 13 goals in five games, a 2.6 average.

Rose To Occasion

Francis Praises Plante

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP)—"He can still rise to the occasion," Emile Francis said Monday, referring to the sensational comeback of Jacques Plante which has thrust the flamboyant goalie back into the National Hockey League spotlight.

"Being able to come through when the chips are down in such a dramatic way is what separates the great from the ordinary and Plante showed that he still can do that," added Francis, new general manager of New York Rangers.

The 35-year-old Plante, sent to Baltimore of the American League at the season's start after compiling an NHL record that earned him ranking among the all-time greats, blanked the champion Toronto Maple Leafs 1-0 Saturday night for his 62nd big league shutout.

He was recalled from Baltimore to replace the injured Marcel Paille.

"I didn't get to Toronto until after 2 p.m. Saturday and there was just enough time to eat and get a little rest," Plante said. "Actually, the boys were really skating. It's a much improved team and I was really surprised."

SET RECORD WITH HABS

Plante set an NHL record by winning the Vezina Trophy five straight times with Montreal Canadiens. Montreal traded him to New York in June, 1963.

"You know, I think this was my first shutout in Toronto since the 1959 - 60 playoffs," Plante recalled. "It was in the last game of the finals and gave us our fifth straight Stanley Cup. But Saturday night's game was a big thrill."

"Any time you win 1-0 in this league the pressure has to be on all game," said Francis, "and considering what this guy's been through recently the best was on him every more."

Plante was reported to have made uncomplimentary remarks about the Rangers while in Baltimore, but later stated he had been quoted out of context.

"You never can tell what might happen in hockey. Why I might even win another Vezina Trophy this year," chuckled Plante.

Mr. Liston's Shoulder Declared Fit

Both Said Ready

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP) — Sonny Liston's left shoulder has been declared fit for his heavyweight title rematch with champion Cassius Clay Nov. 16 but the champion already has proclaimed himself the winner and is looking for the rabbit—former champion Floyd Patterson.

Both Clay and Liston were pronounced in perfect condition by Dr. Nathan Shapiro, Massachusetts Boxing Commission physician, at a preliminary medical check Monday.

Minutes earlier, Clay staged one of his side shows, snarling traffic on Commonwealth Avenue and drawing the attention he sought in a mock hunt for The Big Bear, his name for Liston.

Chief concern of Dr. Shapiro's examination was the left shoulder which was injured and caused Liston to lose his title to Clay after six rounds in Miami last February.

Liston, a 9-to-5 favorite in the Las Vegas line, said "I would say I'd win in less than 15 rounds. I'm in better shape than I've ever been in my life. Beyond that I leave the talking up to Clay."

Clay who did not confront Liston face-to-face but did run alongside his car as the latter arrived and left, again predicted he would beat Liston in nine rounds, "maybe before that." He raised nine fingers for the cameramen and hailed it as "another great prediction."

"I know we are going to win. After we win we want the rabbit—Patterson. I think of Liston as the hunter and Patterson as the rabbit," Clay said.

Boxing commission chairman Herman Greenberg reminded newspaper men that the contract included a clause that the winner of the coming fight must meet one of the top four ranked, contenders and that $20,000 of the winner's purse caused Liston to lose his title to Clay after six rounds in Miami last February.

Liston, a 9-to-5 favorite in the Las Vegas line, said "I would say I'd win in less than 15 rounds. I'm in better shape than

Tight-Fisted Defences Red Wings' Forte

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tight-fisted defences rather than a superior offence seems to be the reason for Detroit Red Wings' early-season success in the National Hockey League.

Detroit leads the league by three points, has won its last five games and hasn't been beaten in its last eight.

Official NHL statistics released today show Detroit has been scored on only 16 times in the team's first 10 games, giving the Wings a good spread in this department.

Detroit goalie Roger Crozier's 1.6 goals-against average is best in the NHL and he leads in shoutouts with three.

On the other hand, only New York Rangers and Boston Bruins have scored fewer goals.

Detroit is on top of the NHL with 15 points. Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens are tied for second with 12 each. Chicago Black Hawks and Rangers are tied for fourth with 11 points and Boston trails the league with five.

BRUINS NOW SCORING

Bruins, after playing their first nine games without a win, have won their last two, both over Chicago at Boston.

Bobby Hull of Chicago was the only player among the previdual scoring race to gain much vidual scoring race to gain much ground. He scored his eighth goal—best in the league—and added two assists. This permitted him to move from fourth place to second place with 12 points.

Teammate Stan Mikita continues to head the scoring parade picking up his 12th assist—best in the league—to go with his previous four goals for a total of 16 points.

The biggest scoring gains of the week were by Detroit's Norm Ullman and Phil Esposito of Chicago, each picking up two goals and two assists. Ullman now has 10 points and is tied with Toronto's Andy Bathgate for fourth place. Esposito now has seven points.

Toronto's Frank Mahovlich didn't gain a point in the week's play and slipped to third place with 11 points. Alex Delvecchio of Detroit and defenceman Kent Douglas of Toronto are tied for sixth place with nine points each.

Mikita is the most penalized player in the league with 40 minutes, two more than Dickie Moore of Toronto. Toronto is the most penalized team with 224 minutes.

Punch Upset, Cracks Down

Huskies Defend Title

CALGARY (CP) — Coach Joe Sutton hopes his Edmonton Huskies can successfully defend their Canadian junior football title Wednesday without too many head-on crashes with the big Montreal Notre Dame de Grace Maple Leafs.

"We'll be running safe, primarily," Hutton says. "We don't want to run headlong into those fellows any oftener than we have to."

His concern is understandable —the average weight of the Montreal squad is 225 pounds, considerably more than the Edmonton players.

But Montreal players were bigger in 1962 and 1963 and the Huskies outplayed them to win the Little Grey Cup in two consecutive years. They're looking for an unprecedented third consecutive win.

The game starts here at 4 p.m. EST with proceeds going to the Shriners' Crippled Childrens Hospital in Winnipeg.

Although his club took a 47-3 lacing last year from the Huskies, Montreal coach George Economides is more confident this year.

"We haven't got the quitters we had a year ago," he says He'd gained a berth in the Canadian final with a come-from-behind 34-28 victory over Windsor, Ont. AKO.

DROPS SUIT

MARTINES, Calif. (AP) — Curt Flood, centre fielder for the baseball world champions, St. Louis Cardinals, dropped his injunction suit Monday against persons who threatened to keep him out of his rented home in the East San Francisco Bay suburb of Alamo. Flood's lawyer, said "no further action is anticipated unless George C. Pian and Constance Oliver attempt to evict Flood and his family."

TORONTO (CP) — Apparently upset by Toronto Maple Leafs' 1-0 loss to New York Rangers Saturday night, manager-coach Punch Imlach broke up his top scoring line introduced a goaltender rotation system and pushed the team through a double workout Monday.

Terry Sawchuk will face his former teammates when Detroit comes to Maple Leaf Gardens Wednesday night but the Red Wings won't have to contend with the line of Andy Bathgate, Frank Mahovlich and Ron Ellis which has scored 14 of Leafs' 32 goals so far this season.

Don McKenney will replace Bathgate at centre while further shuffling will depend on whether Dave Keon's leg injury responds to treatment. The fleet centre missed Saturday's game.

"What I'm looking for is better balance," Imlach said. "If I spread them around I may get more goals."

If Keon plays, he will centre for Bathgate and Red Kelly. If not, Bathgate will centre the line of Kelly and Jim Pappin. Imlach said.

The move leaves Bill Harris, Ron Stewart and Eddie Shack as either extras or a fourth forward line depending on how the game goes.

Chance Award Winner

BOSTON (AP) — Right-hander Dean Chance, the reformed Los Angeles Angel who fashioned baseball's lowest earned - run average among starters, was named the Cy Young Award winner Monday as the best pitcher of 1964.

Receiving 11 of the 20 votes cast by a special committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America, Chance became the third successive Los Angeles hurler to be selected for the honor.

He succeeds Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, who received one vote despite the fact he was injured part of the season. The Dodgers' Don Drysdale was the 1962 winner.

Larry Jackson of Chicago Cubs, winningest pitcher in the majors with 24 victories, was named on the other two ballots.

Chance used a fastball and slider to compile a 20-9 record and a 1.65 ERA. Chance also had the most shutouts in the majors—11—and the most complete games in the American League—15.

OHA Rules Stretched ?

Investigate Junior Payments

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association Junior Council decided Monday to set up a committee to investigate and report on payments made by junior A clubs to obtain the release of junior B players.

The decision followed a charge by Jim Gregory, manager-coach of Toronto Marlboros that some clubs have paid more than $300. The association has a rule prohibiting payments of more than $300 for the release of a junior B player.

The committee will consist of Gregory, Wren Blair, manager of Oshawa Generals, and Ken Campbell of St. Catharines Black Hawks.

In other business at the council's monthly meeting, Leighton (Hap) Emms, owner - manager of Niagara Falls Flyers, said rumors of kickbacks and violations of the OHA junior salary schedule have been reported.

Every manager present said he had filed affidavits with each player's contract sent to the league's head office, as required. The maximum junior salary is $60 a week or, in the case of players attending school, $30 a week plus school expenses.

Matt Leiden and Neil Hezzlewood, holders of the Oshawa junior franchise, dormant since fire destroyed the Oshawa arena in 1953, notified the council that they have turned the franchise over to a new limited company now operating the Oshawa club. Both men are shareholders in the company.

Ralph Sazio Has Respect For Ottawa

HAMILTON (CP) — Ralph Sazio, head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, said Monday he could detect no signs of a slump in Ottawa Rough Riders when he watched them defeat Montreal Alouettes 27-0 in the Eastern Football Conference sudden-death semi-final Saturday.

Riders, who were toppled out o. first place late in the season by the Tiger-Cats, meet the Hamilton club in the first game of two-game total-point EFC final Saturday.

"I've always been impressed by the Ottawa team," Sazio said in an interview. "We're going in, to have our hands full when we meet them."

Bills Own Impressive Statistics

NEW YORK (AP) — Buffalo's all-winning Bills, the only unbeaten team in U.S. big-league pro football, can back up a perfect 9-0 record with an impressive set of statistics.

Buffalo leads in rushing with an average of 162.8 yards a game compared to 118.7 by San Diego Chargers, second - best. The Bills rate third in passing with a 248.2-yard average, trailing Houston, 255.2, and Oakland Raiders, 254.3.

The Bills are also first in total defence, having allowed 278.1 yards a game, and have allowed the fewest touchdowns passing, 10.

Canada Second
Nations Cup Won By U.S.

NEW YORK (AP)—The U.S. equestrian team rolled to its eighth victory in 10 international events by winning the Nations Cup in the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

The Nations Cup is the most important test of the show for the international teams and coach Bert de Nemethy's squad had as little trouble that Bill Steinkraus of Noroton, Conn., did not even bother to make his second jaunt around the course.

It was a team effort with each of the four riders covering the course twice, the best three scores to count in the final tally.

The United States finished with a low total of four faults. Then came Canada with 16, Argentina and Brazil with 28 each and Mexico with 67.

The U.S. now has 127 points in the race for the team championship. Canada is second with 76. Then come Argentina with 33 Mexico with 14 and Brazil with 13.

Kathy Kusner of Arlington, Va., remains the leading rider with 32 points. Steinkraus is second with 30 and Jim Day of Toronto—the only rider able to pierce the solid U.S. armor—is third with 26.

Bears May Meet Gaels In Kingston

EDMONTON (CP) — There's a good chance the University of Alberta Golden Bears will play Queen's University Golden Gaels in a post-season intercollegiate golden bowl game this year, Ed Zemrau, director of athletics at the University of Alberta, said Monday.

He said the Golden Bears have been challenged by the Gaels and the University of Alberta men's athletic board met Monday to approve acceptance of the challenge.

If agreement is reached, the game between the western and eastern intercollegiate champions will be played in Kingston, Saturday, Nov. 21.

Big CBC Project
'Old Sweats' Relive Armistice Experiences

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP)—Soon after the dawn of Nov. 11, 1918, as young Georges Lecope of Mons went walking to see the effects of an Allied shelling of the day before, Canadian artillery began emerging from the mists beside a ditch.

They were chasing the retreating Germans in those last pre-armistice hours of the First World War. But three young lieutenants stopped long enough to share their white bread with the boy's parents and as the news came up the line, to tell them that their German masters of yesterday had used for a cease-fire that was to start at 11 o'clock.

The incident—and myriads of others from that bygone war—are relived through the voices of the dwindling survivors in a radio series the CBC starts on Armistice Day, 1964. Eight hundred hours of tape recordings from 600 old sweats have been boiled down into 17 one-hour programs to continue a prosperous live Sundays after Nov. 11.

The project, largest tape recording and editing job ever undertaken by the CBC, has been under way for two years. Some 42 miles of tape has piles up, with stacks of transcripts and index books. Interviewing crews have travelled many thousands of miles in Canada, France, Belgium and Belgium.

SOME HAVE DIED

It has been, in a way a race against the man with the scythe. "The older and staunchest soldiers do not live forever, and the time to record their stories was now," says A. E. (Bert) Powley, in charge of CBC historical broadcasts. Some of those heard on the programs will be voices from the grave.

Mr. Powley followed through on a suggestion in the fall of 1960 from Dan McArthur, then director, of special program projects for the CBC, who felt the time was narrowing for getting a living record from the men who emerged from the 1914-18 war. A long and involved search for representatives of all facets of Canada's participation followed.

In the result, the contributors represent all of the 40 infantry battalions of the Canadian Corps and their supporting arms, from generals to mud-slogger. The interviews cover the period from the first enlistments in 1914 to the entry of the Canadians into Mons.

Bits of history turned up in roundabout ways, like the incident of the lieutenants and young Georges Lecope. Capt. John Hunsdell, veteran and editor of The Legionary at Ottawa, tipped the researchers off to this story. At Mons, the now elderly M. Lecope provided the names of his soldier friends, but with some outdated addresses.

OFFICERS FOUND

The lieutenants proved to be C. H. Mitchell, a retired druggist at St. Catharines, Ont., who was first located by Mr Powley in the St. Catharines phone book and who steered him onto Joe O'Neill, now a retired business man of Bowmanville, Ont., and Harold Stuart, who had left his pre-war home of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and now was chief forest ranger at Swastika, Ont.

Also through a tip from Capt. Hunsdell, the project rediscovered Gen. Raymond Brutinel, a long-forgotten military genius of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. A millionaire French army reservist caught in Canada at the outbreak of war, he joined the Canadian army and organized and led its then - revolutionary Automobile Machine-Gun Brigade, the precursor of modern motorized warfare.

Gen. Brutinel was located at his chateau in the south of France and taped thousands of words at several sittings including fascinating and hitherto-little priceless accounts of his dealings with the 19th century minded brass including Lord Kitchener, who didn't think much of mobile firepower.

DIED IN SUPPRESSION

His story was taken down just in time for he d. Dec. 21, his obituary bringing him to the notice of millions of Canadians for the first time. Major-Gen. F. F. Worthington, a Brutinel disciple in the motor unit and Second World War commander of the Armored Division, regarded him as the father of armored warfare.

Another old soldier with a story, and who died after recording it for the series, was Col. George Little of London, Ont. A captain in the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, he returned from leave in September, 1918, to find himself in command of the unit because all his seniors had been shot down. He led the Patricias through the remainder of Canada's Hundred Days to the end of the war.

An old Patricia who had leapfrogged to temporary command of the battalion at an even more junior rank was located in Glasgow, Scotland. He was W. H. Niven, a Briton like many of the Patricias and a career colonel. The Patricias were shattered at the battle of Frezenburg Ridge in 1915, with all the senior officers killed or wounded, and it was young Lieut. Niven who brought out the 50 men they could muster.

Princess Patricia herself, daughter of Governor-General the Duke of Connaught and now Lady Patricia Ramsey, has made a contribution to the series. She tells of the raising of the unit and her sewing of its colors.

Child Star Jackie Cooper TV Business Man Now

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The name conjures images of gaiety amid the plush spaciousness of his executive suite. He is producer-host of one of television's biggest enterprises—$64,000,000 gross business last year.

But he is still called Jackie Cooper.

For six months, the onetime "Skippy" has been functioning as studio head for Screen Gems of TV giant Columbia Pictures. Hazel, The Farmer's Daughter and the hit of the 1964-65 season, Bewitched.

He disclaims any credit for these shows, crediting it to the finishing stages of Bewitched. The Cooper concern is for the future, and for that he brishes with confidence.

"We'll have between six and eight pilots which we'll submission for next season's show," he declared. "These are pilots in which we have private I don't expect all of them to sell, but I think a good proportion might."

He added that one of his missions at Screen Gems has been to diversify its product. Whereas the firm has previously specialized in domestic comedies, Jackie now has projects for half-hour dramas (which he believes will be the new trend), specials (upcoming: Inger Stevens' tour of Sweden, daytime serials on tape, game shows and sports presentations (under contract: Tony Lema).

BECOMES EXECUTIVE

The executive turn in Jackie's career is something he has planned through not in the way it happened.

"I had hoped to head a production unit," he explained, "but I thought I would probably have to build it through my own company, creating one or three shows. The Screen Gems offer was a happy surprise."

The Jackie Cooper saga is a story of how to survive in childhood success. Many child stars in films never sustain their success as adults—possibly because they try to remain in films.

When there was scant demand for Jackie's services in Hollywood after the war, he went to New York to sharpen his talents on the stage, then in television.

"I didn't want to be a has-been actor to leave live TV," he said, "so I came back here to do a filmed series, The People's Choice. I never enjoyed doing the show, not a single day of it But I accomplished what I wanted.

"I did enjoy an occasional show of firmness, and I liked being on the production end. Now that I'm in this job, I do miss directing now and then. Miss acting? Not a bit.

"I won't say I'll never act again, because that would be a foolish prediction. But after 10 years—I started when I was two years old—I think I've had my share. There's not much that could lure me back."

EXPERIENCE USEFUL

Jackie finds his acting experience handy in dealing with networks, agencies and sponsors And, as a fellow creator, he can understand the problems of actors, writers and directors.

He is a roving executive, journeying to the selling fields of Madison Avenue every two weeks or so, popping into his producers' offices.

"I'm not a desk man," he admitted, "the only things that bug me about this job are answering the mail and being tied to a telephone. Otherwise it's all great."

Nerve Cut In Ford's Left Arm

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors cut a nerve in Whitey Ford's left arm during a 3½-hour operation Monday and a hospital spokesman said the New York Yankee pitcher should be throwing the ball again by spring training next year.

Ford will be in the hospital about a week.

A spokesman said a sympathetic nerve which supplies the vascular artery was cut allowing the blood to flow more freely to the arm.

The shoulder was not entered during the operation, the spokesman said, and therefore Ford's muscular coordination should be entirely normal.

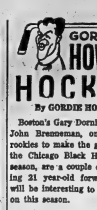
The operation was performed by Dr. Denton Cooley, a heart surgeon.

Gun Bow Ready To Meet Kelso

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — Gun Bow received an A-plus in his final examination Monday.

Then trainer Eddie Neloy pronounced the fleet American-owned four-year-old ready for the test in which he will again clash with Kelso, four - time Horse of the Year, and six - time champion handicap foals in the 13th running of the $150,000 Washington, D.C., international at Laurel.

The 1½-mile race will be run Wednesday over Laurel's rock like grass course for a $80,000 awaiting the winner. Post time is 3:45 p.m.



Gun Bow, leading contender to supplant Kelso as the American champion, had his third schooling session Monday at the Newsmarket tape barrier which will require the enclosed starting gate used in the U.S.

Kelso, who 10 days ago became the world's leading money winner with a bank account of $1,803,362, has finished second in all three of his starts in the International.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Boston's Gary Dornhoefer and John Brememan, one of the rookies to make the grade with the Chicago Black Hawks this season, are a couple of promising 21 year-old forwards who will be interesting to keep tabs on this season.

Dornhoefer is a big, rangy individual (6-feet-1 170 pounds). He has a deceiving skating style. He doesn't appear to be going anywhere. Yet when you're striding, it is hard to keep up with him.

A native of Kitchener, Dornhoefer got his start as a pro with Providence in the central league last season. After he scored 23 goals in 70 games, Boston called him up.

If I'm not mistaken, I saw him score his first National Hockey League goal. He made it against us in a game at Boston Gardens.

His goal was one of those simple things that make scoring look so easy. He gained control of the puck and as the play moved down the ice, Gary's check moved away from him.

Actually, Gary was a little slow coming out. A Boston forward intercepted a pass, took a shot and hit the net. Gary was right there to get the rebound with half the net behind for his flip.

By season's end, he had a total of 12 goals in 32 games. I only collected seven goals in 58 games In my first NHL season.

Brenneman is a left wing. He's from Fort Erie. He has made his pro debut in the Central League last season. He won the All Star honors, playing for St. Louis. He counted 75 points on 29 goals, 47 assists.

One defencemen remarked on Brenneman's speed after we played him in pre-season exhibition games at Buffalo. In a weekend-home and home series we split with the Hawks.

After you chase him around a little, you realize, just how fast he is. He also can handle the puck pretty well. He throws his weight around a little, too, which proves he's not afraid of the tough going.

Sometimes these youngsters walk all over you in the early days in training camp. They're young, have the legs. Then the old timers catch up with them in conditioning. These are a couple of youngsters I predict will give everybody trouble.

Clair Trys To Keep Riders 'Up'

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders hit the field for a long workout Monday with head coach Frank Clair determined to keep the club "up" for that key game next Saturday against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Riders polished off Montreal Alouettes 21-7 Saturday in the Eastern Footb all Conference sudden-death semi-final. That qualified them for the two-game total-points final against Ticats which opens here and switches to Hamilton Nov. 21.

It still is uncertain whether Whit Tucker, the Riders' brilliant pass-receiver, will be in the lineup Saturday. He missed the game against Montreal with what was diagnosed as a touch of the sciatic nerve. It affects his left leg.

Tucker reported he was feeling better Monday but it's doubtful whether he will be fit for the first clash with Hamilton.

Teats, who finished first in the regular schedule by whipping Riders twice late in the season, are the favorites for Saturday's game which starts at 1 p.m. EST. It will be carried on the CTV national network.

Jonathan Winters Makes Hit With First Hour-Long Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (CAP) — A pair of late starters joined the season's new television programs Monday night — NBC's Jonathan Winters in his first special and ABC's Les Crane, who hopes to compete with Johnny Carson for late viewers.

Winters, who has an imaginative and way-out style, opened his hour-long show brilliantly. He began with characterizations of such personalities as French President de Gaulle, former Soviet premier Khrushchev, and Cary Grant. Then he brought on a dear little old lacy carrying an apple pie, followed by two cute children, one carrying a flag.

This was followed by a bright, spontaneous satire on all those "prairie schooner" shows, with Winters playing the wagon master at his outrageous best.

Subsequent bits did not prove as humorous.

ABCs favorite adjective in describing Les Crane and his new nightly conversation show is "explosive." It appeared, unfortunately, that somebody forgot to keep the fuse dry for the first show, at least.

Adopted Children Need Not Be Insecure, Undisciplined

DEAR DORIS — Two years ago we adopted a sweet child who is now two and a half years old. His parents were in an accident and died, and my husband and I were fortunate enough to be able to adopt him. My teen-age son and daughter have accepted our baby boy and love him dearly as we all do, but the thing that worries us all is how and when to tell him he is adopted.

Recently I visited friends who adopted three children, and even though these children have been loved and live in a Christian home, they are full of insecurities and doubts as to why they were given up by their parents. Frequently they answered back, when corrected, telling the parents that they were not their real mother and father because they were not born of them.

I want to avoid all this. I want our lovely boy to stay as secure and happy as he is,now.

DORIS CLARK

I feel with your experience as a Canadian social worker you may be able to offer some advice that I can bear in mind when the time comes to tell my boy, without having him lose his love for us, or his security shattered. — AMERICAN READER.

DEAR AMERICAN — Begin by using the word "adopted" now, in connection with some endearing situation. Explain only a little, until he asks for more. By the time he goes to school he needs to be aware of his status, so that no schoolboy can spring it on him accusingly.

The thing is to equate "belonging", not with the physical act of birth, but with day-to-day care. The parents who love and nurture, discipline and teach, are a child's parents in a very real sense.

In the family you describe, the children were testing the parents for a reaction, but the parents panicked when they should have serenely carried out their discipline. This left everybody insecure. The more it seems is you that this boy belongs to you, the more he will think so too.

I am sending you the names of some helpful books on the subject.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Maybe this will be of help to mother of cross-eyed baby and many others: You can get unbreakable glasses. They cost a little more, but I find them worth it. You can also get insurance against accident. — A READER.

DEAR READER — Glad to hear it. I checked on this and find that toughened lenses are recommended for anyone under 16. The glass is similar to that used in factory goggles: will only break under extreme stress, and even then won't shatter. For tiny tots, they are equipped with tie-ons.

All for just a couple of dollars more, including, in some arrangements, insurance against accident.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS — BY PATRICIA LEWIS

SHARING AN APARTMENT

Sharing an apartment with another girl may work out fine economically, but sometimes it can have a shattering effect on the nervous system.

By pooling resources, a couple of career girls often can afford a larger apartment in a better neighborhood than if either tried to go it alone. The arrangement is well-nigh perfect when each does her part of the chores and is considerate of the other's privacy and comfort.

But if one shirks her duties, is noisy and untidy, the other pays a high price for her savings, especially when she is about to have a nervous breakdown as a result.

BOTH ROOMATES PITCH IN

Sharing an apartment can be fun, when both roommates pitch in and resolve to make the best of it. There are pitfalls, but good manners can help overcome most of them.

Expenses can be a rub, so it's best to set up a budget before setting up housekeeping. The rent naturally is split 50-50, but there also should be a kitty for regular expenses such as gas, electricity and telephone. If one of the roommates has a mania for calling long distance or making a raft of toll calls each day, it's only fair that she keep track of them and not make the other foot half the bill for such extravagance.

A common food fund usually helps the economy along and should be set up to stock the cupboard and refrigerator with staples. Breakfasts and routine dinners come out of this envelope. But if one entertains more often than the other, again it is only fair for the girl giving frequent dinner parties to pay for the trimmings.

With each girl bewing to a busy time schedule, household chores have to be molded into a workable routine. If one leaves for work earlier than the other, the early bird can make the beds and do the dusting while the other makes the coffee. The latter also can do the dishes and straightening before she, too, takes off for the office, making sure she drops the garbage bag down the incinerator on the way to the elevator.

A well-mannered roommate also learns to respect the other's privacy, and, certainly, would never dream of going through another's bureau or closet or "borrowing" something without asking permission. A shared dressing table and-or bathroom cabinet can also be a stumbling block, but if roommates are considerate and remember to put caps back on bottles and put away creams and make-up, the arrangement can still be agreeable. Clothes should also be carefully hung away in closets or folded away in bureaus, so there will be no reason for one to stew about the other's sloppy habits.

Sharing an apartment while working at a stimulating career can be an exciting part of a young woman's life. Sharing it with a courteous and considerate roommate adds much to the experience.

Robt. and Hazelanne Reid Choral Society Soloists

BY EUGENE LANG

A sizeable congregation was in attendance last evening in Bridge Street United Church for the fifth annual performance of the Belleville Choral Society. Well known vocalists Robert and Hazelanne Reid were the featured soloists with the Choir in assistance.

The program was one of variety and extended scope, reaching from the sixteenth century style of Palestrina through to the modern idiom of Ralph Vaughn Williams. The members of the forty-four voiced choir had plenty of opportunity to exhibit their collective vocal talents in the various numbers sung under the capable direction of their leader, Miss Phyllis May.

TWO SOLOISTS

In the five solo selections offered by Hazelanne Reid she, as usual, delivered each in a manner of impressive style ofset by her fluidity of projection. A reverent portrayal of the melodic "Jerusalem" of Mendelssohn was envisaged, with sustained tones in high registers carefully rounded off in the "Tell Me, Lovely Shepherd" by William Boyce. Handel's "Belshea Greatly" provided a well known vehicle of vocal virtuosity for Hazelanne Reid which she interpreted with gusto and ebullience. The dramatic "Lord, Come Away" by Vaughn Williams again drew attention to this soloist's fine performance. A poignant and resigned approach was used in the singing of Bach's "In Love My Saviour Now is Dying", given with a very deeply felt emotion. The familiar " Hear My Prayer" of Mendelssohn was endowed with an endearing fervency in Mrs. Reid's realisation of this long and lovely aria. The Choir's backing in this number was shapely molded around the soloist's lovely tones.

In his selections, Robert Reid again left no doubts in the mind of the hearers that his vocal talents are exceptional and his feeling for any given work brought out in his fine intuitive interpretations. The Handelian lines of "My Lips Shall Speak Thy Praise" by Greene were intoned with a moving compulsion of virility that nearly matched the strength and forceful reverberations carried throughout the Church in the excellent singing of "Sound An Alarm" by the real Handel. Of this latter item Mr. Reid came through with a most exciting and powerful voicing from beginning to final close.

Mendelssohn's "Then Shall the Righteous Shine" was intoned with an intenseful emotional appeal as was the "Only Be Still" of Bach in its measured pace, but toward the conclusion of this latter aria Mr. Reid seemed to go astray briefly in passages which otherwise would have capped this selection with glory in his singing of its lovely message.

The choir did remarkably well in its numbers and handled the two A Capella portions with sustenance and sonority. Gounod's powerful "By Babylon's Waves" with its fugual interjections was sung with conviction and unity of purpose by all. The "Then Shall Your Light Break Forth" by Mendelssohn was likewise sung with sonical resonance and again here the contrapuntal fibres were woven with careful attention to the overlapping details that the composer had tossed into the score.

The anthem "Zadok the Priest" was used as the opener, but could have fared much better had it come along later in the program. Voices were just not loosened up enough to go right out and begin with this. Furthermore this anthem demands power and power galore. It needs the push of a ninety mile wind in your back to sustain its majesty, and momentum after the introductory section. Some of the "God Save the Queen" attacks were ragged and the organ accompaniment was lacklustered at times. We hope that the choir will perform this again, and next time vindicate itself. It is one of the most gorgeous choruses in all music, and needs more hearings. We anticipate another shot at this by the choir with better results.

FINE PERFORMANCE

Summing up, this was a fine performance on the part of all concerned. Mr. Alec Gordon turned in rewarding accompaniments to every opus (with the exception noted above) and Miss Phyllis May, the director, is to be congratulated upon her choice of pieces used and the fine work turned in by her singers, as well as her own conductorial handlings.

Rev. H. M. Davis wished all present a hearty welcome before intoning the opening prayer and Rev. C. W. Coleman, president of the Belleville Ministerial Association spoke the closing Benediction.

Following the recital the soloists and members of the choir were entertained at a reception held in the church parlors.

City Children Enjoy 'Puppets On Parade'

Close to 700 children flocked to Queen Alexandra School in Belleville last Saturday to be amused and delighted by "Pup pets on Parade" sponsored by Gamma Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

The Peterborough Puppet Guild presented two polished performances of near-professional calibre. The program ranged from the fairy story "Rapunzel" with prince, wicked witch and tiny elf to variety acts including a juggler, high-land piper, dancing kittens and a dainty ostrich named Maxie doing a duet with her friend the horse.

Five puppeteers manoeuvred the gaily costumed marionettes with great skill against suitably bright backgrounds and properties.

Due to the success of the show, Gamma Mu Chapter is considering plans for repeating the event next year.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves soreness and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

the contribution rate is 3.6 per cent. This is shared equally by employees and employers but paid alone by the self-employed. For an employee earning at least $5,000 it means payments of $6.50 a month. These start in 1966.

Full benefits begin in 1976, though some are available at reduced levels in the first 10 years. The benefits will come in one cheque but take two forms: the contributory pension, plus the flat-rate old age security pension financed as at present out of taxes.

At age 65, a person retiring becomes eligible for the contributory pensions which is 25 per cent of the average earnings on which contributions are made. Thus a person earning as much or more than the $5,000 income ceiling would receive about $104 monthly.

In addition, the old age security payment which now is $75 a month at age 70 can be claimed, in reduced amounts, starting at age 65. It would be $51 at age 65. Thus a person retiring at age 65 would get a total of $155. If he waited until he was 70, he would get $179 a month.

This is how benefits will be paid in the 10-year transition period between 1966 and 1976:

After one year of operating the plan, a person who has contributed in 1966 and is 68 in 1967 will get a pension equal to 10 per cent of the full level. In each subsequent year, the age comes down until age 65 is reached in 1970 and at the same time the percentage of benefit rises by 10 percentage points a year until the full benefit is paid in 1976.

For example, a person who retires at age 65 in 1969 would get a contributory pension equal to 40 per cent of the full benefit. If he was contributing at the maximum earnings level, that would work out to $41.60 a month. Atop this would be the old age security benefit of $51 at age 65, for a total of -92.60.

However, these are only illustrations. Actually, the income ceiling which starts at $5,000 a year would be adjusted under the bill in line with average national earnings. If it goes up, of course the maximum benefits would rise.

As another safeguard against having benefits in future sapped by inflation, both the contributory and flat - rate pensions would be adjusted in line with changes in the cost of living. They could only go up; the bill forbids reductions even if prices decline.

There follows in the bill the complicated formulas for payments to widows and orphans, to contributors who become disabled and unable to work, to those who do not work and thus don't contribute all their lives, for those between 65 and 70 who are retired but still earn money from regular work, and so on.

A basic principle of the bill is that everyone who contributes is eligible for a benefit. That includes the girl who contributes before she marries, as well as working wives. When they reach 65 they will get a pension based on earnings averaged over the whole period.

Another fundamental provision in the bill:

No Parliament could change the general levels of benefits or contributions without the consent of two-thirds of the provinces having two-thirds of the country's population. That formula would include any province with its own similar plan, such as Quebec.

The federal plan is meshed with Quebec's to ensure portability—that is, the ability to carry pension benefits from one province to another.

The only persons exempt are employees of the armed forces and the RCMP—they have their own plans for retirement earlier than normal elsewhere—and a few others such as employees of foreign governments, or wives employed by their husbands.

After introducing the legislation, Health Minister Judy LaMarsh told reporters that while the provinces were consulted in drawing up the scheme they have not yet seen the detailed bill.

She said they likely will make their views known in letters to Prime Minister Pearson. She added that she knew of no plan to raise the issue at another federal-provincial conference.

In its white paper last August, the government estimated that in the 10th year of the plan, 1976, there would be a reserve of about $4,000,000,000. There has been no estimate of how that reserve would shrink after that date, when full benefits start.

Revenue Minister E. J. Benson told a press conference that in the first year contributions would total close to $426,000,000 and that administration expenses, heavy at the outset, would be about $12,000,000.

That would leave more than $400,000,000 available for investment, as the bill provides, in provincial securities.

Rumored Sudan Revolt Denied

From AP-Reuters

CAIRO (CP) — The Sudan's new civilian government today denied that a military counter-revolt threatened the Nile country's 11-day-old regime.

"I urge all of you not to lend your ears to rumors and to realize your government is looking well after your interests," Premier Sir El Khatem El Khalifa said in a broadcast to the Sudanese people.

Broadcasts a few hours earlier by the ruling United National Front had appealed to all civilians to "defend your national government." Ons broadcast said armored columns were moving out of barracks at Khartoum, the Sudanese capital, in support of an attempt to seize power.

O'Malley, who fell ill at the last moment.

The nine Liberals in the House supported the Conservatives.

The seven-vote margin, which normally might be considered a close squeak, did not look so small to Wilson since his overall margin is only five with all members present. At one point on Monday, the margin seemed down to three, with a couple of Labor supporters ill in hospital.

Wilson faces a second Tory no - confidence motion today, charging socialist policies would imperil the well-being of Britain. But tension has gone out of the air with the initial victory.

No steel bill has yet been introduced and Power Minister Frederick Lee, presenting Labor's case in the debate, gave few details except to express the socialist conviction that:

"Only public ownership of the main part of the industry will make it possible to remedy the industry's shortcomings with the speed and determination which the national interest demands."

Macleod's speech was listened to with close interest, it being his first front-bench appearance since last year when he refused to serve in Sir Alec Douglas-Home's cabinet after the Scottish aristocrat succeeded Harold Macmillan as Tory premier.

Labor members yelled scorn fully "the prodigal has returned" as Macleod, a possible future leader of the Tories, said his party hoped to "cut the teeth" of any Labor steel measure.

Macleod had tough going because he had to agree with Labor that present steel prices are in "disarray."

Last June a restrictive practices court stated there is no price competition in the industry. Restrictive price agreements in the £1,400,000,000 industry are condemned by both Macleod and Lee as the debate wore on.

EQUITY IN YOUR HOME CAN MEAN CASH IN YOUR HAND

That investment you have in your home is an asset in more ways than one. You qualify for the Associates' Home Owner's Loan Plan. Under this plan, you may borrow from $2,000 to $20,000 on the equity you've built up. The interest rate is reasonable. There are no hidden charges or obscure clauses. You completely repay the loan in equal monthly installments over a period of up to ten years. There are no "balance" or "balloon" payments. Interest is computed monthly on the unpaid balance. This means that each payment you make reduces the amount of interest you pay.

There are 101 reasons why you might need cash—financing a university education, buying a second car, remodelling your home. Keep the Associates' Home Owner's Loan Plan in mind. The Associates is one of Canada's largest financing firms with branch offices in principal cities across the country.

The Lonely Chemahaw

MANITOBA TRAWLER — The Chemahaw, a 25-ton vessel, is the only trawler between the Great Lakes and the Pacific Ocean. Using a selective fish finder, the Chemahaw, is employed by the Manitoba government on Lake Winnipeg in a campaign to rid the lake of trash fish such as suckers, tullibee carp and mariax that hinder commercial fishermen. Prairie Trawler Weeds Out Trash Fish

By IRA DRYSDALE

WINNIPEG (CP) — If the Chemahaw is a lonely vessel, it may be because she is the only trawler between the Great Lakes and the Pacific Ocean.

The Manitoba government put her to work this fall in Lake Winnipeg, 250-mile-long body of fresh water that supports a major commercial fishing industry.

Her job is to weed out trash fish that hinder commercial fishermen in their partiuit of pickerel, whitefish and sauger as well as some less abundant marketable varieties.

Manitoba's 3,500 to 4,000 commercial fishermen, many of them part-timers, have been bothered for years by the so-called trash, or low-value, fish.

When fishermen encountered them in gumbers, they would draw their nets and try somewhere else, says Bert Koop man, Manitoba's fisheries director.

While the Chemahaw can't lick the problem alone, it may point the way in a campaign to rid the lake of trash fish such as suckers, tullibee, carp and, in particular abundance at the moment, marla.

The Chemahaw—in Cree her name means "fishing with a net"—is a 25-ton craft of the same general breed as is in the inshore fishery along Canada's East and West coasts.

She carries a crew of three and is equipped with electronic fish - finders and ship to-shore communications facilities. She can work the lake for eight days without refuelling.

MORE TRAWLERS NEEDED

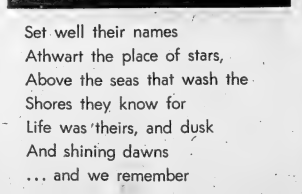
Figuring roughly, Mr Koop man says, that if she were to reap 1,000,000 pounds of rough fish during the ice-free season—from mid-May in late October—the impact wouldn't be sufficient to balance the fish populations on the entire lake. It would probably help in parts of the lake, however.

Probably half a dozen like the $35,000 Chemahaw would rapidly correct the situation, he says.

But, then, it wasn't a foregone conclusion that trawling for rough fish in Manitoba would be permitted even if the Chemahaw — whose market would be chiefly fur ranchers — proved it economically feasible.

At present there are no regulations in Manitoba permitting commercial trawling—the dragging of big open-mouth nets behind boats.

Manitoba fishermen use gill and trap nets. In the year ended March 31, 1963, they produced 36,110,000 pounds worth $4,230,000 and Lake Winnipeg was the province's biggest producer with nearly 10,500,000 pounds.



About 90 per cent of Manitoba's catch is exported, mostly to the United States but some to Europe.

The Chemahaw, expected to catch few of the popular fish because of her selective fish-finder, is to work in co-operation with federal fisheries authorities in the use of her new gear and new-to-the-Prairies fishing techniques.

Mr. Kooyman says the long-term benefits of the removal of rough fish should be sound in the provision of more space and more food for commercial fish, and in cutting the extent of predation of their eggs and young.

RED CONCILIATION MOVES STALLED

Divide Canada Into Associate States Is Plea

Claimed French, English Canada Will Never Join

QUEBEC (CP) — Spokesmen for division of Canada into "associate states" defended their formula Tuesday before the Quebec legislature committee on the constitution.

The Montreal branch of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, a patriotic organization devoted to French-speaking Canadian interests, presented a brief Tuesday on the "associate states" first made public last spring.

The brief take the position that Canada is "inhabited by two nations which will never join" and that recognition of the fact requires a "radical orientation of the political thinking of French and English Canada."

Paul Dozois (UN—Montreal-Saint-Jacques) suggested the 18,000 members of the organization "are really separatists but wish to avoid the evil of a separation by recommending formation of associate states."

Paul-Emile Robert, president of the Montreal society, replied the group "sees separatism as something negative" and "seeks positive solutions."

WON'T SEPARATE

He said "associate state" status for Quebec would lead to a sovereign, independent standing for the province which would probably become a republic and form an alliance with the rest of Canada rather than separate.

Rene Lavesque, Quebec natural resources minister, questioned University of Montreal economist Francois-Albert Angers, another society spokesman, on "facts" which the Quebec independence would mean for Quebec's standard of living."

Mr. Angers said there is nothing to support such fears, that he believes the rest of Canada would continue to trade with Quebec from the rest of Canada and that fiscal policies have retarded Quebec's industrial development.

For example, he said Canada's railway investment in the last century was made for political reasons which will not economically viable. Mr. Angers said Canada oriented investment westwards, not "feeding" ment of Quebec, in order to justify the investment.

If Canada were to take economic reprisals against Quebec following any breakdown in possible "associate state" negotiations, the economist said Quebec could retaliate by limiting its commerce with the United States and Latin America.

500 Million Laid Out For Arms

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department has tentatively decided on the contents of a new package of weapons for the armed forces, authorities say.

The package will cost somewhere between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000, which is relatively inexpensive, believe it or not, as such bundles go these days.

The likely contents:

NAVY

Five or six warships costing between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000. The exact type of ship hasn't yet been selected but they will likely be anti-submarine surface vessels and one assault craft which can carry helicopters for anti-submarine work and troops for United Nations peace-keeping operations.

Present destroyers will be equipped with new sonar—underwater detection equipment—and development of a hybrofoil anti-submarine boat will continue at full bore.

RCAF

A fighter-bomber will be acquired at a cost of between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 for about 100 planes. The probable choice now appears to be the American Northrop Freedom Fighter which the former Conservative government turned down in 1958, though aircraft companies are still making their pitches to the department.

Also high on the procurement list is the Canadian de Havilland Buffalo transport plane.

ARMY

For the taxpayer, the most admirable thing about army weapons is that they don't cost anywhere near what a ship or a plane does.

The department likely will buy new reconnaissance vehicles, self-propelled artillery, new communications equipment and battlefield surveillance instruments for the army. Costs shouldn't exceed $50,000,000.

In the new weapons program, part of which at least is expected to be submitted to the cabinet in two or three weeks for approval, the dominant factor appears to be the price tag.

Defence Minister Paul Hellyer agreed last year to an annual defence budget of $1,525,-00,000 for five years.

Veterans To Get Increases

OTTAWA (CP)—On the eve of Remembrance Day, Veterans Minister Teillet announced in the Commons Tuesday increased in pensions for virtually all veterans receiving benefits.

Mr. Teillet said supplementary spending estimates would be placed before the Commons and the increases would be made effective as of Sept. 1, 1964. The increases are expected to cost the government another $33,750,000 a year.

The announcement also came on the eve of an annual submission to the cabinet by the Royal Canadian Legion. Representatives of that veterans group are to meet the cabinet at 3 p.m. today.

The increases cover veterans receiving benefits under the Pension Act, the War Veterans Allowance Act and the Civilian War Pensions and Allowances Act.

War disability pensions, received by some 300,000 veterans, their widows and orphans, will be increased by about 10 per cent. The maximum now is $2,160 a year. A totally disabled veteran also receives an additional $720 annually if married and $394 for one child.

INCREASE MAXIMUM

Allowances for chronically ill veterans will be increased, with the maximum payable jumping to $3,000 annually from the present $1,800. The increase is designed to permit these veterans to pay for such services as nursing attendants. The number of chronically ill veterans affected was not immediately available because they are covered under several programs.

War veterans allowances, which cover some 50,000 veterans and about 25,000 widows and orphans of veterans, will be raised to $94 a month from $84 for single persons and to $161 from $144 for married persons.

These allowances are limited to veterans or dependents who meet qualifications on income limits. The announcement said the maximum permissible outside income for persons under this program will be increased to $1,536 a year for a single recipient from $1,296 and to $2,664 from $2,088 for married recipients.

Mr. Teillet said similar benefit increases to persons receiving civilian war pensions and allowances would be made but gave no specific details on this.

SOLITARY WREATH strikes a contrasting chord of sadness at Belleville Cenotaph when rain forced transfer of Remembrance Day services to city armory.

Rainsoaked Cenotaph Deserted As Service Moved to Armory

A solitary wreath, where there would have been scores, rested at ease on a rainwashed Cenotaph in Belleville this morning.

Unintentionally, in its loneliness it eloquently emphasized the personal sadness that is at the heart of all Remembrance Days.

Heavy rain washed out the scheduled parade and ceremonies to the Cenotaph.

At the war memorial then, where there should have been solemn pomp and circumstance, there was only the wreath and its legend: "C122644—Pte. Jack E.Joe-Kelleher."

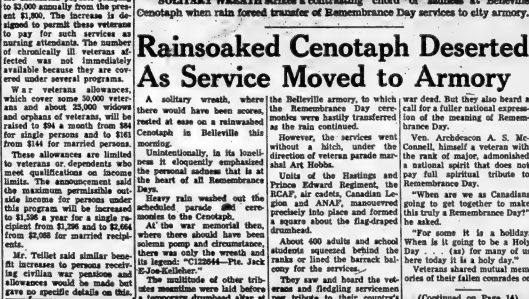
The multitude of other tributes meantime were laid before a temporary drumhead altar at the Belleville armory, to which the Remembrance Day ceremonies were hastily transferred as the rain continued.

However, the services went without a hitch, under the direction of wing parade marshal Art Hobbs.

Units of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the RCAF, air cadets, Canadian Legion and ANAF, manoeuvred precisely into place and formed a square about the flag-draped drumhead.

About 400 adults and school students squeezed behind the ranks or lined the barrack balcony for the services.

They saw and heard the veterans and fledgling servicemen pay tribute to their country's war dead. But they also heard a call for a fuller national expressing of the meaning of Remembrance Day.



Ven. Archdeacon A. S. McConnell, himself a veteran with the rank of major, admonished a national spirit that does not pay full spiritual tribute to Remembrance Day.

"When are we as Canadians going to get together to make this truly a Remembrance Day?" he asked.

"For some it is a holiday. When is it going to be a Holy Day . . . (as) for many of us here today it is a holy day."

Veterans shared mutual memories of their fallen comrades on

Kremlin Finds China's Demands Are Excessive

Think Gomulka Fails In Mediation Attempt

By JOHN CANTWELL

HONG KONG (AP)—The last four weeks must rank among the most satisfying ever for China's Mao Tse-tung.

In that time he has emerged as probably the most influential Communist leader in the world—the elder statesman of Marxism-Leninism.

He has seen — and perhaps was partly responsible for—the fall of his arch-enemy, Nikita Khrushchev.

He has received credit for the success of China's first atomic explosion.

And now, Western observers here believe, he is confident he can increase his influence in Moscow and "correct" the "false revisionist beliefs" of the new men in the Kremlin.

He probably will not succeed. But at least he knows that his trusted aide, Chou En-lai, is in a strong bargaining position in relations with the Soviet Union.

Mao will be 71 next month. Recent photographs have shown he has lost weight. He appears to be ailing. His clothes hang on him.

He lives with his fourth wife Chiang Ping, a former Shanghai actress—in an old one-storey house in Peking.

Western observers here believe Mao's age and physical failings will prevent him from holding the reins of power much longer. There are likely to be confusing struggles and purges when Mao passes from the scene.

MOSCOW (AP)—Secret Communist unity talks between the Kremlin's new leaders and visiting delegations appeared to be nearly completed today as the visitors continued leaving Moscow. There was no indication of any progress in healing the Soviet-Chinese rift.

Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai was still in Moscow with no departure date reported yet. Sources said he planned to visit Leningrad and Kiev before returning home.

Gomulka was reported to have tried to mediate the Peking-Moscow quarrel. Reliable sources said he met separately Tuesday with Chou and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

Diplomatic sources felt Chou was demanding more concessions than the Soviet party chief, Leonid Brezhnev, and Kosygin were willing to give.

One point presumably under discussion was a Soviet - proposed world Communist meeting. Khrushchev originally proposed a meeting Dec. 15 to prepare for a world Communist conclave next year. The Chinese refused to attend Khrushchev's meeting.

Commons Makes Progress

By ALEX MORIN

OTTAWA (CP)—When Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Tuesday his party was trying to "leave our political considerations at the door," it had a mighty effect.

Although he spoke words during the measured ad deliberate calm of debate on the shelf, fused issue of pensions, the aura of sweet agreement drifted through the rest of the day as the House of Commons.

Three Students Held Responsible For Man's Death

MATANE, Que. (CP)—Three Matane Classical College students found criminally responsible Tuesday by a coroner's jury for the killing of Gaspar Oscar Lalonde, a Rogaas Catholic teaching order chember and porter at the school.

Brother Lalonde was killed April 30 with a hammer and left for dead in a shed at the classical college.

Responsibility has to be fixed by a coroner's jury in violent deaths before criminal charges are laid in Quebec province.

Drug Costs Vigorously Defended At Pharmaceutical Conference

TORONTO (CP)—Drug costs were defended at the annual conference of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Manufacturers' Association Tuesday. Delegates were told to reply forcefully to unfair criticism of the industry's economics.

Etienne Junod of Balse, Switzerland, head of an international drug firm, said that on an average drug manufacturers get only 50 cents out of every $1,000 of family income many their purchasers.

All too often, the public picks on a drug product that is enjoying spectacular success and forgets about the enormous expense of research and development, said Mr. Junod, also president of the Pharmaceutical Industries Association which represents drug manufacturers in several European countries.

The advice that manufacturers should reply forcefully to unfair economic criticism came from Dr. Denis E. Wheeler of London, past president of the British Pharmaceutical Association.

Manufacturers should do this "boldly and with complete confidence", he told an audience that included doctors and pharmacists.

Africa Queen Bends Apartheid With Art Show at Johannesburg

JOHANNESBURG (AP) —It took a Negro woman artist and a few moments to break down some of South Africa's rigid apartheid practices.

Amid the red carpeted luxury of one of Johannesburg's top art salons, 300 black and white followers of art craned their necks to view 100 paintings comprising the Gladys Ngudlandlu exhibition.

She is the first Negro to hold a one-woman show of this type in South Africa.

Miss Ngudlandlu, who weighs 196 pounds and is known to her friends as the Africa Queen, was a long way from our African township home of Nyanga. In Cape Province, but was equally at home among the arty Johannesburg set.

"Sometimes I paint as many as 10 pictures a night," she said. "I know that if I don't paint I'll go mad. I go on through the night painting and painting.

"Besides I need the money to pay off creditors. All my canvas, brushes and paints I buy on a kind of hire-purchase arrangement, otherwise I wouldn't be able to continue.

Nearly every house in her native Nyanga township has one or more of her paintings. "I've painted thousands," she explained.

To the exhibition guests, sipping sherry and drinking African beer, argued with each other over the Queen talent as an artist.

Some classified her art as delightfully primitive, positively atrocious or crudely arty. But Mrs. Joseph L. Dougherty, wife of the U.S. acting consul-general in Johannesburg, compared her paintings with those of Van Gogh.

Miss Mgudlandlu has never taken an art lesson in her life. Her paintings range in price from $28 to $168.

Leaping across many are great multi-colored birds which seem strangely out of place

"I paint from memory—visions that I have carried around since childhood days," she explained. "These birds seem to haunt me. I know I paint them but sometimes I get cross when I discover them flying across the canvas. I wish I could get rid of them, but perhaps it has something to do with feeling free."

As a result of the exhibition she sold 12 paintings for the equivalent of $340.

Foster-Parents Are Shown Films on Problem Children

About eighty-five foster parents, members of the Board of Directors and staff of the Children's Aid Society met at Belleville on Tuesday evening. The meeting, under the co-chairmanship of Messrs. Donald G. Lockyer and Joel Mazer, was one of a series originally organized in 1961 to promote a better understanding of the role played by each group in the functioning of the Society.

Two films were shown. One entitled "Night Children" depicted the night duty of a CAS caseworker in a large metropolitan area. In introducing the film, Mr. Bruce Kerr, the local director, stated that "the situations remain the same — only the locale is different." The film, sometimes startling in its clarity, revealed the kind of situations which arise almost every day of the week and lead to the need for the protection of children of all ages from neglect.

The second film, "Problem Children" dealt with the reaction of two boys, each a distinctly different personality, to a different kind of home situation. Mr. J. D. Adamson, the Society's supervisor, introduced the film.

A lively discussion period followed the showing of the films with foster parents, board members and staff taking part. A buffet style supper was served at 8:45 by a group of ladies from Tabernacle United Church, under the direction of Mrs. Percy Kerr of Belleville.

HOMES HARD TO FIND

Of the one hundred and fifty odd children in the care of the local Society, one hundred and fourteen live in foster homes. Eighty three families, living as far north as Eldorado and east to Deseronto and west to Trenton offer family living, and for many children, the first stable home they have ever known. In speaking after the meeting, Mr. Kenneth Boardman, who does the Society's home finding for older children, spoke of the difficulty all children's aid societies are having in obtaining satisfactory care for older children of both sexes. Said Mr. Boardman, "It is no longer adequate to provide food and shelter for a child — if ever such people are "naturals" and are able to do truly amazing things with our children. Others, seeing foster parenthood through rose-tinted glasses, become disheartened and last only a short time. Every move for one of our children is to him a further indication of his rejection, and increases his feelings of not being wanted. Soon, he trusts no one; will make no effort to establish a good relationship with others; and becomes a truly anti-social and potential delinquent child."

SEEK 'GROUP HOME'

Mr. Kerr stated that the Society was this week advertising for a group home for older children. This is really nothing more than a special kind of "foster home". The main difference is that the foster parents will not expect the children to become an integral part of their family unless they, the children, choose to do so. They will be, for the most part, children who reject parent figures but who, with positive direction from within a stable environment, draw strength from the other members of the group and live at peace with themselves and those about them. The idea is not new and has been in practice in other areas of the province for many years.

"In the past we have used our Receiving Home in such a manner" said Mr. Kerr "but today we find the demands upon us to be great for certain age groups. Young children and disturbed teenagers do not mix."

Speaking of the financial aspects of such an arrangement, Mr. Kerr stated that the family concerned would, in all probability, be paid a monthly retainer for the use of their home plus a substantial rate per diem for each child in care.

United Empire Loyalists Meet At Library

Attendance at the Adolphustown Museum during the past summer totalled 2,165. This was reported by the museum committee at the November meeting of the Bay of Quinte Branch, United Empire Loyalists' Association of Canada. The meeting was at the Corby Public Library, with the president, Gerald Allison of Picton, occupied the chair.

The museum committee said two exhibits aroused considerable interest, a gun exhibit loaned by Mr. C. W. Smith of Belleville, and a display of early lighting devices loaned by Dr. and Mrs. Nesbitt. The Museum Board would be pleased to hear from Loyalist families, who have in their possession old documents, weapons and other articles of historical interest prevailing 1840.

The application for membership of Mrs. Ralph J. Snyder of Franklin Park, Illinois, U.S.A., was accepted; Mrs. Snyder's U.E.L. ancestor being Corp. James McTaggart.

After the business session Miss Marian Jones of Picton gave an illustrated account of a visit to India and the Orient.

The arrangements were served under the convenership of Mrs. C. L. R. Wanamaker and Miss Helen Pollock.

Adults Reading More, Library Report Shows

Belleville adults are reading more now than they did last year, according to the city librarian's report, but the children are reading less. Total circulation of library books within the city during October, 1964 this year was 30,742. Total for October of 1963, 31,021. Adult circulation has risen this year by 1,837 to a total of 14,878, children library circulation is down 1,116 to 15,864.

Most of the adult books, more than 12,000 of them in fact, are borrowed from the main library on Pinnacle St. Fewer than 3,000 were borrowed from the east branch library at Victoria and Farley, and about 1,200 adult books are borrowed from the library at Queen Elizabeth School. About 250 books were borrowed from the library at the hospital.

For children, the east branch library is the busiest of the three, during October. The branch loaned more than 3,300 childrens books compared with fewer than 2,000 taken from the main library. Among the six childrens library branches in the public schools, the one at Prince of Wales School had the largest circulation with 1,200 books loaned.

The library has 252 members now. At the main library there are 107 adult and 53 child members, at the east branch there are 36 adult and 57 child members.

Mob Violence Must Be Ended Say Sudanese

CAIRO (AP) — The Sudan's new civilian minister said Tuesday night his government would use all its authority to end mob violence and demonstrations plaguing his two-week-old government since Sunday.

Premier Sir El Khatim E. Khalifa, in a broadcast from Khartoum, the Sudanese capital, called on the demonstrators to return to their homes and work.

He also appealed for an end to attacks on foreigners. Reports from Khartoum said mobs worked up by Communist agitators stoned the American and British embassies Tuesday and attacked the Egyptian Embassy.

Khalifa said "some aliens" were partially responsible for the violence. He gave no indication of their nationality.

The premier also called for an end to the general strike in Khartoum.

"The government is now sure nobody will there unlikely your gains or threaten your rights," Khalifa told crowds in front of the Council of Ministers building. "There is no longer any need for desthnstrations."

The new Sudan situation is sought support from the public by announcing an end to the policy of keeping the south Sudan, where half the army has been trying to put down a revolt by the Sudan African Nationalist dominant Arab Moslems of northern Sudan.

Following the speakers address, members stood to observe two minutes silence in memory. George Wardell sounded the "Last Post" and the "Reveille".

Dream of Free Education Must Be Abandoned

HAMILTON (CP) — Ontario parents and students can abandon any dreams of free university education for everyone in the near future, Premier Robarts indicated today in Hamilton.

Speaking to a meeting of the McMaster University Progressive Conservative Student Federation he said: "I can't necessarily say I'm in favor of free education.

"There is no immediate chance my government is going to provide free college education for everyone."

Premier Robarts, in reply to a question from a student, denied outright that he has any interest in seeking federal leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

Lesage Agrees With Pearson On New Federalism Necessary

PARIS (Reuters) — Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec said today he shared "without restriction" a statement made by Prime Minister Lester Pearson in the House of Commons that a new form of federalism must be installed in Canada.

Lesage, who is on a six-day visit to Paris told a press conference: "I share Mr. Pearson's opinion without restriction and the main of the population of Quebec is in full agreement with me."

The Quebec premier, who read out a news agency dispatch, quoted Pearson as having declared that those who refused to adapt themselves to a changing situation condemned themselves to disappear.

Lesage, who spoke alternately in English and in French, said Canada needed a healthy federalism." Talks were already under way on a new kind of Confederation and a new constitution by co - operation and agreements between the parties.

The Quebec leader, referring to the Queen's recent visit to Quebec, said too much importance was attached by information media "to our extremists, who include a few abroad as well including the United States and France." He added: "I believe these words were the worst ever in the Sunday newspapers in London."

'A SMALL GANG'

Lesage said there was a small gang of extremists of no importance w h a t s o e v e r" in Quebec. They will not even be able to present a candidate in a byelection. If they ever do, they would not even get a hundred votes in any constituency.

Lesage, who will confer with President de Gaulle at the Elysee Palace Thursday, said relations between Canada and France were "very good" at all levels.

Asked what in his view was the extent or importance of provincial sympathy and organization in France, he replied: "I haven't noticed any. I have got met anyone."

Route Is Not Clearly Marked Says Alderman

Belleville's downtown area and the approaches to No. 2 highway from the 401 divided highway north of the city is not clearly marked, it was recording to Alderman Ben Corke.

The alderman, who has heard many complaints on the matter, says a stranger to the city could very easily get lost.

He said there was only one small one on No. 37 highway indicating that this was the route from 401 to the downtown area.

"The highways' department says they're going to do something about the signs, but it has never been done," he said.

Five bids were received, the lowest being $200,949 and the highest $106,450.

The tenders were opened on Tuesday afternoon by the special committee set up to deal with renovations of the former YMCA building. A recommendation for awarding the renovation contract is expected to be before council at its next meeting.

A completion date of from 10 to 18 weeks from commencement of work has been suggested by the lowest bidder.

First Registrar Of Used Car Dealers Named

TORONTO (CP)—A former Ottawa auto dealer has been appointed Ontario's first registrar of used car dealers and salesmen and has undertaken the task of helping to write the regulations he will enforce.

He is Reginald G. MacCormac, 49, a widower who sold his auto dealership two years ago and acted as general manager of another Ottawa firm before leaving for his new job Nov. 1.

Mr. MacCormac will administer an act passed at the last session of the Ontario legislature providing for the registration, supervision and control of used-car dealers and salesmen. The act has not as yet formally been proclaimed into law.

Mr. MacCormac is consulting with groups such as the Federation of Automobile Dealers Associations of Ontario to draw up draft regulations for the consideration of Attorney General Arthur Wishart.

WON'T BE RESTRICTIVE

"We're not attempting to bar ass or restrict anyone from the trade," Mr. MacCormac said in an interview. When the regulations were completed and when the act would be proclaimed. This probably wouldn't take place until early in 1965.

The other major job of the new registrar will be to license used-car dealers and salesmen after examination. Only a small number of changes in the used-car business.

The regulation of dealers also was one of the recommendations made by the Ontario legislature's select committee on consumer credit in an interim report. The committee reported "palpable abuses."

In his new position Mr. MacCormac comes under the jurisdiction of the registration and examination branch, which in turn is under the attorney-general's department.

Mrs. Erickson, 105 today, is a pioneer in every sense of the word.

She is the only one still alive of an estimated 80,000 Mormons who immigrated to Utah on foot, horseback, or in carts and wagons before the railroads came.

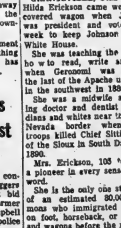
Thousand Die In Viet Nam Due to Floods

By PETER ARNETT

SAIGON (AP)—A U.S. military spokesman said today 1,100 South Vietnamese civilians are reported to have drowned in floods surging through the valleys of mountainous central Viet Nam.



The spokesman cautioned that the figure may be exaggerated but a natural disaster of major proportions was increasingly evident.

Refugees are pouring into the main coastal cities. Between 36,000 and 45,000 are in Da Nang, a key port and military base 500 miles northeast of Saigon. Several thousand are reported at other cities, including Nha Khun, Quant Ngai and Tam Ky.

Rescue work in some of the 13 stricken provinces is being hampered by Communist Viet Cong groundfire against U.S. helicopters attempting to move out the stricken and to fly in food supplies, the spokesman said.

About 150,000 people are reported homeless, most of them in coastal Binh provinces which has been lashed by heavy rains for the past week.

Board of Education Still Studying Swimming Pool

TRENTON — Town council's resolution concerning a swimming pool for the Trenton High School is still being studied by the Board of Education according to Walter Steevie, chairman of the committee considering the motion. He reported to the Board's regular meeting Monday night.

Council at a special meeting November 3rd agreed to put the question to the voters provided the Board of Education was willing to enter into a non-cancellable agreement that the proposed pool would be jointly administered by the Board and the Recreation Commission with the town exercising control.

Mr. Steevie presenting the Board of Education's request for a plebiscite, said that night he was not sure the Board could agree to council's terms. Council sanctioned a by-law authorizing a referendum be held along with municipal elections on December 7th.

The proposed pool built to Olympic specifications would cost $325,000. Comm unity Centres Act, grant, $5,000; Disabled Persons' Club, $1,000; for money deberitured and under the Municipal Works Assistance Program, $16,000. The total expenditure is $47,000. In addition a committee of responsible businessmen from Trenton would raise another $25,000 by public subscription, said the Board of Education brief.

[illegible] TRUST

Also presenting the pool for the Trenton High School suggested council debenture for the full amount ($101,000), then set aside in trust in which donations would be deposited to retire the debt.

During the pool discussions at the council meeting Councillor Gerald Weaver said he would be agreeable to the holding of a plebiscite providing the Board of Education was willing to enter into a permanent agreement that the pool would be managed jointly by the Board and the Recreation Commission. Councillor Ross Burtt wanted information whether Councillor Roderick Campbell that the present Board of Education would be in favour having the question of joint pool administration. Council learned from Councillor Burtt there is alternative location desired by another faction. Said Mr. Burtt: "The ideal place for a swimming pool is in the Community Gardens area. Many people living in east and north Trenton are without cars and it would be clever for them to go to the Gardens than to the high school."

The Board of Education brief explained the high school site was chosen because of its economic advantage since earlier information placed the cost of building a pool near the Gardens at $147,000. Mr. Steevie pointed out that with the exception of life guards, the present high school staff will be able to handle the maintenance of the pool.

MAYOR FAVORS PLAN

Mayor James MacDonald voiced encouragement for the indoor /pool advocates. "Council would be a fool" not to consider helping with the pool at the price which was being quoted, but said he did not see how council could raise the money this year." He pointed out, however, that his thinking about an outdoor pool for the arena area had not changed. In this connection he argued that not many people would use the high school pool during the warm months of July and August.

Councillor Weaver said an important point to consider was that the pool would be used for 10 months of the year by 1,400 pupils at the high school.

Injecting comment into the discussion Clerk-Comptroller O. W. Larry noted that council could take $29,000 out of a current budget to pay toward a pool but said a plebiscite would be necessary if the amount was to be raised by debenture.

The pool plebiscite brings to three the number of questions to be decided upon by voters on December 7. Those qualified to ballot on money by-laws will be concerned with the questions of a swimming pool and a grant to the community band. All voters may express an opinion on the question of requesting the Ontario government to assume more education costs.

Sweden has opened its longest fresh water tunnel—nine miles long—after three years of construction near the Gulf of Bothnia.

Polling Booths Will Be Placed In Schools

TRENTON — School Inspector C. E. McMullen reporting to the Trenton Board of Education complimented the board for selecting R. E. Poste to fill the principal's post at Dufferin public school this year. "Conditions at the school have never been better in nine years," the inspector said, noting that he found the pupils enthusiastic and well-mannered while a wholesome relationship exists between the teachers and them.

A request by the town for the use of schools for polling booth election day was approved by the board. Polling booths will be located in the following public schools: Marmora Senior, College Street, North Trenton, Dufferin and Prince Charles.

The board acknowledged a report by board secretary-treasurer Eva M. Baker regarding her attendance at the Conference of School Business Officials of the United States and Canada at San Francisco in October. Secretary Baker attended one week of her holiday days to coincide with the conference and paid her own expenses, she pointed out in her outset of her report. The board passed a motion to recognize her report as official and commended that some allowance be made toward her expenses since "the board will benefit directly from her having attended" during her holiday period.

A letter from Vincent Perry requesting the board's opinion on the board's position regarding students' insurances was turned over to a committee for further consideration.

REPORTS RECEIVED

The school nurses report approved showed four cases of communicable diseases had been uncovered; four pupils had been referred to family doctors for emergency treatment; two of the 47 pupils who underwent vision tests needed glasses; 164 immunizations were recorded in October. Immunization clinics will be held later this month and in December.

Date for the annual High School Commencement was set for November 20 the board was told.

Board member Jim Bowman reported that the roof at Prince Charles school was being repaired under warranty.

Board member Don Sutherland requested the annual wings parade for the high school air cadet squadron takes place November 17.

Under new business the board considered a complaint about board employees living out of town. "It's nobody's business. We are more interested that the pupils get a good education rather than where teachers reside", one member commented.

The board decided to contribute $500 to the students council of the high school seeking relief for an expenditure of about $1,000 spent on transportation in connection with athletic teams and other student activities. The board had already budgeted for the anticipated expense.

Brazil Looks Confidently To the Future

By FRANK BRUTTO

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—Seven months after a nearly bloodless revolution ousted Joao Goulart in his pro-leftist government, Brazil looks confidently to the future—more so than in years.

Under the guidance of President Humberto Castello Brane, Brazil's leaders at home and abroad has become more impressive.

The revolution abruptly ended a Comm nist threat to take over the country.

It ended rabble-rousing and strikes that menaced industry, communications and transport.

It also ended a round of arbitrary pay i n c r e a s e s that ranged as high as 100 per cent and which together with skyrocketing prices threatened to blow the top out of the country's inflation.

Pay increases now are more orderly. Price increases are regulated. But inflation still is at a dizzy pace.

MONEY INFLATES

The cruzeiro is at the almost all-time high of 1,700 to the dollar after having steadied temporarily at 1,200 immediately after the revolution. Two years ago it was 600 to the dollar.

Since the revolution meat (neither best nor worst cuts) has gone from 830 to 1,200 cruzeiros a kilo (2.2 pounds), milk, from 85 to 180 sugar from 80 to 218, coffee from 90 to 200.

Two years ago, the minimum wage in Rio was 12,000 cruzeiros. Today it is 42,000. Even so, it is extremely difficult for the average Brazilian to make ends meet. And beyond that average, there are millions who do not earn that much and face even greater difficulty.

Suggestion Allows Job Function With Less Labor

One of the largest suggestion awards in the history of the CN Rideau Area at Belleville was received yesterday by F. R. "Russ" Babcock, assistant foreman of the local rail yard, when he received a cheque from Area Manager K. E. Hunt for $365.

Mr. Babcock's suggestion involved the re-location of semi-automatic machine controls to allow job function with less labor and providing for a much greater degree of safety for workers.

In making the award, Mr. Hunt said it was the largest suggestion box award to be given in the Rideau Area since the railway re-organization in 1961.

The amount of the award is based on the percentage of the annual saving resulting to the railway from the suggestion.

A CN rail yard employee for the past 36 years, Mr. Babcock lives on Herchimer Ave.

Newspapers In Good Health Says Report

TORONTO (CP) — A trade magazine has taken a close look at newspapers and decided they are in good health and may even be on the verge of a boom.

A report, in a 44-page special section of Marketing, turns up these facts and figures:

There are 112 daily newspapers in 86 Canadian cities compared with 96 papers in 1941.

Total circulation in 1964 is 4,313,216 compared with 4,100,-890 in 1963.

On a typical day, seven out of 10 Canadian Adults, 20 years old and over, read a daily newspaper.

Despite radio and television, people keep reading newspapers. Canadians will spend about $62,500,000 this year to get their daily papers.

INCREASE LINEAGE

In European eyes, this generation of Americans became a sort of sick joke as they tromped the Continent, behaving like so many living cartoons with their flashy Miami Beach shirts, expensive cameras and loud voices.

Despite their money, the natives acquired a jaundiced attitude towards visitors who compared almost everything unfavorably with back home, thought Westminster Abbey dirty, were disappointed that the Leaning Tower of Pisa didn't lean more and thought the Acropolis was but a pile of rocks—and said so.

But the effect of all this is gradually being diluted by the new generation of Americans, friendly young college students with a greater taste for history and the arts and a keen admiration for much that Europe has to offer.

They fly the Atlantic by the thousands in economy charter flights, live "on the cheap" in second-class hotels or hostels and generally show a frank and boundless enthusiasm for everything they see.

In short, they are making friends as easily as their parents lost them almost unnoticed, and that reverberating band of suddenly-rich characters that grew out of prosperous wartime America and later invaded Europe, dropping friends with every faux pas.

German Tourists Replace The 'Ugly Americans'

By ROD CURRIE

ATHENS (CP) — Do you want to know what has made the American tourists suddenly popular in Europe?"

The question was put by a Washington, D.C., doctor here briefly en route to Afghanistan for a spell of voluntary work, and he answered it himself: "The German tourists."

It's a question - and - answer game the new-style American tourists love to play as they flit around Europe basking in the glow of a new popularity.

But it's not the complete answer.

"Frankly, it isn't just that the Americans have improved," said the manager of a medium-priced Athens hotel on a discreet whisper. "It's that the Germans have become intoler able—as bad as the Americans ever were."

As he spoke a busload of Germans burst into the lobby and generally took over, noisily elbowing their way to the desk, snapping fingers for instant attention, shouting back and forth to each other and complaining because the bar was closed for the afternoon siesta.

FREE WITH MONEY

In Greece, as in other leading tourist areas of Europe, the Germans abound. And for the most part they are well-to-do, staying at the best luxury hotels, driving handsome sports cars and accompanied by the most expensive luggage.

In Rhodes, the most luxurious and expensive of the Greek pleasure islands, they say that in the tourist season there are more Germans than Greeks.

An exaggeration, but still one does get the impression there of being overwhelmed, surrounded, by Germans as they blanket the beaches, swirl through the streets and happily monopolize the bars and restaurants.

If other foreigners are jealous of the care and attention the Germans get they also are puzzled that they are so widely and openly welcomed, particularly in a country such as Greece which suffered mercilessly under the Nazi occupation.

"Ah, but they have the money, you see," explained the friendly, multilingual owner of a fashionable Rhodes hotel. "They complain, they demand and they quibble but in the end they have the money."

Possibly it is lack of money and the majesty of American tourists that has helped endear them to the local people, if not to the hote managers and others in the tourist business.

STILL EXIST

The old-style Americans still some, of course—the wealthy who travel discreetly and pass

But Many Cannot Remember

Remembrance Day is here again.

The manner of its observance is now well established, as familiar as is the procedure for marking Christmas, or Hallowe'en.

Yet, unlike these other observances, Remembrance Day cannot go on forever.

It was once known as Armistice Day. The circumstances which forced the change in name have served to cloak the fact that only a minority of Canadians now remember Armistice Day and the war which preceded it.

If a Second Great War had not engulfed us and swelled the list of men whose country owes them grateful remembrance for their sacrifices, none on the sunny side of fifty would have any clear recollections of the events being commemorated today.

Generally the infusion of new blood into an organization is reason for congratulations. But we are sure that all the veterans of two world wars will join us in hoping that no new blood is poured out to keep alive the Remembrance Day ceremony. It would be too high a price to pay, the negation of everything for which these men hoped and for which their comrades died.

Some of those who perished in the First Great War have now been dead for over half a century. Four years from today, the armistice will be years in the past.

The anniversary for which many watch, however, will come in the spring of 1966. In May of that year, if the present uneasy peace is not broken, the time which has elapsed since the end of the Second Great War will exceed the days which lay between the Armistice of 1918 and the German invasion of Poland in September of 1939.

That later peace has been marred by more strife than was true of the period between the two Great Wars — notably by the Korean War which sadly added more names to our honor rolls — but we are all acutely aware that these battles were no more than petty incidents to what we shall have to face if there is ever a Third Great War.

All our hopes must be that there will come a year when the term Remembrance Day is a complete misnomer, because nobody is left alive to remember those they have assembled to honor on Nov. 11. Eventually the custom will be abandoned, or given another form, while the men who died in Flanders' fields, in the Battle of Britain, the Battle of the Atlantic, in Libya and Italy and the Normandy invasion, fade into the mists of the past to join other heroes, men who defeated Napoleon at Trafalgar and Waterloo, men who fought with Wolfe or Montcalm on the Heights of Abraham, men who repulsed the Spanish Armada, Harold's men and William the Norman's men at the Battle of Hastings.

Kremlin Double-Talk

Russia's new leaders are double-talking.

Within the two days last week there was a series of contradictory statements.

On Thursday the Kremlin assailed "nationalist narrowmindedness and discrimination", the promotion of which was one of the sins with which Khrushchev had charged the Chinese. On the same day, too, Pravda printed an article reaffirming belief in the possibility of peaceful coexistence with the West.

On Friday, in the presence of Premier Chou En-lai of China, party-leader Leonid Brezhnev said that Kremlin leaders regard the strengthening of unity in the communist camp as a "sacred duty". This was an obvious bid to heal the rift with Peking.

Now the new leaders of Russia cannot have it both ways. Mao's differences with Khrushchev were not the result of personal pique, but had their roots in questions of principle. The Russians cannot cling to Khrushchev's co-existence policy and at the same time close the gap between them and the Chinese.

There can be no question that they know this. Therefore, the double-talking was done deliberately. There are, however, several possible explanations why the new Russian leadership is being so vague. It may hope to present an appearance of solidarity with China, without any real accord. Or it may be attempting to delude somebody, either the Chinese or the Western powers. Or, and possibly this is the most likely, the Russians may have not yet themselves determined which path to take. Perhaps, there is a split in the presidium and it is not yet certain whether the new regime will eventually favor Khrushchev's policy of co-existence or will decide that real unity of purpose and policy within the communist world is the most important objective.

Britain Never Stood Alone

Victoria Colonist

Recently Senator Barry Goldwater cited Britain as an example of a nation reduced to a second - rate power by frittering away taxes in "do - gooder" schemes.

The Republican presidential candidate, speaking to the national convention of the American Legion in Dallas, Texas, said that cutting American defense spending in favor of "hand-outs here, subsidies there" would lead to national suicide.

The Senator told his listeners that there was no surer way to make America a second - rate power than follow the social welfare program advocated by President Johnson and his party followers. Britain, he said, had followed a similar course with the result that she was no longer able to rank as a major power in the world.

Understandably provoked by these remarks, a British reporter sent the following question to the Senator: "Is it not more likely that Britain may have spent herself ruthlessly standing alone against Hitler in the war?" Instead of an answer to his question the reporter duly received a terse note from one of the Goldwater aides which read: "Senator Goldwater never discusses questions like that."

Though we would dearly love to share the British journalist's indignation over this whole affair we cannot support the decision contained in his question that Britain stood alone against Hitler.

Britain at no time during the war stood alone against the Nazi might — the Commonwealth was always beside her. It is a pity that the correspondent ignored this in his criticism of Senator Goldwater's speech. Such an oversight could easily blunt the point he was attempting to make.

Alger Heroes Under Attack

Toronto Star

Dr. J. R. H. Morgan, director of the Ontario Curriculum Institute, says truly that our fast-moving, complex society "has no place in it for uneducated, poorly educated or inappropriately educated men and women." But he goes on to say that the time has come when "Horatio Alger" cannot reach the top alone by a combination of will, will and luck.

Correction, Dr. Morgan. You ought to know your Alger better than that.

The hotchkick, ragamuffin of poor but honest lad 'd Strive and Succeed and s a z o r e of other Alger stories never did make it alone. He always latched on to a rich benefactor. That is where he got paid off.

So the highly dubious underlying morality that the Alger books taught was: If you want to succeed, find yourself a sugar - daddy.

The First World War came to an end at 11 a.m. after the signing of an armistice near Compeigne, France, 46 years ago today —in 1918. It was a' this same spot that Hitler gained the official notice of the French defeat during the Second World War, 23 years later. In a message to his nation, U.S. President Woodrow Wilson declared in 1918: "Everything for which America fought has been accomplished."

Memory's Closed Door

Hamilton Spectator

There are few of us who won't remember suffering through the difficulties of memory work in school. Just exactly how beneficial it was to commit reams of verse to memory has often puzzled us. All we can remember from school is the first line of a poem that began: "Tiger, tiger, burning bright. . ."

What we can remember is a host of useless facts and never anything like our own telephone number or the essential birthdays and anniversaries bolstering a marriage.

We were asked for the license number of our automobile and didn't have the faintest idea but we knew a squid had ten tentacles and an octopus eight, something the parking attendant didn't know.

Unfortunately nobody ever asks about the things we remember like the fact that Rasputin was killed on Dec. 29, 1916 or that hippopotamus means "riverhorse" but the animal is really a pig.

All we've ever asked is "Did you mail that letter?" or "What are we doing Tuesday night?" How do we know?

Bright Boys Incompatible

Undoubtedly the most eggheaded organization in the world is a society called "Mensa". The only qualification for joining it is the brains to score higher than 98 percent of the general population on an intelligence test.

Purpose of Mensa, which has some 5,000 members, chiefly in Britain and the United States, is to promote contact between intellectuals and to spark the interchange of ideas by any and all subjects. Chapters in different cities hold regular meetings to bring members and minds together.

Recently, the American branch of the society queried a large number of former members to find out why they had let their membership lapse. The most common reason given was:

"Did not like other members."

Young Boy Puts Grown Men to Shame

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A 9-year-old boy I happened to be talking to the other day mentioned that several of his classmates were taking judo lessons. I asked him if he were interested in doing the same. When he shook his head, I said, "Don't you want to learn to defend yourself better?"

"No," he said, "I can take care of anyone my own size — and if one of the big boys comes after me, I'm better off practising running than judo."

"But it would still give you an advantage with boys your own size," I persisted.

"I don't want an advantage like that," he said. "It's too dangerous."

"Too dangerous how?" I questioned.

"Well," he said, "suppose I'm playing with some of my friends just horsing around, you know. Sometimes what starts as a game gets serious and before you know it, you're really fighting. If I knew judo, I just might start to use it when I got mad. And that's a good way to lose friends."

"I think you could control yourself at such times," I put in.

"Maybe so," he said. "It's not just friends, though. If somestrange kid my own age got tough with me, and I knew judo there'd be a real temptation to let him have it. Just a push or a poke might do him off somewise — but I probably wouldn't stop with that if I knew judo. I might break his arm, or something, and who needs that?"

"Aren't there some bullies around where it might come in handy?"

"That's a funny thing about bullies," he said. "You don't have to be stronger or tougher than they are or even have to be not afraid of them and let them know that you'll stand up to them. Every bully knows me — the only kids they bother are the ones who are afraid of them."

"But wouldn't the ones who are afraid of them be helped if they learned judo?" I inquired.

"I don't think so," he said. "They're frightened of being hurt — and learning to hurt someone else doesn't help you get over that fear. They don't know that they're really weak, not strong — and when they know that, they don't need judo."

I said nothing more, because he was so absolutely right. And I thought how extraordinarily touching and sa. it is that a 9-year-old boy could so grasp the difference between aggressiveness and courage, and so confidently wish along that narrow path between the two, when so many millions of presumed "men" have not yet learned that lesson.

Too Much Weight During Pregnancy Is Dangerous

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am pregnant and have an awful weight problem. My ankles swell. By nighttime I can feel the swelling even behind my knees.

I'm trying to keep my weight down, what would be the proper calorie intake? — Mrs. T. W.

Too much weight in pregnancy is a hazard, both from the standpoint of safety and of comfort.

However, the swollen ankles and eggs could be due to something else — although I could speak more intelligently about this if I had some idea of what your weight is, how much you have gained, and how far along you are in your pregnancy.

The swelling could be due to inadequate veins in the legs (varicose veins, for example.) This could be complicated by pressure on the veins due to the pregnancy (it is quite possible for such pressure to be the abdomen to restrict circulation at that point).

I presume that you already are aware that round garters or other tight garments that interfere with circulation should be avoided.

Just to be safe, however, consult your doctor regularly to guard against the possibility that the swelling is due to poor functioning of the kidneys. If you have headaches, dizziness or disturbances of vision, you certainly must see your doctor without delay.

As to the weight alone, an increase of 20 pounds for the entire pregnancy is reasonable, on account. Naturally this means that the increase should be gradual, with little gain at first, so you won't be too heavy by the end of the pregnancy.

Watching your own height, and how active you are, I can't be too precise about the calorie intake. But between 1,500 and 1,700 calories a day will be adequate.

The important point is to be sure that your diet includes the things you need, with emphasis on protein (lean meat, fowl, fish, eggs, cheese), calcium (milk, or other calcium-containing milk has its full quota of calcium) and vitamins. Fruit, vegetables, fruit juices and cereals will supply vitamins not included in the other foods just mentioned. You may have to restrict salt. Ask your doctor about that. His also can advise whether you should have extra calcium or vitamins.

This should give you a working knowledge of how to arrange your diet. It might be helpful for you to read my two leaflets, "Lost Secret of Reducing," and "Calorie Chart," which will give you some information on what to eat and what foods will give you the necessary nutrition without too many calories. You can obtain the two leaflets by sending 30 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Belleville Ontario Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: Does gall bladder trouble cause chest pains? — M. H.

Usually not, but it can cause pain under the right shoulder blade and shoulder, and sometimes in the pit of the stomach, which might be interpreted as "chest pain" at times.

Dear Dr. Molner: Lately my voice has been getting very raspy and I constantly have a tightness in my throat. Although my throat is not sore, it feels strained. I am 32 and do not smoke. Can this be corrected through exercises or is it advisable to see my doctor? — Mrs. H. E. T.

Exercise can't correct hoarseness. You certainly must go to your doctor, because hoarseness, while not necessarily a dangerous symptom, may be such. As simple a thing as excessive tension may be involved, there may be inflammation, or there may be a tumor, often benign, sometimes not.

U. S. Imports Impala Horns

Milwaukee Journal

President Johnson reported last week, with delight, that United States exports hit a new high of $32.3 billion last year. This was $3.1 billion more than was purchased from abroad.

While there is much to cheer about in these statistics, they do not really portray the true glamor of our international trade.

Scanning a list of recent trade actions, for instance, one finds this tidbit — $44,000 worth of frozen rooster necks for the Grossinkaufsgesellschaft Deutscher Konsumgenossenschaften company, Hamburg, Germany.

Here's more — 2,181 bags of watermelon seeds for Cairo, 24 sacks of seaweed for Hong Kong five boxes of monkey food for Malaya.

Consider some of the imports this country receives — five cartons of bamboo cricket cages from Japan, a carton of albatross eggs from Ecuador, 6,000 pounds of dry salted elk hides from Sweden. Ever hear of a swizzle fizzer? Two tons of them arrived from Great Britain and customs officials are still scratching their heads.

The most prettifying imports, however, were the three crates from Mombasa containing two Impala horns, two elephant feet and 30 pounds of hippopotamus teeth. Something different for next year's spring fashions!

Want to Build Youth Hostels In Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—The great Lakes region of the Canadian Youth Hostels Association seeks a grant of $300,000 from the Ontario government to build a system of youth hostels in the province.

Appearing before the legislature's select committee on youth Tuesday, the association outlined plans to build the low-cost youth hostels on the Bruce Trail and then along the Muskoka Trail.

This would create a chain of hostels from Quebec City to Ottawa to southern Ontario. Officials of the youth hostels organization termed this a "useful means of encouraging youth from French-speaking and English-speaking Canada to travel and mingle to a greater extent."

Members of the 14-man select committee generally accept the association's proposal favorably. However, the select committee itself can only recommend that the government provide grants for youth hostels.

The non - profit association now operates 50 hostels and has 4,000 members in Canada. Its main aim is to provide inexpensive overnight lodging and meals for youth out to see the country.

Scientists Want North Converted To Free Zone

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Two scientists, one American and one Russian — have resurrected a proposal for converting the north gradually into a nuclear-free zone.

Canadian and United States spokesmen expressed cautious interest but withheld comment pending study.

In its initial step, the plan would put Alaska and part of western Siberia within the zone, clearing out nuclear weapons and their delivery vehicles. Radar and conventional aircraft would be left.

A second step would extend the zone to Greenland, requiring Danish agreement, and the rest of Siberia.

Canada, Norway and Sweden would be involved in a third stage if that was possible.

MADE SIMULTANEOUSLY

The proposal, made simultaneously in the U.S. and Russia, comes from biophysicist Alexander Rich of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Aleksandre Vinogradov, director of the Varnadsky Institute in Moscow.

Their plan recalls an American proposal in 1957 which Canada backed and which called for throwing the area north of the Arctic Circle open to universal inspection as a way of reducing fears of a surprise nuclear attack.

Canada's chief condition for permitting such inspection, as stated to the UN Security Council, was that there be equal areas of inspection on both sides. The proposal like others came to nothing.

President Johnson Making Plans for Excise Tax Cut

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (CP-AP)—President Johnson meets with Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon here today to make plans for a cut in the excise or so-called luxury taxes, a 10-percent levy imposed as a wartime measure but never repealed.

Johnson, winding up a first round of post - election conferences with cabinet advisers, also invited Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges to visit his ranch to talk about voluntary compliance with the new civil rights law and the business outlook at home and abroad.

Both State Secretary Dean Rusk and Defence Secretary Robert McNamara conferred with the president Tuesday at the 400-acre LBJ Ranch.

Johnson wanted to talk over with Dillon tax legislation to be submitted to Congress in January. During the election campaign the president said he will recommend a major cut in excise taxes. He also hinted at broader tax cuts in the longer range future.

The president's efforts to reduce the budget deficit, now totalling about $5,700,000,000 a year, will be affected by the size and timing of the planned cut in excise levies.

NEED FOR CAUTION

Excise taxes net close to $15,000,000,000 a year—an amount large enough to discourage any proposal to eliminate them entirely. The 10-per-cent tax is levied on a variety of items such as furs, cosmetics and leather goods.

The president, who will be concentrating for the next several weeks on budget planning and new legislative proposals, got some encouraging budgetary news Tuesday.

McNamara handed him preliminary figures indicating that defence spending next year can again be kept below $50,000,000,000. This would increase prospects of a total budget below $100,000,000,000 — a psychological barrier Johnson wants to avoid.

Defence spending in the current year now is estimated at $49,800,000,000 of a $97,200,000,000 budget.

Member Says People Tired Of Delays

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Waterloo South federal byelection, won Monday night by Max Saltzman of the New Democratic Party, is a "perfect" example of a protest vote against both the old parties, Conservative Gordon Fairweather, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Royal, N.B., said Tuesday.

Both Liberal and Conservative parties should accept it as a warning that the people are tired of delaying tactics in the House of Commons "which are delaying the ordinary running of affairs," he said.

Mr. Fairweather spoke to students at a University of Western Ontario PC Club rally in aid of their campaign for election as "government" in the university's model parliament Friday.

Mr. Fairweather said he is not a "revolutionary" but he has had disagreements with PC Leader John Diefenbaker over the flag question.

ASKS OPPORTUNITY

"I feel now that Parliament should be given an opportunity to decide (the flag issue)," he said. But he added a plebiscite on the flag would do nothing but get the whole country "churned up."

Mr. Fairweather, a lawyer, is a former attorney-general in his home province of New Brunswick. He is particularly interested in Canada's constitution and said Tuesday there should be a rearrangement of constitutional responsibilities more fitting to the present day.

"Canada is not really in a good enough mood to discuss constitutional amendments or a new constitution," he said. "What we must seek is within this area is to establish confidence in French Canada that we mean what we say."

Given 30 Days For Disturbance

WHITBY, Ont. (CP)— Russell Arthur Willan, 21, of Whitby, was sentenced Tuesday to 30 days in jail for escaping police custody Hallowe'en night and fined $25 for causing a disturbance on the main street of Brooklin, 10 miles north of here.

Similar charges against William Ralph Hunter, 19, also of Whitby, were dismissed.

Police said about 80 youths and girls made so much noise that some villagers were awakened. Willan and another youth were handcuffed together when they ran from police but returned two hours later with the handcuffs cut in two.

ANCIENT POLISH

CALGARY (CP) — Dinosaur bones from Alberta's Drumheller Valley have more than the usual visual interest after Calgary lapidary Oscar Green has finished them. Green has turned a hobby into a professional family business, and with the need for local souvenirs, he is finding a ready market among tourists for the highly polished bones.

Sheet Metal Workers Try To Organize Northern Plant

Nearly 20 local labor leaders last night agreed to rally their union locals to the aid of the Sheet Metal Workers International Association. The sheet Metal Workers are trying to organize the Northern Electric plan in Belleville, in competition with an employees' association already established at the plant and the United Electrical Workers. The firm's agreement with the employees' association expires in February, the Sheet Metal Workers plan to apply for recognition about the end of December.

Support of the Sheet Metal Workers by local C.L.C. affiliates will consist mainly of manpower. Members of C.L.C. affiliated locals will be canvassing Northern Electric employees, to promote the Sheet Metal Workers union. The agreement was reached last night at a meeting called by Sheet Metal Workers International vice president Larry LeMoine at the Sun Valley Motel.

Reason for the support of the Sheet Metal Workers, according to Belleville Labor Council president Gerald Cunningham, is to maintain labor unity in the area. If a Sheet Metal Workers local is formed at Northern Electric, the local will be affiliated with the C.L.C. and will be invited to join the Belleville Labor Council. The U.E.W. was expelled from the C.L.C. and would not be invited to join the C.L.C. affiliated labor council.

Speaking Personally

RUNNING WILD

Not long ago an article appeared in this newspaper quoting a leading British designer, Mary Quant as saying that fashion rules were made to be broken.

"When you break a rule you automatically arrive at something different in fashion and this leads to fun," she is quoted as saying.

So what does Miss Quant advocate? She says she believes in mixing patterns and colors wildly — spots with stripes for example. We-ll all right, Miss Quant, if you say so. But it sounds pretty far out and mighty wild to me.

She doesn't like gloves. "They're old looking and irrelevant" — so away with the gloves. We usually come home with only the left hand one anyway, and have a fine collection of left-handed gloves.

She disapproves of jewellery — "it's old making" — so off with the earrings and the brooch.

She is generally against hats "because young people don't wear hats and if you must cover your hair it is more fun to find a new trick with a scarf." I'm afraid I'm too old a dog to learn new tricks, Miss Quant, but I'll see what I can do with my old scarf.

So there you are — dressed in spots and stripes, with colors wildly mixed, sans gloves, sans jewellery, and with a scarf tied trickily around your head. Now, let's see. Where can you go? Well, it's Wednesday so there must be a tea or bazaar somewhere.

Better warn people to stand back and get a firm grip on something, or they'll be shocked right out of their polka dots. You've certainly arrived at "something different."

I wonder if Canadian Press spelled her name correctly or if it should have been "Quaint?"

FOR THE HUNROD

Aluminum foil has many uses for the housewife as many women know, but it is also useful for hunters and campers. So if it is not too late for the hunting season, here are some helpful hints.

Use foil for wrapping a gun. It keeps it moisture proof, dust proof and prevents rust.

A canteen can be kept cooler by wrapping it in foil.

It is a good reflector for lanterns used outdoors.

Before using cooking pots over an open fire, wrap the foil around the bottoms and save scrubbing off black soot deposits.

If you're feminine you could use aluminum containers or foil for protecting food supplies from insects; to wrap an extra pair of socks in case of a sudden rain storm; to keep matches ready to use in any weather; to package small articles together so they won't be misplaced; to make a handy re-usable drinking cup, carried flat in the pocket and formed into a cup when needed; to provide a base for campfires built on bare ground. It increases the heat through reflection and helps prevent fire spreading underground.

Since this column is probably read by very few hunters, I hope their wives will pass along some of these hints.

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN DERBIN, MOTHER OF 5

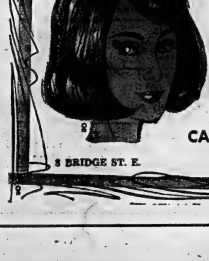
Sometimes we tend to forget the benefits derived from the simplest baby-care routines. Take baby's stroll...

...ing about in the fresh air reaps wonderful rewards. It invites an appetite and sets a cheek to bloom. It...

...dispels dispositions and makes the sandman welcome. Fresh-airing does all these things for you, too, so try not to skip these jaunts unless the weather is mean.

Fresh-air appetites appreciate the "stick-to-the-ribs" satisfaction of Gerber Strained and Junior Meats. Made from government inspected cuts, they're low in fat; easy to digest. Most important, they're cooked by a special method that helps preserve true-meat flavours and assures an unusually smooth, moist texture. Altogether, they're the most succulent foods you can give your baby to aid his growth. Has baby tried the new Strained Chicken & Veal? M-mmm.

Important. Now Gerber Meats, like the other foods, come in convenient jars with "Twist-Pop" caps for safe refrigeration of unused portions.



In the crib. A gaily striped or coloured beach towel makes a pretty and practical coverlet for baby's crib. Cheers up a room . . . is easy to wash . . . eliminates fancy ironing.

Baby basic. Baby cereals are pretty much a daily menu "must" from the infant age right through the toddler stage for the important nutrients they supply. Gerber Cereals have added iron, calcium and thiamine, riboflavin and niacin . . . important B-vitamins. As for your baby's eating pleasure, flavours are pleasantly mild, the texture ever so nice to the tongue. For you, they stir to smooth perfection in seconds . . . stay that way throughout the serving. Five varieties. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Susanna's Family Fare

DRIP, DRIP

Dear Susanna: Mine is a case of a daughter-in-law giving a helpful hint to her husband's mother — and I must say I couldn't be happier that my son married such a bright young doll.

She dropped in the other morning, and I took her downstairs to show her where I was preserving jelly. When I went to squeeze one of the bags, she asked me if I was sure I wanted to do that, because she said, squeezing the jelly bag gives it more juice, but the jelly will not be nearly as clear and sparkling.

You know, she's right — So Glad She's In The Family

You know what else? I feel sure she couldn't have happened to a nicer mother-in-law SUSANNA

TEE ON

Dear Susanna: If you have a golfer in the family, a foolproof method for keeping your sewing machine drawer tidy is to glue golf tees upside down to the bottom and in place your spools of thread on them. You will be surprised and delighted at the needle-to-measure fit. I also try to keep them sorted in rows according to color — not the tees, the thread

After ironing dresser scarves, roll them on empty roller from wax or foil wrap, and store them for future use. This way there are no fold marks and they lie nice and flat on the dresser.

For uninteresting drawers and cupboards that need a little glamorizing, unwrap bars of toilet soap and place on linen shelves, lucky boots, or between lingerie. It not only imparts a lovely scent, but at the same time the soap hardens so that it lasts much longer when you come to use it. — Mrs. W. Langford

That's a bonnie hint therrie m'wee lass, and I'm glad to see you're no wastin' things — SUSANNA

Horticultural Society Hears Talk On Outdoor Christmas Lights

The Horticultural Society which met in the Moira Secondary School staff room on Monday evening was treated to a preview of dazzling Christmas splendor by Mr. Phillip R. Wright of the lighting service of the Toronto office of the Ontario Hydro who gave a most interesting illustrated address on "Outdoor Christmas lighting."

He began by mentioning ten different types of lights used. Six of these have been introduced within the last four years. In particular he mentioned three types D 20 and D 27 which are transparent lamps; D 40 snowball lamps; white and D 30 lee lamps which come in four colors. Floodlamps also come in six colors in 150 watts and 90 watts. The floodlamps cost about six dollars are the best buy because they do not crack as the cheaper ones do.

SHOWS SLIDES

The speaker went on to show pictures of decorated houses and commented on them. There should be a focal point, perhaps a front door, a picture window, a garage door or a tree. He showed slides in which the garage door decorated with cut-outs and flowers was the centre of the decorating scheme and one which showed the interior of a five-car garage portraying an old time Christmas with the blazing hearth, shimmering Christmas tree and cut-out figures in realistic poses.

He continued by saying that if there is more than one focal point the display should be evenly balanced and even then a nativity scene should not be balanced with Santa Claus and his reindeer.

In one picture a whole house was silhouetted with lights, in another a television aerial helped support a blazing Christmas tree and in a third a stump helped support an impressive enormously tall Christmas candle. A beautiful front door was decorated with a large gilded evergreen spray lighted by white floods.

Color should be carefully used, the speaker stressed, and illustrating this point the two most attractive slides showed a symphony in green and gold and a strikingly beautiful all-white lighting arrangement with snowball lights. Not only were the outside decorations white, but also those on the Christmas tree which shone through the picture window.

Floodlights not only point up decorated focal points but they may also be used to cast interesting silhouettes on blank walls. In passing Mr. Wright brew mentioned that black bulbs mixed with others give interesting shadowed effects.

INTERIOR USES

He showed a few interior uses for ice lamps in table settings which were most effective and one quite dramatic centre light to go over the Christmas dining table which was made of gilded chicken wire over gleaming colored lights.

Mr. Wrybrew had hoped to bring leaflets from G.E. giving complete information about the various types of bulbs but they had not arrived when he left However, interested people may obtain copies by writing the Ontario Hydro Office, 620 University Avenue, Toronto.

So stimulated were the members of the Horticultural Society by this most interesting talk, that the executive in their brief session after the meeting decided to offer prizes for the most beautiful and original Christmas decorations in Belleville and details will be available later on.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. A. E. Bell of the Belleville Public Utilities, and Mr. Allen expressed thanks on behalf of the members of the Horticultural Society.

WEDDING

RUSHLOW — MACASKILL

At St. George's Anglican Church in Halifax, Rev. H. Y. MacLean officiated at the double ring ceremony uniting in marriage Elaine Marie MacAskill and Norman Leonard Rushlow. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacAskill, Grand Lake Road, and Mr. Rushlow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rushlow, Belleville. For the ceremony the church was decorated with gladioli, fall foliage. Trevor was organist and Miss Nancy Ardelli, cousin of the bride was soloist.

The bride was given by her father, wore a floor length gown of white silk organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice was pearl trimmed and the skirt featured a front panel trimmed with pearls and embroidered flowers. Her tiered shoulder length veil was held in place by a crown of pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink rose and lily-of-the-valley.

Miss Betty McLeod as bridesmaid wore a long gown of peacock blue brocaded satin with matching headpiece and veil and her flowers were deep pink roses and white carnations.

Dave Cummings was best man and ushers were Harry Reynolds and Boyle Rose.

The bride's mother wore a navy blue dress with pink accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Guests were served by friends of the bride and bridegroom.

The couple left for New York, Niagara Falls and Belleville, Ont., the bride travelling in a three-piece double knit green suit with green accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. On their return they will reside in Fort Hawkesbury, where the bridegroom is manager of Woolworth's and the bride is on the staff of New Scotia Pulp, Ltd.

Wives Enjoy Dinner Given By Masons

The annual "Go to Chapter With Your Husband Night" was observed at the regular convocation of Quinte Chapter, No. 237, Royal Arch Masons, in the Masonic Temple on Monday night.

A well arranged dinner was served by the men, everything was provided and served by the companions (it is admitted the best some of the ladies may contribute of little to the preparation of some items of food) but it is the general idea of the members of the chapter that for this one night the lady of the house will have one free night of the year, without having to prepare, serve or clean up after dinner.

The regular order of Masonic ritual as to proposing and responding of various toasts was cut so as to give all the time and attention to the fair sex.

Ex. Comp. "Bud" Gill in a short but sincere manner, extended a hearty welcome to all the companions to have the ladies at the festive board and publicly thanked them for the loyalty and love they displayed in the management of their homes and families.

Mrs. Helen Smith, in reply, on behalf of the ladies, publicly thanked the companions for their hospitality and thoughtfulness in that they were one night off from household duties. She expressed her sincere appreciation for the many courtesies shown to her by the members of the craft. She recommended that the wives encourage their husbands to avail themselves of every opportunity to meet with others at all Masonic activities, and expressed the congratulations of the ladies present to the well planned dinner that had been arranged by the committee and great enjoyed by the women.

LADIES ENTERTAINED

Following the meeting of the chapter were in session in the chapter room the ladies were entertained in the auditorium of the temple.

Mrs. W. Mont Barlow introduced Mr. Mac Fraser, manager of the Avon Jewellery Co., who gave a descriptive and informative talk on the engaging and manufacture of costume jewellery.

Mrs. Doug Ellis thanked Mr. Mazer for his kindness in giving the women this informative talk.

The second part of the entertainment was rendered by Mrs. Barlow was an illustrated (coloured slides) trip through Italy by Mrs. Allan Wesse.

Her commentary on the views shown by the slides had the effect of transporting the ladies present by word picture through the beautiful and wonderful island.

Mrs. W. Gray expressed to Mrs. Wesse the appreciation of the ladies for the pleasure she had given them.

The members of the chapter joined the ladies after the business and degrees of the meeting were concluded and enjoyed light refreshments with them during an hour of getting acquainted.

A number of visitors from chapters in the district were present and were welcomed by Ex. Comp. Carm Guest, First Principal of the Chapter, who also acted as chairman for the evening. Much of the success of the night goes to Ex. Compl. Reg Cooper as chairman of refreshments and to Comp Norm McIdrum who arranged the entertainment.

Kiwanis Ladies Dress Dolls For Toy Project

On Thursday evening the Ladies' Kiwanis Auxiliary met for their second meeting of the season.

During the business meeting the marathon bridge was discussed. This is to start Wednesday afternoon, January 6th.

The St. Patrick's Day dessert bridge was also planned. This is just a month before the actual day. Both these items have become annual events and projects of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Another project of this group is the dressing of dolls that will dress the simple stopping at the Centre. The caretaker will be glad to help.

The Kiwanis ladies held an auction sale amongst themselves, organized by program chairman Mrs. John Denton. It was most successful. The proceeds from this sale will pay for gifts and the Christmas party for the White Cane Club.

Biologist Wins $39,000 Grant, Runs Home

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)—Elizabeth Hay is a biologist and homemaker—and a prize-winning research biologist.

The family knew of her talents, so they weren't too excited when the 33-year-old biologist won a $39,000 grant from the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission to continue her Stanford University research into photo-synthesis.

"Many more women can do what I'm doing," she said. Mrs. Weaver, mother of three, says the lack of women winning such grants is due to lack of encouragement.

Her husband, Harry, a physicist, said: "Research is something that's with you all the time. It's a relief when they come through."

Mrs. Weaver is seeking evidence about an elusive component of cell walls. She hopes the primary energy converter in the photo-synthetic process by which green plants use sunlight to shine turn carbon dioxide and water into sugars and other vital tissue. This supports all life on earth.

Every day at 3 p.m. Mrs. Weaver leaves the Hansen laboratories of physics on the campus and heads home to meet children Patricia Lynn, 9, Mark, 8, and Tom, 5, when they return from school.

"I give them time until they go to bed, then I go back to my studies," she said.

Mrs. Weaver credits her husband for much of her achievement. He encouraged her to continue school 20 years ago when they were first married while she was still a student at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio.

She has given up civic activities most women participate in and has little time for the skiing and tennis she enjoys.

"I made up my mind some time ago that I like cooking, and I'm lucky to be happy with my work and have a well-adjusted family," she said.

JUNIORETTES

ALBURY — The Albury Juniorettes met at the home of Mrs. Ken Wilhelmina. The girls welcomed the home economist, Miss Harrison to their meeting. After discussing blas binding many members made and joined strips of bias. Next Peck demonstrated corded piping.

Plans for achievement day and Christmas party at the close of the meeting a tasty lunch was served.

FIFTH MEETING

The fifth meeting of the Albury Juniorettes was held recently at the home of Mrs. Neil Peck. Rebecca Hatfield demonstrated the making of a facing and understitching. During the business meeting members worked on their garments.

Skirts Shown Four Inches Above Knees

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a wonder the show room wasn't raided.

Skirts were four inches above the knee. Keyholes and slits strategically framed the navel. Transparent chiffon was draped over seemingly uncied bodies.

The crowd gasped with the appearance of each new model in the small, packed showroom as designer Jacques Tiffeau presented a spring collection unrivalled in daring, even by Rudi Gernreich of topless bathing suit fame.

African tribal music provided an appropriate background, for the natives were indeed restless.

Buyers applauded wildly. Reporters scribbled frantically. Cameramen loaded and reloaded.

The beginning was mild as long-legged lasses appeared in skinny dresses, trousers and jewel jackets with standaway collars.

Then they bared their dimpled knees. But the audience was somewhat prepared for this. Word had been bandied about that the French designer's skirts this season were the shortest this side of the Atlantic.

COATS TYPICAL

Coats and suits were typically Tiffeau in styling: that is, executed in luscious pastel woolens and linens with slouched back shoulders.

Belts, when they were worn, were tied high under the bosom.

The skirts, pleated, wrapped or slightly full, were hemmed high, bitchier and nearly as high as the thighs.

Among the dresses were skinny pastel jerseys, bellies or backs cut away to reveal bloused and smock-like numbers — all together exposing more leg than most girls can be comfortably clad in — windy corner.

Finale of the models was expert showmanship, delivered by the curtis girls.

Wearing their great wide stoles, they undulated back and forth in gowns that revealed a flashed midriff line and then, with keyhole and teardrop cutouts, bared a lot more than can be euphemistically described.

Models skittered about, flailing the immense yardage of chiffon about their flawless forms. On another model a dinner skirt fell open at the wide waist, exposing the hip in flesh-colored tights and one lone bare limb.

Nazla Dane To Address Eureka Lodge

As officer of the Canadian Life Insurance Association, Miss Nazla Dane will address Eureka Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 283 on Saturday evening when ladies' night will be observed in the Masonic Temple.

Miss Dane's topic will be "Family Financial Planning", a subject in which she is well versed as a director of the Educational and Women's Division of C.L.I.A.

At the national level the Federation has been instrumental in passing the Federal Equal Pay Act; having more women appointed to Boards and Commissions, such as Civil Service and the National Parole Board; in having changes in Unemployment Insurance legislation, Income Tax legislation and Estate Tax legislation.

FILES SUIT

DETROIT (AP)—William C. Newberg, former president of Chrysler Corporation, has filed a $2,000,000 libel suit against the Curtis Publishing Company, publishers of the Saturday Evening Post. The action is based on an article The Automakers and Their Mighty Works, in the Sept. 19 issue of The Post.

Two Indians Design 1965 IODE Calendar

TORONTO (CP) — Two Micmac Indians have designed the 1965 IODE calendar, the 40th put out by the women's organization since Wilhelmina Gordon of Kitchener, Ont., originally suggested the project.

The new calendar, depicting legends from Indian tribes across Canada, is the work of Michael Francis and Stephen Dedam of Big Cove, N.B., with accompanying text by Dr. Ivan Morsewell of the New Brunswick department of industry and development.

The IODE's goal is to place a copy of the calendar in every classroom in Canada.

10,000 Bombay Girls Told Not to Acquire Husbands

By RUKMINI DEVI

Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP)—Some 10,000 working girls in Bombay have been told that the moment they acquire husbands they will be fired.

The girls are employed in a score of drug factories owned by Indian as well as British and American interests. They mostly work as packers, checkers and ampoule-fillers and earn between $30 to $50 a month.

The employers say married girls lose their efficiency. They also speak of the problem of "divided loyalties" — meaning that a married girl is more interested in her home than in her job.

The Pharmaceutical Workers' Federation says the employers are prejudiced against married girls because they have to pay them maternity benefits. The federation has described the "anti - marriage" employment clause as "cruel, obnoxious and feudal."

The Evening News, Bombay's leading daily, quoted the employers' argument as "anachronistic" and said it was "unthinkable" that women should be discriminated against in a progressive era of westernized society as Bombay.

The Pharmaceutical Workers' Federation, which has a state-wide membership of 75,000, has threatened a passive resistance movement if the government does not force the drug factories to scrap the anti-marriage employment clause. Bombay trade unions have promised full backing.

The All India Women's Conference and the Graduate Women's Association have also criticized the employers.

Federation sources say hundreds of girls have had to postpone their weddings because of the fear of losing their jobs.

Twelve girls were dismissed when it was found out that they had got married secretly.

Couple Grows Many Herbs For Food

PICKERING, Ont. (CP) — Anyone with a taste for Bavarian cream with marigo-o petals will be in sympathy with the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Alan McKenzie.

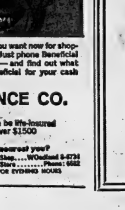
The McKenzies like such food and when they found they couldn't obtain the required herbs they decided to grow their own.

It wasn't easy. At first their knowledge of herbs was limited and, Mrs. McKenzie says, "It took us two years of writing and hunting to find tarragon plants."

The type of farmland presented another difficulty. Their 100 acres just east of Toronto were embedded with rocks and gravel which made the growing of herbs difficult.

However, persistence paid off. The McKenzies accumulated a library on herbs and spaded the plots where they intended to grow their delicacies.

Now the herb garden produces 75 varieties and the flower gardens are full of unusual specimens.



"I am always on the hunt for unusual recipes using fresh and dried herbs and flowers," Mrs. McKenzie says. "Then we experiment. My husband is with me all the way as long as it has to do with food."

The herbs may be found jars of dried savory, marjoram basil, lemon thume, tarragon vinegar, jellies of mountain ash and other herbs.

Mrs. McKenzie says a spread for whole wheat sandwiches may be made from chopped chives, fennel, lemon thyme and tarragon mixed with salted butter.

As for the Bavarian cream with marigold petals, mix one pint of milk, three egg yolks and gelatin, then fold in a cup of pounded marigold petals. Surround the unmoulded Bavarian cream with marigold blossoms.

SALUTE CAME LATE

The hand salute used by most modern armies did not come into general use until the 19th century.

Dark Rich Fruit Cake

By MARY MOORE

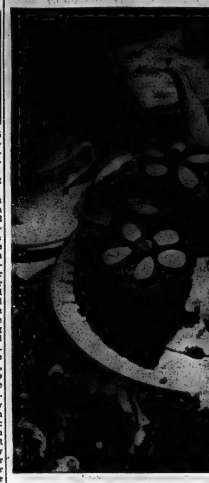
This dark fruit cake is handsome and lives up to your expectations of a dark fruit cake: spicy, moist, fruity, nutty and rich. And girls, you can freeze it! It slices neatly direct from freezer. I stored half of it in the storage part of the refrigerator. It sliced equally well. You may make this cake now, wrap well in three plastic bags, and store in refrigerator to ripen or wrap in three plastic bags then freezer-wrap and store in freezer.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Barbecued Spareribs; Brussels Sprouts with Herbs (see Tuesday); Scalloped Potatoes; Shredded Chinese Lettuce and Spinach Salad with Italian French Dressing; Raisin Rice Pudding; Coffee.

1964 DARK RICH FRUIT CAKE (makes over 7½ lbs. cake):



4 cup dark seedless raisins, 2 cups washed and dried currants, 4 cups seeded Muscatel raisins, separated, lightly packed, ½ cup (two 2-oz. slices) candied pineapple, sliced, ½ cup whole red glace cherries, ½ cup whole green glace cherries, 1¼ cups chopped mixed candied peels (including citron), ½ cup brandy or strong tea (see below), 2 cups sliced blanched almonds, 1¼ cups butter (room temperature), 2 cups light brown sugar, 8 large eggs, 1-3 cup molasses, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2½ cups unsifted all purpose flour, ½ teaspoon baking soda, 1½ teaspoons salt, 4 teaspoons cinnamon, ¾ teaspoon ginger, ¾ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon mace, ¾ teaspoon cloves.

(Note: There is no baking powder in this cake).

Combine all fruits and peels (not nuts). Sprinkle with tea or brandy. (Note: I brewed 2 tea bags in ¾ cup boiling water 7 minutes and measured ¼ cup strong tea.) Let soak while you proceed with next step. In very large mixing bowl or preserving kettle cream butter until light, then beat in sugar until blended and light. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well between additions. Stir in molasses and vanilla. Sift the unsifted flour with the baking soda, salt and spices. Mix all this flour mixture into the soaked fruits adding almonds. Use your clean hands, if you like, to mix well. Then add all to creamed mixture and be sure they are thoroughly combined.

Line two 9" ring pans neatly with single layer of aluminum foil and butter the foil. (Note: If you use angel food pans with removable centres, you must protect the crack at bottom by using long sheets of foil or triple wax paper which cover the crack — otherwise a little batter from the cooking batter might leak through.) Or use 2 standard loaf pans 4½ x 8½ x 2¾" triple-wax-paper-lined and buttered. Smooth tops of batter.

Bake at 275 deg. Fahr. 3¼ to 3½ hours with waterpan below during entire baking period. Replenish water in pans as it evaporates. Cool on cake racks in pans. See above for storage directions.

The recipe for Dark Rich Fruit Cake given today by Mary Moore yields seven and one-half pounds of cake. This is a beauty which will live up to your expectations. You may make it now and store it according to Mary's directions.

Ann Landers

Divorce Is Not Always The Magical Solution

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I hear you are against divorces, but I wish my folks would get one.

My father had to go to Europe on business for six weeks. When he was gone my mother was like a different person. She stopped smoking and was sweet as pie.

ANN LANDERS

My sister and brother got along together for the first time. There were no arguments in the house, no yelling, no slamming of doors. The peace and quiet was just heavenly.

Three days ago my father came home. Now everyone is behaving horribly again. I don't understand how a nice woman like my mother could have married such a mean-tempered man.

Please change your mind about divorce. In our family it would be the best thing for everybody. — A 13-YEAR-OLD WOMAN.

DEAR WOMAN — Some people should not live together because their personalities are poison to one another. If they don't discover this until after they have married and have had a family, they should live apart.

I didn't say get a divorce," I said live apart.

Divorce may appear to be the magic solution to your 13-year-old eyes, but let me assure you it doesn't always work that way. Mostly divorced people go on to do worse — not better. There are exceptions, of course, and I know a few. But the vast majority of second, third and fourth marriages prove to be no better than the first.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a man of 65 years of age. Three years ago I married a woman 10 years my junior.

I married Agnes for companionship, not to buy her plane tickets to go visit her children and their families. In the last two years she has been away 60% of the time. We have a housekeeper so my meals are prepared and the laundry is done, but I don't like being alone.

For the last five weeks Agnes has been visiting her son and his family. She telephoned last night and asked for more money so she can stay an additional two weeks. An hour later her son's wife called and begged me not to send more money but to insist that she come home because they are sick of her. What shall I do? — STYMIED.

DEAR STYMIED — This is no message for you to deliver, Dad. Your son-in-law should tell his mother it's time she went home and attended to her wifely responsibilities.

In the meantime, have a be the little heart-to-heart with Agnes and find out why she has such an itchy foot.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I went steady with Chet for six months. He is so handsome it makes me bawl to think of what he did to me.

After I pulled him through English, knitted him two sweaters and let him use my car all summer he told me we'd better break up. In case he gets voted King of Winter Carnival he wants a taller girl for his queen.

Three days ago he asked me if I'd write a book report for him. I said "No. Get one of the tall girls to write one." He called me a rotten sport and said I didn't have any character because I failed him when he needed me.

My dad says Chet's a jerk and I was right to refuse to help him but I feel guilty. What do you say?—TORTURED HEART.

DEAR HEART — He's not even a jerk — he's a twitch.

Don't feel guilty because you've regained your sanity and will no longer let the heel use you. Welcome to the free world, Toots.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: Very often I've sent out party invitations several weeks in advance, but have had to wait until a few days before the party to find out exactly who is coming. I'm planning another party at this time and will send out invitations two weeks ahead of time. How long should I wait for a reply before I start checking? I don't like to appear anxious, but I do want to know well enough in advance how many I can expect to attend. — Mrs. C. L., Tarrytown, N. Y.

ANSWER: It's a pity you have to go to the trouble of checking at all, but some people just refuse to answer invitations promptly, no matter how often they're told it's bad taste not to. If you don't get replies within a week, you can start checking. A week should give people a chance to line up baby sitters, if necessary, and otherwise smooth the way to accept your invitation.

QUESTION: A friend of ours was married two months ago. We had been invited to the wedding and reception but could not attend because of my husband's illness at the time. I was so busy and distracted taking care of him that I neglected to send a wedding present. Last week we received an "At Home" card from the couple. Prior to that, I had thought about sending them a gift, but just never had a chance to shop. I have now purchased a gift and was about to send it when the card arrived. If I send it now, will it give the impression it is in acknowledgement of the "At Home" card? Your help will be appreciated. — Mrs. H. O. R., Miami, Fla.

ANSWER: Since the gift is being sent so long after the wedding, a note should accompany it explaining the delay. Although the "At Home" card arrived in the meantime, I doubt that sending a gift at this time would give the impression it served as a reminder, especially if you enclose a covering note with it.

Tie a plastic dry-cleaner bag over your dress form to keep it clean.

The Experts Say

Cleanliness Big Factor In Caring for Skin

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—It is true that most people outgrow acne but that does not mean it should be left unattended, says Dr. Mark Rosnet, Toronto skin specialist.

Severe cases can leave physical scars, and even comparatively mild cases make some people feel so self-conscious that they may be left with personality scars.

"Even family doctors sometimes say, 'Oh, you'll just grow out of it,'" Dr. Rosnet admits. "But it may take many years and in the meantime there is a certain amount of damage done to the skin and it upsets a child's social life—all this while waiting to grow out of it."

Common sense is the main thing to use in caring for the skin, he says.

"The biggest causes of trouble are the extremes—either indifference and neglect or overdoing and making a major tragedy of any minor blemish.

"Cleanliness is the most important factor. Use hot water and a good soap at least three times a day. Keep your scalp clean and shampoo your hair at least once a week."

If you're a boy, have your hair cut short, and if you're a girl keep your hair away from your face.

Dr. Rosnet warns against experimenting with skin cleaners.

"It is true that when acne sufferers come to see us we often give them a medicated soap. But some try all the preparations sold over the counter. Most of those are decent, if you know how to use them, but people switch from one to another or use four or five at a time. They dry their skins out or irritate them."

Makeup properly used probably does no harm, he says. "The harm in makeup is not what you are doing but what you forget to do. Don't use a thick layer of makeup and no soap and water. Clean makeup off well, then wash your face.

Acne may be caused and aggravated by a combination of things, Dr. Rosnet says. "Heredity is one. Another is some hormonal disturbance — we know this exists although we don't know how to correct it."

Diet is probably a factor, although not as important as most people think, and it's a good idea to avoid too much chocolate in any form nuts—especially peanuts—soft drinks and an excess of fats and sweets.

AVOID PICKING

"Infection is a factor. Picking and squeezing will aggravate a tendency to scar, spread infection and increase inflammation.

"Most people try to remove blackheads, which is probably not too harmful if it is done gently and with at least a minimum of hygiene. And they'll usually disappear with proper treatment, but a big one is best removed in a doctor's office.

Dr. Rosnet recommends that boys suffering from acne use electric razors because they're not as hard on the skin as blades. He says, incidentally, that he is treating more boys than he did a few years ago but that they are still more inclined than girls to ignore severe acne.

Tension and fatigue can aggravate acne, as can warm humid weather.

"Sunshine will help in most cases, though there is more to summertime than sunshine—fresh air, relaxation."

And some bromide and iodide drugs may also contribute to acne.

Antibiotics in small doses are being used successfully to improve acne conditions, Dr. Rosnet says, and some hormone therapy is used, but results are uneven.

"There is no cure for acne until such time as nature takes over. What we can do is reduce infection, the over-activity of oil glands, and prevent scarring as much as possible."

Cured of Mental Breakdown, Happy Marriage Possible

DEAR DORIS — Should a mental patient marry? My husband was nice to me until he was told I had had a period in mental hospital. You see, I broke down again when he moved us away from all my friends, and after my first baby was born.

He is mean to all of us. Should I leave him when my youngest girl leaves school at 16? I love my children and thank God for their wonderful health.

Doris, do you think we should stay single? — BIRDLOVER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR BIRDLOVER—Persons who are sick, physically or mentally, should stay single. Some provinces require a mental health examination before marriage. But — and this is a big but — you can have a mental breakdown and get better. And marry with great success.

In a good marriage, physical and mental well-being are likely to improve. In a poor one, discouragement can trigger illness of many kinds. If you have raised three children, lovingly, in spite of a mean, resentful partner, I'd guess you have the fortitude to seek counsel and carry out a program suited to your particular situation. Do so.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Upon reading your answer to "French Kisser" several girls in our crowd have become worried. You suggested that there were some reasonable objections to French kissing. Let's hear them!

When a guy kisses you, we don't like to kick about the kind of kiss unless we have some good reasons on which we can rely.

Please print your answer in the paper, as it may be a hint to the boys. — VICTIMS OF FRENCH KISSING.

DEAR VICTIMS — French kissing is far too disturbing and passionate to be an acceptable kind of affection between girls and boys. If you permit it, you may be starting something you don't want to finish. — And believe it or not, the boys know they are getting away with something.

(Don't just muddle along. Let Doris guide you in handling your particular human problem. Write to her in care of this newspaper.)

River Valley W. I. Enjoys Meet Based on Agriculture

Mrs. Ernest Carr was hostess on November 8th for the regular meeting of River Valley Women's Institute. There were 24 members, three visitors and several pre-school children in attendance.

Mrs. Vernon Harry, president, conducted the business and welcomed the visitors. The secretary, Mrs. Carr, gave her report and Mrs. J. R. Donohoe gave a full financial statement. She said there had been a private donation given the scholarship fund. The correspondence included a letter of thanks from River Valley cemetery fund for assistance at their pie social. Another letter requested Christmas gifts for mental patients at Cobourg. Mrs. George Reasman volunteered to take the parcel to Belleville. The gifts are to be handed in before the end of November.

Mrs. E. C. Hay-Ellis of Elmvale sent greetings. The fall issue of the Home and Country was distributed. In the reports of standing committees Mrs. Jack Bush gave helpful household hints. Mrs. John Beswick read an article re an old United Empire Loyalist's home. Mrs. Glenn Bush gave an interesting account of the recent calf show at the Ottawa Winter Fair when 420 boys and 170 girls showed their animals.

INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION

Mrs. Roy Tucker told of the International co-operative year 1965 and said that Canada has been a prime mover in I.C.Y. since its beginning. This coming year groups in Canada should gain increasing recognition and public support for their work, thus increasing world understanding.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Friendship Link secretary, told of the Christmas gifts prepared for individual members of Abbott's Leigh W.I. and those in attendance placed their signatures on a Christmas greeting card to go with the parcel. For public relations Mrs. MacMullen told of the organization of another Eskimo branch at Reindeer Station, north of Inuvik. A parcel of two magazines sent through the post office will be welcomed by the 12 institutes in the North West Territories. She also read short clippings of Institute news.

TWEEDSMUIR HISTORY

Mrs. Roy Bush spoke briefly re the two Tweedsmuir history books depicting the Institute from the date of organization in 1910. Mrs. Harry Corby a board member reported over $50. proceeds from the cemetery social. Mrs. R. Tucker gave a report of A.C.W.W.

Mrs. Glenn Bush and Mrs. Charles Wilson attended the senior training course "More About Finishes". A group will begin this special class at an early date under their tuition. Mrs. Gerald Brooks said that the 4-Hint Club held four meetings with eight members. On November 28 the girls plan to entertain their mothers and their project is "The Supper Club".

The December meeting will be held on the third at the home of Mrs. Roy Bush and each member is to bring their cheer basket gift.

FINE PROGRAM

Mrs. Clarence Chard presided over the program and she read an interesting paper on agriculture which she and her husband had compiled. A copy of this will be preserved in the Tweedsmuir history book.

She said in part, "Agriculture is known to be the oldest industry in the world. It goes back to the 17th century in the neighboring provinces of Quebec and was the foundation of present day farming in Ontario.

"There are less people engaged in agriculture now than at the turn of the century due to modern machinery which does as much work as three men did with horses and previously with oxen which was even slower. The planting and reaping were all done by hand and the grain flailed and hand cleaned.

Plows were made of wood with iron points to plow among the stumps. The original drags or harrows were fashioned of wood. Old records state that a bunch of brush held together with a chair drawn by oxen with only a wooden yoke as harness was often used.

Through the years oxen were followed with horses with the manufacture of tractors and other implements. In the early days, the only income was potash for export then came the new era of cheese factories. Some farmers took their potash with jumper and oxen, 30 miles over bush trails to Belleville the nearest water transportation as much was sent to the United States.

FIRST RAILROAD

The first railroad came to Belleville from Montreal in 1856 at which time Belleville was known as Myers Creek. Many farmers spent the winter in lumber camps where they received ten or 12 dollars per month and their food.

Some settlers came to Seldons Mills (now Stirling) in 1789. The Indians grew corn for cornmeal hence the name "squaw corn." They also gathered berries and dried them. Farmers made maple syrup and sugar and kept a few pigs for their own use. The pigs would roam the woods for acorns which helped to fatten them. Farmers had to protect their sheep from wolves and bears as these animals are known to tear open pig pens and eat the little pigs. Cows wore cowbells so they roamed far afield and thus the farmer could find them. The small clearings were fenced to protect their crops. When grain was ready for market it was taken by horses to Belleville, the nearest water transportation. Sometimes it took three horses and 24 hours to make the round trip.

Farmers in those days fashioned their own water troughs, well sweeps, oxen yokes, furniture and many other items for their own everyday use. As they cleared more land they kept more cattle and hogs which made a small market for beef and pork with lumber companies.

When early settlers bought land from the government at 50 cents an acre they had to build a house and a barn each 16 feet by 20 feet; clear several acres of land and sow a crop. They were asked to cut and clear half the width of a road in front of their farms before they got their title deed. To build and maintain roads the farmers did statute labor according to their assessment. Today the township road work is paid through taxes.

EARLY CHEESEMAKING

Agriculture got a good start

"It's for you!"

in Hastings County when cheesemaking began with cheese selling at ten cents per pound at the factory. Once in depression days the Shamrock Cheese Factory at River Valley paid eight cents per pound all summer and cream was 14 cents.

In 1900 an amount of 50 acres of land in the valley had a tax bill of $9.20 and in 1961 the tax bill for the same farm was $153. For years after the railroad came to Stirling the farmers had to draw their cheese to Belleville with team and wagon.

This story gave a graphic picture of farming in the days of pioneers and agriculture today is a much different way of life.

Pioneer poems were read by Mrs. Roy Tucker, Mrs. Charles Wilson, Mrs. Roy Irven and the convener.

REPORTS ON CONVENTION

Mrs. George Reasman gave the highlights of the first day of the 38th annual convention. She outlined the value of the Aberdeen scholarship to the people of India. At the national convention held at Wolfville, Nova Scotia, the gift stall to which branches all over Canada were asked to contribute articles for sale enriched the coffers by more than $1,800.

Mrs. L. F. Semmler, president of Delta Institute, Inuvik, North West Territories, was an observer at this gathering and many agencies were responsible for her transportation to and fro.

It was suggested by Mrs. Leonard Trivers that each Institute member forego desserts for a few meals and send the value of it in to F.W.I.O. for the scholarship fund. Institute members must always keep in mind that the group was never meant to be a social club but an educational organization.

Mrs. Glenn Bush gave a concise report of the second day's proceedings which included the highlights of the address given by Miss Helen McKercher director of home economics. She said it is planned to publish a new book of Institute history in 1972. The study kit of Ireland is available. The speakers stressed the value of keeping material on file for future use.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen, federation representative of Hastings West district announced that she had an outline of the "Salada Tea" project if any Institute wished to participate in the plans.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Opera House Needed in Every City

MONTREAL (CP)—It's "amazing that a city like Montreal, which considers itself cultural, hasn't got an opera house, says soprano Micheline Tessier.

The Paris-born singer who has lived most of her life in Canada and who began singing professionally six years ago in Germany said "just about every little town in Germany has one."

"Why do they have to spend all that money on chemicals, ships and armaments and so little on the arts?"

Miss Tessier, wife of Le Devoir music critic Gilles Potvin travelled to Israel in late summer with her husband for that country's music festival.

Remembrance Day, Canon McConnell pointed out.

But "let us do it as a nation not just as individuals," he urged. "is it not time when we as grown-up people decide exactly what must happen on Remembrance Day?"

The veteran chaplain reminded the assembly that Canadians who fell in war died for their country.

"May we commit ourselves in the memory of those men and women to a fuller obligation year by year to . . . a united country. May we pray every day for Confederation that it may survive."

But Remembrance Day also reserved belief in the spirit of international peace.

"For that ideal young men fought and died by the millions," said Canon McConnell. "There is no room in our hearts for bitterness for those whom we once called our enemies."

Immediately following the ceremonies the solemn tribute of laying the wreaths took place before the drumhead altar.

Invocation at the services was given by Rev. P. J. McAvoy and the benediction by Salvation Army envoy, Bram Humphreys.

A Silver Cross mother, Mrs. Pearl Wyatt, Belleville, laid the wreath for the Ontario government. Her son, Donald, died in Holland in February, 1945.

HOPE SEEN

Apart from the progress made on the five minor bills, there was new hope of a solution to the impasse over redistribution.

Transport Minister Pickersgill, who is piloting the redistribution legislation through the Commons, suggested that the House Speaker be made responsible for two of the three appointments to each of the redistribution commissions in the 10 provinces.

This would be a compromise to having the appointments made one each by the government leader and the Opposition leader as the original bill provides, or to having all three appointments made by the chief justices of the provinces as an NDP amendment would provide.

Fourth member of each of the 16 commissions would be the federal representation commissioner-now Nelson Castonguay, Chairman of each commission would be named by the provincial chief justice according to the original bill.

SEEKS COMPROMISE

Mr. Pickersgill's compromise is intended to overcome objections by the major parties to the orginal bill and objections by th. Progressive. Conservatives to the NDP amendment.

Mr. Pickersgill had a second possible solution to the problem. It would have left the original bill intact except for the addition of witnesses to be appointed by the minor parties to sit in on meetings of the commissions reshaping the constituency boundaries in accordance with the latest census.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked that consideration of the two proposals be put off until Thursday to allow time for detailed study.

Labor Wins Second Test In House

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—The new Labor government, which presents its first budget today, cleared the decks by winning its second test in the House of Commons Tuesday night.

Picking up Liberal support, Prime Minister Wilson's forces defeated by a comfortable 21 votes a Conservative motion of no-confidence.

It was the second parliamentary victory for the socialists in as many nights. Monday they defeated a Conservative attack on their plans to renationalize the steel industry. That time, without Liberal backing, the Labor margin was only six votes.

Observers felt the Liberal decision to support the party, which elected nine members in the recent election, assured the government of support in the Labor program and will not go out of its way to embarrass the government which has a margin of only five over the combined opposition in the 630-member House.

Chancellor of the Exchequer James Callaghan went to Buckingham Palace Tuesday night to advise the Queen regarding his budget which has two main aims—to implement a recently instituted levy on imports and to raise money for an increase in welfare state benefits.

In another development outside the House, it was announced Wilson, accompanied by Foreign Secretary Patrick Gordon Walker and Defence Secretary Denis Healey, will visit Washington Dec. 7-8.

Wilson also will confer with Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations in New York and then go to Ottawa for talks with Prime Minister Pearson before returning to London Dec. 10.

CONCEPT ATTACKED

The Tories' no-confidence motion Tuesday attacked Labor's whole approach to government, saying the socialists could not implement their proposals without damaging the nation's economic programs now "in train". This imperilling the future well-being of Britons. The motion was defeated 315 to 294.

The debate, which wound up a week's general discussion on the speech from the throne, was largely partisan in the most hectic Commons tradition.

An uproar began when Edward Heath, former industry minister, referred to one of the government's scientific advisers, Sir Solly Zuckerman, and said: "I think it is appropriate that an expert on tadpoles should be adviser to the present administration."

George Brown, economics minister and No. 2 in the government, jumped up to protest that it was out of order for Heath to attack distinguished civil servants. Heath had called Zuckerman a "professor of tadpoles," said Brown.

Amid tumult from both sides of the House, Heath said he withdrew any offensive reference to Zuckerman but withdrew nothing as far as the socialists were concerned.

A new shouting match began when Heath alleged postmaster-General Anthony Wedgwood Benn had deliberately tried to "mislead the House and the press" over the financial state of his department when it was handed over by the Tories.

Benn said the figures he had given had been known to the previous government but "were deliberately suppressed for electoral reasons."

PIGEONLESS PARIS

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, Nov. 10, 1964

Veterans Minister Teillet announced increases of veterans benefits amounting to $33,780,000.

Prime Minister Pearson announced the government will give the cabinet the final say on parole when death sentences are commuted to life imprisonment.

The Commons studied proposals for redrawing the electoral map on the basis of 1961 census figures.

Transport Minister Pickersgill suggested the Commons Speaker be made responsible for naming two of the three persons in each province to redraw the map.

The Commons agreed to postpone further study of the bill to allow study of the suggestion.

The Commons gave second reading, approval in principle, to a bill that would move Ottawa's downtown railway station to the suburbs.

Hospital Strike Is Possible At Peterborough

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — A union spokesman said that stationary engineers at Peterborough Civic Hospital voted Tuesday night to go on strike. No date was set.

Gregory Deck of Local 796 of the International Union of Operating Engineers (int) said the union voted to strike because the hospital wants to replace two engineers with less qualified men at $1 less an hour. He said the union will allow only one engineer to be replaced.

Kingston TB 'San' to Become Home for Aged

KINGSTON (CP) — The 175-bed Ongwanada Tuberculosis Sanatorium here will be temporarily converted into a home for the aged and later closed, it was announced Tuesday.

The centre, now treating 40 patients, will become a home for about 125 elderly persons to be transferred from the Ontario Hospital in a new provincial government program, officials said. It will be closed after Kingston's municipally - owned Rideaucrest Home for the Aged is expanded to accommodate the senior citizens.

Dr. Bruce Hopkins, the director of Ongwanada who purchased the buildings as war surplus in 1947 with donated funds, described the proposed closing a tragedy and called a meeting of the East Central Counties Tuberculosis Association for Friday to discuss the proposal.

Dr. John Neilson, chairman of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, said in Toronto that the association is opposed to accrediting the sanatorium as an active patient area.

Newfoundland Districts Only a Few Miles Apart May Have Different Dialects

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A first-time visitor to this ancient city from mainland Canada could be understandably nonplussed after a day's traipse through the streets amid the flavorful speech of Newfoundlanders.

The rich brogue emanating from a group of longshoremen standing against a Water Street tavern would make it seem that they had just arrived from the south of Ireland.

The crew of a trading schooner from Bonavista Bay passes by with rolling seamen's gait, conversing in staccato bursts spiced with a twang that was heard in Devonshire at the time of the first Queen Elizabeth.

The province is an etymologist's paradise. People living until recently in isolation in hundreds of communities around the island's 6,000-mile coastline have used the speech of their forefathers and added phrases of their own to describe local conditions. Consequently settlements only a few miles apart may have entirely different dialects.

SELDOM WRITTEN

Newfoundlanders themselves frequently are nonplussed—nonplussed—when they see their expressions put in writing. Words that daily slip off the tongue unnoticed sometimes appear artificial and labored when written. This is partly because the same word may have varying inflections in different areas.

The greatest difference is between north and south. Along the south and southwest coasts the dialect is largely Irish. To the north is heard the speech that was common in the west of England 300 years ago.

Etymologists place Newfoundland speech-roots in the Early Modern English era, that is, English as it was spoken between 1500 and 1700.

However some of it, particularly in place names, comes from French, Spanish and Portuguese. Bay d'Espoir, La Hune and Baccalieu are examples.

FRENCH ORIGIN

The floor is still referred to as the planchin, especially in the far northern settlements where the people, incidentally, are known as livyers. The word apparently is an Anglicized version of the French word plancher (a wooden floor).

An outsider has to be very alert—to catch local expressions on the fly. If asked to repeat what he has just said a Newfoundlander most likely will reply in his idea of conventional English.

Some of the words when used in their proper context are surprisingly descriptive. For instance, sunt means smooth and graceful. When a person is trying to make pieces of wood fit properly when building a boat or a piece of furniture he might say he is trying to make it "nice and sunt."

"Feckless" terms are common, the most popular probably being sileveen, likely derived from sleeve-in. It means a person who deceitfully worms his way into another's confidence and then betrays it. It's a favorite way of describing politicians.

DEE FOR THEE

The pronoun thee is still used to end a sentence in many places and is one of the more readily noticeable oddities of Newfoundland speech.

One of its greatest strongholds is in Bay Roberts, about 45 miles from St. John's. There it is not unusual to hear older folk when discussing Premier Smallwood say: "What did Joey do for it? I'll tell thee what he did for I."

The word thee also is frequently used around Bay Roberts, but it comes out as "dee."

Words often are used in the light of their original meanings, an example being "wonderful. When a Newfoundlander says he has a "wonderful pain," or "it's wonderful cold," he means that the cold or pain is far enough beyond normal to be full of wonder, or remarkable.

However, the old language appears in danger of disappearing within the next couple of generations. University trained islanders have little patience with the ancient dialects and are rapidly imposing a "proper English" on tots as they enter schools.

Johnson Seeks Ways to Reduce Defence Costs

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson is reviewing U.S. military commitments, looking for possible savings to help finance other administration programs.

To help in the hunt, Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara and State Secretary Dean Rusk met Johnson yesterday at his ranch home for a top-level conference.

The president wants them to pinpoint ways to economize—particularly the defence budget — so funds can be freed for other legislative proposals Johnson will send to Congress in January.

These proposals — including broad efforts to aid education and promote prosperity — are still in the drafting stage.

McNamara flew to the LBJ ranch Monday for an intensive review of the defence budget.

Johnson wants to keep his next national budget under $100,000,000,000.

Napanee Man Urges Credits To Feed Cattle

OTTAWA (CP)—A Napanee, Ont., feed mill owner suggested to a Commons committee yesterday that the government make credit available to livestock farmers who face difficulty in buying feed to "finish" their animals.

Harold Lasher, owner of Lasher Feed and Seed Company, said some farmers in eastern Ontario are facing bankruptcy because of drought. They were forced to sell unfinished cattle because they didn't have enough credit backing to keep feeding them.

It would be better to supply the farmer with short-term feed credit, for six to 12 months, and let him sell his cattle at top prices than to give loans for machinery.

Mr. Lasher was questioned for two hours by members of the agriculture committee on pricing practices in the feed grain business.

Head of Rebel Forces Killed Says Report

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—White mercenaries and Congolese army troops have recaptured the town of Opala, about 100 miles southwest of Stanleyville, army headquarters here said Tuesday.

Opala, which the headquarters said fell Monday after a fight, is the closest any government unit has come to the rebel capital of Stanleyville.

Opala is on the road from Ikela, from which a large group of rebels fled last week with about 45 white missionaries and plantation staff.

However, the town is on the left bank of the Congo River, while most of Stanleyville is on the right bank, and the river is more than a mile wide in the city area.

Earlier Tuesday there was a report that the head of the rebel armed forces had been shot and killed.

Maj. Mike Hoare, South African leader of the Congo mercenary forces, claimed his men shot and killed self-styled Gen. Nicholas Olenga during the recapture of Kindu a week ago.

White Mercenary Soldiers In Taking Rebel Town Find No Trace of Missionaries

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—White mercenary soldiers who Monday recaptured the town of Opala, less than 80 miles southwest of the Congolese Rebel capital of Stanleyville, failed to uncover any trace of a Canadian nun at the town's Roman Catholic mission.

Canadian embassy officials in Leopoldville identified the missing nun as Sister Montford de la Croix. She and other whites are believed to have been taken by retreating rebel warriors to Stanleyville.

Opana, a key road junction within striking distance of the heartland of the Communist-backed "Congolese People's Republic" was surrendered by the rebels without a fight. The mercenaries found the town completely deserted.

The mercenaries had also been seeking news of a group of German and Canadian missionaries who include Hattie Bormann Jr., son of Hitler's deputy during the last years of the Nazi regime.

The Germans came from missions near Ikela, west of Opala. It now is presumed they have been taken to Stanleyville to swell the number of white hostages taken by the rebels.

Reports reaching Leopoldville say Robert Thompson, leader of Canada's Social Credit party, is attempting to get in touch with rebel leaders in a bid to free the Canadians. Observers here rate his chances as slim.

Canadian embassy officials said they knew of 33 Canadians trapped in territory. About 20 others managed to escape into neighboring Uganda and Zambia.

According to the embassy, the Canadians inside the rebel zone appear to be treated the same as nearly 1,000 other foreigners held by the rebel authorities. No Canadians have been killed or seriously injured by the rebels, according to fragmentary messages from Stanleyville.

These messages are usually confined to simple statement such as: "All foreigners are in good health." In a few instances rebel censors have allowed details of individuals to be included in the messages.

At one point, confused reports gave the impression that Canadian missionary Hector MacMillan and seven of his children had escaped from a mission north of Stanleyville.

But these reports could not be confirmed. On Sept. 29, British's boundary council in Stanleyville sent word that MacMillan, his American wife and five children were safe in the rebel capital.

Macmillan, a Protestant missionary based in Stanleyville, listed his home as Avonmore, Ont., in embassy files.

There the rebels' missionaries live on the outskirts of the rebel capital, including Miss Viola Walker, from Vinemount, Ont.

At Boyulu, an American protestant mission 150 miles northeast of Stanleyville, live Chester Burk and his wife and Mrs. Southard and her child. Mrs. Southard, wife of an American, also from Canada, William Burk and his wife are from Calgary.

Embassy records also show that one of Canada's MacMillan children is at Boyulu.

At another Protestant mission of Ibambi-Wamba is Miss Hilda V. Katona, of Rainy River, Ont.

Only Reasonable Approach To Low Water Problems Is Through Board Says Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Deputy Transport Minister John Baldwin told a Commons committee investigating Great Lakes water levels Tuesday that he feels the only reasonable approach to low water problems is through the International Joint Commission.

He testified to the committee on mines, forests and waters that the transport department with responsibility for navigation and certain harbors, has been loath to suggest individual solutions because of the diverse interests concerned with Great Lakes waters.

Mr. Baldwin was closely questioned by committee members on the degree of co-ordination among the several federal agencies and such provincial interests as Ontario and Quebec hydro on the problems of low levels.

He said that in areas where his department had a direct responsibility remedial measures could be taken. But he felt that more information was needed on the causes of low levels and the effects of various evels of solutions.

Eugene Whelan (L — Essex South) complained that the many federal agencies concerned with water problems gave reason for undue delay in really examining the problem and acting to combat it.

STATES BELIEF

After a lengthy period in which Mr. Lewis (Thunder Bay-Nipigon) said he can only conclude that Mr. Baldwin figures the Commons committee's study is useless.

Mr. Baldwin maintained too little information is available and the problem is of no great use for action by individual agencies or departments

He said he agrees that in the interests of integration federal, state and American governments would be preferable. But this was the sort of thing the IJC study might show on the basis of research into all aspects of water use in the Great Lakes basin.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Baldwin told the committee that no loss of revenue from shipping tolls has yet resulted from low water conditions in the St. Lawrence water system.

But he said there is a distinct possibility of even less water being available next year. He estimated that there is a reduction in permissable draught of vessels would mean a 5600.000 yearly loss in canal toll revenues alone.

Broadway Bids Goodbye To Nondescript Columnist

NEW YORK (CP) — Broadway's motley chinery has given a last good-bye to one of its legendary characters, a salty, nondescript columnist better known as Col. John R. Stingo or "The Honest Rain maker" than his given name of James Aloysius Macdonald.

The Honest Rainmaker was the title of a biography written about the Times Square character by the late A. J. Liebling. The "colonel" was just one part of the legend, since Macdonald admitted he was not even a colonel in the Kentucky militia.

Macdonald had lived at the Dixie Hotel, just off Times Square, for the last 25 years and frequented a number of nearby saloons. As recently as last month, he put away five shots of whisky in what one observer termed a "remarkably short time." He was either 90 or 95—nobody seemed to know exactly.

But with age the colonel faded more and more from sight. Finally body was found more than a week ago—apparently he had died of a heart attack in his bed. death did not become public knowledge for some days.

For many years Macdonald wrote a column, Yea, Verily Verily, for the New York Enquirer, which now is the National Enquirer. In addition to writing a column he also sold advertising for the paper to race track touts.

He started calling himself Col. Stingo half a century ago while writing for The Wasp in San Francisco.

A raconteur of the first order, he once told of his career as a member of rainmaking teams in the south west. Liebling quoted him as saying in that regard:

"When I concluded a rainmaking campaign we were invariably the guests of the benefited community at a banquet where sec and brut flowed like the showers in a clubhouse of a baseball team after a 16-inning game on a day of record heat. We would get stiff as a boards and they would invite us back next season."

Among the words he put into the race track language was "tesser" (money).

If he was short of tease, he would describe himself as "non-holding," and in that condition he would stay away from his favorite saloons and spend much of his time in the public library.

But he continued to most artistically, in the spats and bow tie tradition of a half-century ago. And he continued to correct.

Liebling, who greatly admired the colonel's writing style, cited as a good example of it this extract from one of his columns.

"May be a lot of proverbial fine writing in Quaker city but it's surprising how quickly they come to life when that padlock purple gold arm doth blow."

Gunman Gets $1,500 in Toronto Holdup

TORONTO (CP)—A gunman ended a record of 66 holdup free years at the National Trust Company Tuesday when he took $1,500 from a west-end branch.

The tall, well-dressed man entered the branch at about 2 p.m. and approached teller Christine Chisholm, but as she was balancing her day's cash. He said: "This is a holdup. Hand over your big bills."

Manager James Holmes, 35, described the holdup as "very professional" and said that there were no customers in the branch at the time.

William Thom, assistant vice-president and treasurer of National Trust, said it was the first robbery since the company started in 1898.

Queen Gives George Medal To Policewoman

LONDON (AP) — The Queen Tuesday gave the George Medal for bravery to Margaret Clegg, 23-year-old London policewoman who snatched a baby from the arms of a distraught father during a bomb scare from a roof in London last March.

"I saw it all on television and it looked very exciting," the Queen told Miss Clelad at a Buckingham Palace presentation ceremony.

There will be no more darting chases over the rooftops for the plucky policewoman. She has fallen arches, and now she works in an office at Scotland Yard.

Grain Ship Pulled Free After Grounding

OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (AP)—A Canadian grain ship, the R. Bruce Angus, was pulled free today by three tugboats after running aground in St. Lawrence River water described as at its lowest level in 30 years

The 610-foot vessel, carrying grain to Trois-Rivieres, Que., became bogged down early Tuesday in shallow water near Ogden Island. The ship requires a draft of 21 feet. Officials said the river level is the lowest in 31 years because of the prolonged drought.

The ship, owned by Upper Lakes Shipping Limited of Toronto, was towed to Iroquois, Ont., to be checked for damage.

Witnesses Say Plane Having Engine Trouble

By RUSSELL PEDEN

MONTREAL (CP) — Testimony at a Board of Inquiry indicates that an Air Canada DC-8F was having engine trouble before it crashed last Nov. 29, but witnesses could not agree on whether the huge jet exploded in the air.

A dozen witnesses who live near the scene of the crash appeared Tuesday before Mr. Justice George S. Challies of Quebec Superior Court, and two of them said the four-engine airliner did explode before it hit the ground.

The sleek airship carried 118 persons to their deaths when it crashed and burned in a swamp near Ste. Therese, 20 miles north of Montreal.

Mrs. Simon Giguere, 66, of Ste. Therese, said the DC-8F skimmed over her house at a very low altitude—"just above the telephone wires"—and exploded in the air a few seconds away.

She said the plane did not crash immediately, but hurtled on and hit the ground some 1,500 feet from her door.

SAW LIGHT FLASHING

Vlcd Brisebois, 33, another Ste. Therese resident, testified he saw the red belly light of the aircraft flashing as it passed overhead, nosing gradually toward the ground.

The plane exploded in the air, he said, and then plunged into the swampy field.

A number of other residents of Ste. Therese and nearby Ste. Rose testified, however, that they saw and heard only one explosion — when the plane struck the ground.

Dr. George J. Thiessen, 51, an Ottawa physicist, suggested later that witnesses who heard two explosions might have been deceived by an echo.

Dr. Thiessen, a specialist in acoustics with the National Research Council, said factors such as local temperatures and wind gradient can produce "serious peculiarities" in sound sufficient to make echoes sound louder than the original noise.

The inquiry, which has heard 29 witnesses in its first two sitting days, was adjourned today. Armistice Day.

It resumes Thursday.

Will Appeal Conviction Of Clergyman Says Lawyer

CHATHAM (CP)—The conviction of Rev. Russell D. Horsburg on five charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency will be appealed, the United Church minister's defence lawyer said Tuesday.

Mr. Horsburg, minister of Park Street United Church here, was remanded in custody until Monday for sentence after juvenile court Judge W. H. Fox found him guilty of the five charges and acquitted him on three others.

A crowd of curious silent spectators lined the sidewalks in front of the magistrate's court here as Mr. Horsburgh was led under police escort to a patrol car which took him to Kent County jail.

In announcing his decision to appeal, defence counsel D. E. Perkins said a suggestion that the minister be given psychiatric help was premature.

The suggestion was made by Crown Attorney Blake Ward, who asked that the 39-year-old minister be given the maximum sentence of two years in prison and a $500 fine on each count.

In the charges on which Mr. Horsburgh was found guilty, it was alleged he instructed several teen-age boys and girls to have sexual intercourse, explained to boys how to do it without hurting the girls, asked the teen - agers afterward whether they enjoyed it and described to young persons acts which he had watched himself.

Primarily because of inadequate or inconclusive evidence, the minister was found not guilty on charges alleging that he induced certain teen-agers to stay in the church overnight and that he watched a teen-age couple having sexual intercourse in a church apartment.

The acts described in the charges were alleged to have been committed between July, 1963, and June of this year. Witnesses during the trial said the acts took place in the vacant janitor's apartment in the church building or in a music locker, often when the minister was in the building.

Judge Fox heard about 3500, 000 words on evidence from 60 witnesses during a 14-day trial that ended Oct. 9. His decision was contained in a 57-page report that took him two hours to read. The trial was closed to the public but reporters were allowed to attend with the provision that no reference be made in news stories that would identify juvenile witnesses.

Mr. Ward argued that the minister should be given a suspended sentence in addition to a jail term so he would be under supervision on his release. He said evidence during the trial was "shocking". The minister is married with two stepsons.

"It would strike one that some type of psychiatric help is necessary," he said. "I only question whether psychiatric help with some one of the accused's age will be much use.

"But it certainly would help him get back a normal approach to life."

Mr. Ward described Mr. Horsburgh as a person with a rare quirk which caused him to encourage persons to have sexual relations so he could watch and ask about it afterwards.

Mr. Horsburgh, who has held United Church pastorates in Creighton Mines, Sudbury, Waterloo and Hamilton, blanched but otherwise showed no emotion at the verdict. He had been free on bail since his court hearing.

Mr. Perkins asked for a suspended sentence, saying that the minister's "acts of indiscretion have already imposed a monumental penalty on his career."

Mr. Perkins said Mr. Horsburgh made speeches in many young people that were mistakenly taken as leave to indulge in sexual acts. He referred to testimony from other clergy and laymen who were character witnesses at the trial and said the amount of good Mr. Horsburgh has done should be taken into consideration in determining the penalty.

Judge Fox reviewed much of the evidence of children during the trial and spok. of the issue of credibility as the most important one in the case.

He said that the accused was not charged with sexual crimes but with contributing to juvenile delinquency. "Therefore, I do not believe that corroboration is required," he said.

He decided many of the children who testified for the crown were "truthful."

The judge also found that in some cases Mr. Horsburgh's evidence had been "evasive" and "less than frank."

Mr. Horsburgh was found guilty of nine of 24 separate acts listed in the eight charges.

The acts on which he was found guilty were: inducing a juvenile girl to have sexual relations with a boy; explaining in detail how to perform the sex act; indicating by means of hand signals that a boy was to take a girl upstairs in the church for intercourse; showing a juvenile boy there was nothing wrong with the boy having intercourse.

Sending a juvenile girl and boy to the church apartment to have intercourse; sending the girl afterward if she had enjoyed herself; asking the boy how he made out; sending a 16-year-old girl to the church apartment to have intercourse with a boy from out of town; permitting the same girl to be intimate on several occasions with another boy in the church parlor and apartment.

United Church officials for the most part declined comment on what Mr. Horsburgh's standing in the church will be.

Plan Housing Meet

OTTAWA (CP) — Invitations are being sent to Ontario mayors, reeves, MPs and members of the provincial legislature from the area south of Muskoka for the Dec. 16-17 symposium in Toronto on new federal and provincial housing legislation, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation said Tuesday.

The meeting, organized by the federal and Ontario governments, will study housing, municipal planning and renewal.

A second symposium for representatives from the Northern Ontario region is planned for January, the announcement said.

Say Labor Law Creates Crisis Atmosphere

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian labor law with its timetables and deadlines for collective bargaining has created a "crisis atmosphere" that is hampering labor - management efforts to deal with serious, long - run problems posed by economic change and automation.

This was one of the main conclusions reported Tuesday night after two days of closed-door talks among top officials from both sides, as well as specialists and the labor minister of all 11 governments.

John J. Deutsch, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, which convened the conference, stressed later that the meeting was not called to pass resolutions. It was based on detailed research studies on methods and experiments in labor - management co-operation.

"There was a realization that new problems have to be dealt with," Mr. Deutsch said. There was "a wide willingness" by both management and labor officials to sit down and discuss the problems facing both sides.

"There is scope for progress," he said.

Some of the comments made in the conference will be published later by the council.

Showdown Could Cripple Kennedy Round of Talks

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Differences within the European partnerships appear to be hardening and signs point to the possibility of an approaching showdown that could cripple the Kennedy Round of world tariff bargaining.

Despite all-reports of an impending compromise over nuclear control, France is still insisting that West Germany agree to a substantial price de grain before closer collaboration can take place within the six-country Common Market.

It remains doubtful whether the Erhard government will agree to any such thing before the German general election next year.

Spokesmen for Germany's 3,000,000 farmers say they won't be pushed into taking lower prices for their grain and Erhard seems to think he needs the farmers' votes to stay in office as chancellor.

Before the Kennedy Round of bargaining can move ahead, countries participating are to submit an acceptable list of items on which tariff bargaining will not take place.

At first the United States had insisted that the bargaining embrace not only industrial products but agricultural items as well. Now the U.S. has realized that too much insistence may destroy the prospects of success.

When the U.S. submits its list of non-negotiable items next Monday, it will agree to restrict the discussion to industrial products.

But France, has indicated unless Germany makes a firm commitment on grain prices, it may not submit its non-negotiable tariff list at all.

Behind all the complex maneuvering at the President de Gaulle's attitude that Europe is still paying too much attention to the U.S. in economics and defence matters.

He wants to sink the multinational force proposal first proposed by the U.S. and backed by West Germany.

There have been reports that a compromise is in the wind. West Germany would withdraw its pressure for the multilateral nuclear force if France would withdraw its opposition of German price levels to the level of the rest of the European Economic Community.

Some diplomats now suggest those reports mainly expressed the wishful thinking of the de Gaulle regime. Bonn wants to push ahead with the nuclear force, they say, it might agree to some modification of the original plan but not complete abandonment.

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

Workman's compensation payments received by a taxpayer are not income for any purpose and need not be shown on a taxpayer's return. There are often cases where an employer has paid tax on such non-taxable income.

This will often occur when an injured employee has had his salary continued by the employer while he was off work due to an injury on the job. When this happens the compensation cheques received from the Compensation Board are turned over to the employer. The employer is quite correct in showing on the T4 slip the amount he paid the employee in the year. There is no place on the T4 slip to indicate how much of the wages paid the injured employee was reimbursed by the compensation cheque.

The employee is quite correct in making a deduction on his return of the total amount of the compensation cheques turned over to the employer. This should be done in the space indicated as Other Deductions. He should also attach a note giving all the details to verify the deduction made on the return.

I have known a few cases where the employer paid the employee full wages while injured and allowed the employee to keep for his own use the cheques received from the Compensation Board. In this case the taxpayer has no deduction from his wages but he does not have to include the compensation cheques as income. If you have a problem not covered here, write me in care of this newspaper following the instructions given below and I will tell you what to do.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self-addressed five-cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

QUESTION: I lost an arm in an industrial accident. I receive a monthly pension. Is this taxable?

ANSWER: No.

QUESTION: My father was killed in an accident at his place of work. My mother receives over $500 a year as compensation. How does this affect my claiming her as a dependent?

ANSWER: You may still claim her as payments from a Workman's Compensation Board are not income for any income tax purpose.

WHITE'S DISTRICT—Temperance meeting was held at White's United Church on Sunday morning with Mr. T. Franklin of Albert College assisting Mr. Roy McGrath. Mr. Franklin attended a temperance convention in Hamilton. "In helping an alcoholic and his family the most important step is to educate the young people against the use of alcohol. Wine was used in Bible days because milk and water were not as pure as today, but wine was not so intoxicating as today.

"Athletes, especially members of hockey teams are not to smoke or drink alcoholic beverages. Teenagers do not need to drink to be popular. If asked to drink be can say 'No thank you' in a pleasant way and change the subject of conversation. A good hostess will provide a non alcoholic drink. It is much better to train the young than to treat the alcoholics."

English, U.S. Bishops Oppose Condemning of All A-Arms

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — English and American bishops have asked the Vatican ecumenical council not to issue a universal condemnation of all nuclear weapons.

Bishop Philip Hannan, auxiliary bishop of Washington, D.C., said a draft text before the council condemning nuclear weapons ignored the existence of small-scale tactical nuclear arms which had precise effects. He urged revision of the entire text.

Archbishop George Andrew Beck of Liverpool, England, suggested that in a just war of defence there could be legitimate targets for nuclear weapons.

Archbishop Beck, who declared he was speaking for a number of bishops from England and Wales, said great clarity and exactness were needed in the draft-text's reference to the use of nuclear weapons.

He said "the council must, of course, maintain the traditional doctrine that indiscriminate destruction," in which the direct killing of the innocent is sought and achieved must be condemned as murder as something intrinsically evil."

He added: "There may well exist objects which, in a just war of defence, are legitimate targets of nuclear weapons even of vast force."

Ontario SPORTS

Pinch Hitting

By Carry Alexander

"We're still looking for help but at this early point I would have to say we are a better balanced club than last year."

Such were the words of Gordie Fotta, team president and coach of the Belleville Junior "B" hockey club.

The "B's" will get their first true test tonight when the Eastern Ontario Junior schedule opens in Trenton. Belleville meets Howard Weese's rebuilt Apple Kings in an 8.30 fixture there.

Belleville fared well in a couple of exhibition games against the young Picton Merchant squad last week. The "B's" thumped Sammy Mulholland's charges 10-5 in Picton on Thursday.

In a return game here Friday, the locals were less impressive. They blew an early 3-0 lead and settled for a 4-4 stalemate. Neither club flashed championship form in that encounter—but it's a long time before the playoffs.

Bell ran through his opening lineup yesterday, listing 17 players he hopes to have ready for action. Fifteen of these players are signed and the club hopes to see the others on the dotted line shortly, perhaps before tonight's game.

The two unsigned are forwards Pete Fleming, from the BMHA, and defenseman Gordie Potts, of Stirling.

Bobby Moon is the club's number one goalie, backed up by minor graduate Bill Bell. If Moon can regain his City League touch of two years ago, there won't be a better netminder in the league. Needless to say, the club is hoping that the mashed goalie can do just that.

Bill Bell, no relation to the coach, is up from juvenile. He showed enough in workouts to earn the standby spot and will likely get a shot at league action shortly.

Five defencemen, including Potts, are expected to guard the blueline. Those signed are returnees Bob Ashley, Bob Boyle and Roy Maracle, and another minor graduate, Harold Townsend. The latter showed plenty of promise in last Friday's exhibition.

Boyle can also play up front and probably has the ability to be one of the team's outstanding players. The same goes for Ashley, but both have to want to give their best. Maracle is a hard-working scrapper who will make mistakes but not through lack of trying.

Coach Bell spoke highly of Potts. He played the first exhibition game in Picton. "Potts hits and hits and hits and I'm sure take that puck," said Bell. "We would like to have him, there's no doubt about that, so it is up to him if he wants to come in from Stirling to play."

Up front, Bell lists high-scoring Jim Rutherford and workhorse Grant Hagerman on the top line, along with Pete Fleming, if the latter plays. Both Hagerman and Rutherford are known quantities and will likely run neck-and-neck in club scoring.

Fleming is a midget-age player who must be given permission from the BMHA in order to play. He also needs his father's consent.

Bell likes the youngster's style and thinks he would be a definite asset to the team. His tender years are apparently keeping Fleming's immediate hockey future in doubt.

Discussing the matter yesterday morning, Tom Neill, president of the Belleville Minor Sports Association and a convener in the BMHA, spoke strongly against Fleming moving up to the "B's".

"I don't think they (the BMHA) will let him go up and personally I don't think he is good enough," Neill said. "If players of Fleming's ability are all that Bell has to depend on, then I pity the Juniors. You can't send a boy to do a man's job," he added.

Nevertheless, Fleming did not look out of place last Friday and the junior executive, including Bell, figure he is ready for the step up.

Two other lines set for tonight have Jim Woodcock playing with Larry Stewart and Jim "Bud" Pringle on one and Bill Lang, Carl Boomhower and Steve White on the other. All have had some junior experience and are expected to be improved over last year. Paul Bennett is an extra forward.

Bell said there would be no nonsense on the ice or off this year. "The boys will be out there to play hockey, not to swing sticks and the like. We will stand for no foolishness and I am most sincere when I say that," Belle offered.

He said that some players from nearby centres may be added to the club if they do not have hockey in their own towns.

After tonight's game, the "B's" next see action against Walt Gerow's Napanee Legion boys here Friday night.

Swedish Puck Rookie Sterner High In Scoring

DETROIT (CP) — Paul Andres, shifty right winger of the leading St. Paul Saints, tops the Central Professional Hockey League scoring parade with 17 points after 10 games. He has scored seven goals and picked up 10 assists.

Teammate Ulf Sterner, the Swedish-born pro rookie who has starred in world and Olympic competition for Sweden and Billy Kaldbo of the Minneapolis

Bruins share the runner-up spot with 15 points. Both have scored eight goals and seven assists.

Veterans Mel Pearson and Barrie Ness, enjoying a strong start for the Saints, are next in line, both showing four goals and nine assists for 13 points.

Nibbs Sterner and the Saints' Marc Dufour share the goal scoring lead with eight goals apiece and Andrea's 10 assists are tops in that department.

Wings' Unbeaten Skein Reaches Nine

Chuvalo Listed Sixth

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo of Toronto has been listed No. 6 contender for the world crown in the November 30 rankings of Ring magazine.

The ratings, released today also list Cassius Clay as "still the world champion" and name Sonny Liston the No. 1 heavyweight contender.

The World Boxing Association withdrew recognition of Clay as heavyweight champion for signing a return bout with Liston at Boston, Nov. 16. Its last monthly ratings failed to list either in the top 10.

The championship was listed as vacant and Ernie Terrell of Philadelphia, who defended first in the Ring ratings, Terrell was rated third behind Liston and Floyd Patterson.

Chuvalo, who stopped Doug Jones of New York in the 11th round last month, was promoted from ninth place Jones, who was the leading contender not too long ago, was dropped from fifth to ninth.

Americans, Aces Add To Leads

By The Canadian Press

Springfield Indians are probably sorry they started the whole thing.

They walloped Pittsburgh Hornets 7-1 last Saturday in Springfield, then went to Quebec for a two-game set. The Aces crushed the Indians 5-0 Sunday night and added a 7-1 whipping Tuesday night.

That gave Quebec 13 victories in 15 starts in the American Hockey League this season, and an 11-point edge over second-place Hershey Bears in the league's Eastern Division. Springfield is two points farther down in third place.

In Tuesday night's only other league game, Rochester Americans stretched their Western Division lead to five points by beating Baltimore Clippers 5-3, mainly on the strength of a three-goal second period. Bill More is last in the Eastern Division, with one win and two ties in 11 games.

SCORES THREE

Wayne Hicks of the Aces scored three goals and assisted on two others at Quebec. He now leads the league with 25 points this season, including a pace-setting 13 goals. Teammate Bob Murray got one goal and one assist to make his total 22 and Bill Sutherland added an assist for a total of 21.

Guy Rousseau, Jean-Guy Gendron and Terry Gray got the other Quebec goals. Jim Anderson's third-period goal ended a scoreless stint for Aces goalie Lorne Worsley that stretched to 111 minutes.

In Baltimore, the Americans scored four times — Walt Boyer, Larry Hillman, Eddie Litzenberger and Stan Smrke — before the homers—before Baltimore replied. Gordon Labossiere and Dave Richardson counted for the Clippers, with Smrke getting a second goal to round out the Rochester scoring.

Are Investigating Incidents At Football Game

HAMILTON (CP)—McMaster University officials said Tuesday they are investigating the origin of "several incidents" at Saturday's intermediate intercollegiate football game here between McMaster and Ottawa University. McMaster won the game 30-30.

Ivor Wynne, dean of men at the university, said a group "harassed members of the band while they were playing, sang obscene songs, hurled obscene epithets and threw beer cans on the field."

He said police had to be called to aid campus officers in controlling the group.

The McMaster student union said it deplores the group's actions. It said many of the persons who caused the disturbance were students, but not from McMaster.

The streaking Detroit Red Wings meet an all-Canadian enemy and the "new look" Toronto Maple Leafs tonight when they attempt to stretch their unbeaten string to 10 games.

Detroit extended their skein to nine games Tuesday night with a 3-3 draw against the upstart Bruins in Boston. It was the only National Hockey League game scheduled, but three will be played tonight.

The Wings, now four points ahead of the pack in ten standings, will face ex-teammate Terry Sawchuk in the Toronto nets and a juggled Maple Leaf lineup that's searching for a few goals.

In addition to the Wings-Leafs clash at Toronto, the slumping Montreal Canadiens visit Chicago Black Hawks and New York Rangers play host to Boston.

Boston, currently the second hottest club in the league, rallied on Bobby Leiter's goal with 37 seconds remaining in the game to end a three-game losing streak against Detroit. It was the first time the Bruins had scored on the Wings' Roger Crozier in three games.

Boston, slowly creeping up the cellar stairs via two wins and a tie in their last five games, jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first period on markers by Ted Green on a power play and Ab McDonald.

MacDONALD SCORES

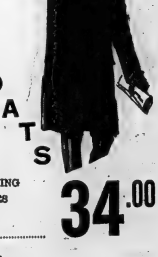
Parker MacDonald narrowed the lead near the end of the period while Ron Schock of Boston was penalized and the Wings jumped in front on second-period goals by Bruce MacGregor and Floyd Smith.

The Big Seven

By The Canadian Press

Detroit sharpshooters took advantage of a quiet evening in the National Hockey League Tuesday and gained ground on the individual scoring leaders. Norm Ullman picked up an assist to boost his point total to 25 and moved into a tie for fifth place with Pierre Pilote of Chicago. Bobby Hull, Chicago Black Hawks, who leads the league with 31 points, is three points behind leading Stan Mikita of Chicago.

Gordie Howe also earned an assist and remained tied for 7th seven in a three-way tie for the last rung on the ladder at nine points.



The leaders:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Mikita, Chicago	14	17	31
Hull, Chicago	8	4	12
Ullman, Detroit	8	4	12
Mahovlich, Tor.	4	7	11
Balfour, Tor.	4	7	11
Provost, Mont.	3	6	9
Dougall, Toronto	1	8	9

The Bruins, outshot 33-22 before 12,300 Boston fans, tied the game at 12:23 of the finale when Leiter converted a pass from Johnny Bucyk into his third goal of the season.

Green had broken Crozier's spell at 10:10 of the opener, driving home a bluelie slap shot and McDonald took Reg Fleming's pass and beat the Detroit goalie with a high back hander.

The Wings scrambled for their two second-period goals and the Bruins' goalie Ed John-

Coleman Top Rusher Stamps Led By Trombone Player

By Bob Trimbee

CALGARY (CP)—It might be prudent if coach Dave Skrien of B.C. Lions considered a brass band and a spare trombone as part of his arsenal when Lions tangle with Calgary Stampeders in the best - of - three Western Football Conference final.

A quick peek into the past of Stampeders' Lovell - Coleman, premier rusher this season in the Canadian Football League, unveiled the fact he once scoffed at football in favor of a spot in his high school band in Michigan.

"I really got a kick out of marching bands, playing the trombone and taking part in all the fun and excitement," Coleman, 26, said in an interview this week. "I never even thought about playing football in my early high school days at Hamtramck."

But the handsome five-foot-10 speedster, then a growing boy, "discovered girls were more interested in the guys who were playing the game than those who were playing in the band."

Coleman came to Calgary in 1960 as part of a deal which sent end Jack Gotta to Saskatchewan. He was real surprised to find out about Earl Lunsford.

HADN'T THOUGHT

"When I talked with Calgary I hadn't thought about playing anything but fullback. I got here and Lunsford's talent forced me to seek a spot as halfback.

"The first two years I had trouble with my legs. I have heavy legs, too heavy to take the strain of 30-yard runs on every play as required from most halfbacks and would pull leg muscles as a result.

"At fullback I can take the short, methodical pounding into the line for five or seven yards with the old long run. I had another advantage of being able to hit the line faster than most fullbacks because I am lighter. Defenders don't have as much time to get set to hit me."

When Coleman won his first rushing crown last year he averaged 5.6 yards a carry. This year he averaged 6.3 as he won his second consecutive crown with a season total of 1,622 yards rushing on 260 carries. Despite a groin injury that slowed him up during the early part of the campaign.

In one game he carried 25 times for 224 yards against Hamilton Tiger-Cats, defending Grey Cup champions. The yardage surpassed Lunsford's old WFC standard of 211 and helped Coleman remove the last trace of Lunsford's greatness which prodded his successors to some eye.

On Saturday Coleman faces British Columbia Lions in the Western Conference final. He admits B.C. is the toughest club for him to run against.

Marlboros Nip Flyers; Oshawa Ties

By The Canadian Press

Third period scoring sprees made the difference in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Tuesday night as Toronto Marlboros charged to a 4-4 win over Niagara Falls Flyers and Oshawa Generals fought to a 4-4 tie with St. Catharines Black Hawks.

The tie, Generals' fifth of the season, left them in first place with 19 points, one ahead of Marlboros. Niagara Falls is in third spot with 16 points.

Brit Selby, Barry Watson, Mike Corrigan and Neil Clarke led the Marlboro third-period attack with one goal apiece. Al Colombo and Paul Laurent notched the earlier Toronto goals.

Without top scorer Jean Pronovost and rugged defenceman Jim Moscrette, Flyers surrendered a 4-2 lead built up on a two - goal performance by Brian Bradley and one each by Ted Snell and Dave Woodley.

Rookie Tom Reid rammed in the tying goal for St. Catharines but not until Black Hawks had blown a 3-1 second period lead.

Bobby Orr, Danny O'Shea and Wayne Cashman fired three quick Oshawa goals in the first 10 minutes of the third period to build up a 4-3 lead. Bob Kliger got the first General goal.

Ken Hodge, Ross Eichler and Garry MacMillan scored the other St. Catharines goals.

Coach Punch Imlach plans to give Sawchuk his first start against his former com rades tonight. Imlach has also announced that his top scoring line, centred by Frank Mahovlich and wingers Andy Bathgate and Ron Ellis, will be split up in an effort to add scoring punch to the other lines.

Don McKenney will replace Bathgate on the top line at centre while Mahovlich moves to left wing. The rest of the shuffle depends on the condition of injured centre Dave Keon.

If Keon plays, he will centre Bathgate and Red Kelly. If he doesn't, Bathgate will pivot Kelly and Jim Pappin.

Athletics Top Hornets

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Wood stock Athletics scored twice in the first minute of the game and went on to defeat second place Galt Hornets 4-1 before 800 fans Tuesday night

The Woodstock defence took care of most of the scoring with John Hartig scoring twice and Ron Cauduro once. Art Sullivan scored the other goal in the third period to give them a 3-1 lead.

Lloyd Mercer scored Galt's lone goal in the first period after the Athletics had jumped into a quick 2-0 lead.

Spectacular goaltending by Galt's Dave Dryden and Ron Salter of the Athletics high lighted the game. Dryden, facing 36 shots in 20 for Salter held the Hornets in the game

Denies Bowl Game

KINGSTON (CP) — Al Leonard, Queen's University athletics director says that so far as he is concerned there will be no post-season East-West intercollegiate Golden Bowl football game.

Ed Zemran, athletics director for the University of Alberta said in Edmonton Monday his Golden Bears had accepted a challenge to play Queen's Golden Gaels. Lenard said Tuesday this came as a surprise to him because the Gaels play no games after mid-November.

"We just can't participate" he said. "It's a university policy which we have had for years and I don't think it would be changed for a game such as this."

Last year there was an East-West game between Queen's and Alberta. The Golden Bears won 36-7.

World Famous Globetrotters In Kingston

One of the rare opportunities to see the famous Harlem Globetrotters' basketball team in action will be available tomorrow, Thursday, November 12, when the famous club makes a one-night appearance at the Kingston Memorial Centre. The game in Kingston will be against the New York Nationals and will start at 8:30 p.m.

This is Abe Saperstein's 39th edition of the Globetrotters and they still display their cage wizardry, unsurpassed showmanship and all round brilliance at the hoop game. Included in the fun ringleaders are Bob "Showboat" Hall, 6-3 inch, new in his fifteenth year with the club; J. C. Gipson, 6-foot eight inch star and other "over six footers" Bobby Milton, Mel Davis, Leroy Gibson, David Gaines, Doug. Himes and newcomer Manny Oliver, six-foot nine inches.

Facing the Globetrotters will be the New York Nationals with an array of performers that would score most teams. The Nats include former College star players including Pat Patterson, six-foot eight inch player out of Bowling Green College.

HAMILTON (CP) — If halfback Johnny Counts can shake a slight groin injury, head coach Ralph Sazio of Hamilton Tiger-Cats will field the same backfield Saturday that was so successful in the club's last two encounters with Ottawa Rough Riders.

Hamilton, which finished atop the Eastern Football Conference standings partially because of its recent 22-1 and 34-16 victories over Ottawa, meets the Rough Riders for the first game of a two-game total-point series in Ottawa Saturday.

Counts missed the final game of the season against Montreal. He could, by playing, complete the winning combination of full-back Art Baker halfback Willie Bethea, quarterback Bernie Faloney and flanker Tommy Grant in the Hamilton back field.

Sazio, light - lipped as ever about his team's prospects in the series, said: "Just tell them we'll turn up for the game."

Since Sunday, he has put the club through two-hour workouts, including one hour in front of the movie screen and black board and an hour on the field.

THROWS BALL

Joe Zuger, Hamilton's third string quarterback behind Faloney and Frank Cosentino, is throwing the ball at practice but still complains of a sore shoulder.

If Sazio dresses Zuger, an American, for the game Saturday, he will have to drop one of his regular imports.

No serious injuries are reported and Sazio didn't mention any offensive or defensive changes for the series.

Last year, the same clubs met in the playoffs with Hamilton winning the first to Ottawa by an overwhelming 45-0 score and losing the second at home 35-18. Hamilton took the series 63-35 and went to defeat British Columbia Lions in the Grey Cup game in Vancouver.

TUNA MATCHES ON

NEW YORK (AP)—The International Tuna Cup matches, cancelled the last six years because of a lack of the giant blue-fins, will be held in Nova Scotia waters again next September, W. R. Zeller, Nova Scotia's minister of trade and industry, made the announcement Tuesday following a two-day meeting of the tournament's board of directors.

VANCOUVER (CP)— Calgary Stampeders are the opponents British Columbia Lions wanted for the Western Football Conference final.

"We hoped Calgary would win," coach Dave Skreen said Tuesday after Stamps semi-final victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders.

"Ever since they beat us we've wanted to meet them again. We also felt Calgary was the better team and we wanted to play the better team."

Skreen says it's a psychological preference.

"We'll be more emotionally prepared to play Calgary because we beat the Roughriders last year in the finals."

It shapes up, then, as a psychologically - sound rest of three series opening Saturday at 4 p.m. EST in Calgary. They play the second game here Wednesday, Nov. 18, beginning at 11 p.m. EST, and a third here if necessary Sunday, Nov. 22, at 3 p.m. EST. The first game will be televised across Canada by the CBC, the last two nationally by both CBC and CTV.

BEAT RIDERS

Stampeders defeated Saskatchewan 31-6 Monday to win their total-point semi-final 78-40.

Calgary won its last league meeting with B.C. 26-14 to end a string of five consecutive losses to the Lions.

Lions have the distinct advantage of full health.

Since Nov. 1 players have taken long jaunts into the B.C. interior to hunt. They have had a total of five days off. Last week their workouts concentrated strictly on fundamentals, but starting Tuesday night they were working on Calgary offensive and defensive formations and plays.

Back in action Saturday will be defensive halfbacks Steve Smith and Neal Beaumont and linebacker - centre Jess Williams. All three have had knee injuries. Before missing the last seven games after a cartilage operation.

TURN DOWN BID

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Six players with Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League have been turned down in their attempts to collect $35 weekly unemployment compensation during the off-season. The Minnesota employment security department reported. The department ruled that they are ineligible for benefits while their contracts are still in force.

Hits Soccer Doping

ROME (AP) — A new anti-doping program, drawn up after the pep pill scandal that rocked Italy's national soccer championships last season, goes into effect Sunday with the major league teams facing fines of up to $100,000 for using illegal stimulants.

Sports officials began to work on the new program last year after five players on the Bologna team were charged with taking stimulants in a scandal that created a national uproar from soccer circles to parliament.

General measures in the new code were approved in September. Since then administrative details have been worked out and the entire control system will begin to function Sunday.

Main points include heavy cash fines, ranging from $16,000 to $100,000 imposed on soccer clubs whose players are found guilty of using illegal stimulants.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

A couple of years ago Jake Gaudaur got on a half-time football television show and bobbled over about the growth of the pro game in Canada. He had statistics to back up his enthusiasm, but he really wasn't kidding anybody.

Why, said Jake, only 3,800 persons saw the first Grey Cup final in 1909 and attendance in 1953 was close to 40,000. Receipts in that initial cup final were just over $2,000 against something like half a million 46 years later.

That's growth, said the president of the eminently successful—at the box-office, anyway—Hamilton Tiger-Cats. It certainly is, just like the automobile taking over from the horse and buggy.

Jake and his partners in the Canadian Football League are in the entertainment business. They've got a product to sell and, naturally, they do everything in their power to sell it to fans from Montreal to Vancouver.

GOING A LONG WAY

Canadian pro football has come a long way since 1946 when clubs were spending $40,000 or $50,000 a year. Now they're operating on annual budgets of more than $500,000 and Jake didn't mention it, but a few of the nine pro teams are having a rough time keeping their financial statements in the black.

Now, Bob Hanley, sports editor of the Hamilton Spectator, thinks that the Canadian pro game is in danger of falling "squarely on its face next year unless there are some changes in the balance of power, some coaching switches, some inter-league trading of key player personnel."

Hanley doubts that CFL clubs can introduce import college rookies of the attraction of Bob Hayes, the broad - shouldered Olympic 100-metre gold medal winner. "So," says Hanley, "the only hope for amending a creaky format is a switch of coaches by some franchises and an exchange of player personnel by others."

SWITCH COACHES

Here's what Hanley has to say about the situation:

"Football fans will yawn themselves to death if the '65 season is a repeat of the '64 season, which was a repeat of the '63 season.

"The script is worn out, you might say, and unless some names and addresses are shuffled — Bud Grant to Ottawa, Rough Riders, for instance; Frank Clair to Toronto Argonauts, and Bob Shaw to Winnipeg, then fan disinterest may be evident in early attendances. . . .

"Winnipeg owes a debt to Bud Grant but as the premier performer, as the No. 1 football personality, he's worn out in that town.

"Ottawa owes a debt to Frank Clair, another dedicated quiet man, but townsfolk are ready for a new skit with new actors.

"Toronto, on the other hand, fed to the teeth with youthful house-cleaning masterminds, is in the market for an older, stable, proven thinker. Almost every club wants some kind of a 'new look' for '65, whether it's at the planning or player level.

"Television and many of its performers are hyper-conscious of 'over-exposure.' Barrymore or Bernhardt would have lost appeal if they had appeared in the same productions in the same towns on the same dates for as many consecutive years as some of the coaches and playing greats of the CFL . . ."

NFL MANAGING

Hanley figures fans look for "something excitingly new in football—at least once every three years."

Agree to a point with Hanley, but what the CFL needs is better football. It's as simple as that.

Cleveland Browns have plodded along in the National League with Jimmy Brown, the New York Giants have old Y. A. Tittle and Baltimore Colts Johnny Unitas, just to name a few. These, and others are still "excitingly new" to television viewers on Sunday afternoons.

And the crowd shots don't show many empty seats.

Hutchinson In Poor Condition

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP)—Fred Hutchinson, former manager of Cincinnati Reds, suffering from chest cancer, is again in poor condition his doctor said Tuesday.

Hutchinson showed some improvement last week and was allowed to leave the hospital Saturday and go to his home on nearby Anna Maria Island.

MASSIVE RESERVES

Rangers' G. M.

The Cat's New Job Demanding

By REN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP) —As a professional goalie for 14 years and as a corporal in the Canadian Army, Emile (The Cat) Francis thrived on responsibility.

His new job as general manager of the Rangers, New York's National Hockey League representatives, figures to be even more demanding.

An enthusiastic and dedicated hockey hunter, The Cat is still on the prowl for the best talent available. Only now he will make the top-drawer decisions. "I'll still go on trips and look over our top farm clubs," he said. "In a way I'm lucky because in the three years I've been in New York I was able to see every guy in the pro and top amateur leagues."

Until Oct. 30, the little man from North Battleford, Sask., was an assistant to general manager Muzz Patrick. The latter was elevated to the vice-presidency of the new Madison Square Garden Centre.

Francis has travelled countless miles on scouting trips.

HAVE 550 PLAYERS

"We have about 550 players in our organization, including our own team, Baltimore, St. Paul and Vancouver in the pros, and 10 sponsored amateur clubs" he said.

The Cat, 38, also moved around nimbly and often during his career as a goalie. He played for the Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks in the NHL and, in the minors, for Seattle, Kansas City, New Haven, Cincinnati, Vancouver, Cleveland, Saskatoon, Victoria, Spokane, Philadelphia and Washington.

"I've played for some of the greats of the game, such as Charlie Conacher, Frank Boucher, Bill and Bun Cook, Johnny Gottselig, Art Chapman, Doug Bentley and Lynn Patrick," Francis said. "And I learned something from every one of them." He played his first big league game for the Black Hawks at 20.

At 18, though, he had enlisted in the Canadian Army. "I thought about musing it a career," he said. "But I got an offer to play goal for the Moose Jaw, Sask., team. They were sponsored by the Black Hawks.

The five - foot - six Francis landed goal during Chicago's lean years. "They used to say the net was too big for me," he chuckles. "The way the goals were going in it must have been too wide, too.

LIVENS BASEBALL

A former player - manager for North Battleford of the Western Canada semi-pro baseball circuit, Francis usually injects baseball terms into his hockey conversations.

He has no explanation for the fact he is the only former goalie now occupying a high-level big-league position. "I would think, though," he said, "that a goalie is like a catcher in baseball. He has control of the game and can learn more about skating, shooting and checking than almost anyone.

"Shooting more is what we're trying to emphasize on the Rangers. I never saw a ball-player hit a home run with a bat on his shoulder."

The Rangers, who have qualified only once in six years for the Stanley Cup playoffs, are on the way up, The Cat believes.

"We are an improved club defensively this season because of closer checking and our two new defencemen, Rod Selling and Arnie Brown." Selling and Brown were obtained from the champion Toronto Maple Leafs last February.

BROTHERS TEAM UP — The three Faulkner brothers, all back in their native province after a brush with the big leagues, team up on the same squad of the Conception Bay Ceebees to form the most formidable force ever to greet opposing teams in the Newfoundland Senior Hockey League. Alex (left) played less than two seasons in the National Hockey League, playing with the Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings while his brothers George (centre) and Jack were on the brink of the National Hockey League when their careers began the road back to senior hockey. Faltered Near Top

Faulkners Heart-Break Story

By DAVE BUTLER

HARBOR GRACE, Nfld. (CP) — When a promising young player rises quickly through the ranks then falters near the top, the sense of regret is understandable.

When it happens so three members of the same family, it can be a real heart-breaker, not only for the men themselves but for all who took pride in their accomplishments.

George, Alex and Jack Faulkner are brothers who tried and failed to make it in the big time. George and Jack were on the brink of the National Hockey League pool when their careers began the road back to senior hockey. Alex made it but lasted less than two seasons.

The consolation is that Conception Bay Ceebees should be a power in the All-Newfoundland Hockey League when the season opens in January. All three have been hired as player-coaches. Alex, 27, at right wing, Jack, 32, at left wing and George, 30, on defence.

All three are fairly small but they made up for lack of size with a highly developed spirit of aggressiveness.

George was almost daily copy in sports pages of Quebec and Newfoundland newspapers during his three seasons with Shawinigan Falls Cataracts of the Quebec Hockey League. He had been trained in junior hockey in his hometown of Grand Falls, Nfld., and later played with Quebec Citadels of the now-defunct Quebec Junior Hockey League.

He says he was ready for a call from the parent Montreal Canadiens. But when he was informed the call wasn't coming, he returned home.

The next Faulkner to give the majors a try was Alex. In four seasons he moved from Newfoundland junior hockey to Detroit Red Wings. He played a full NHL schedule in 1962-63 but injuries kept him from appearing in more than 35 last season.

This year he felt fit and ready but Red Wings tabbed him for the minors. Alex decided to quit and came home.

Jack was scouted by Detroit and placed with Johnston Mets of the U.S. Eastern Amateur Hockey League last season. He scored 71 points and was looking for a chance in the NHL this season.

Red Wings, with a surfeit of rookies, decided against inviting him up and Sid Abel offered Jack a chance to move to the New York Rangers system. Jack asked for a contract as assurance he wouldn't die in U.S. amateur hockey. It was refused and he too came home.

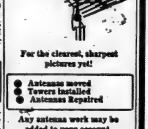
During a practice session the other day, spectators saw a lineup that seems likely to burn up the Newfoundland league this season.

"I have visions of the Herder Memorial Trophy sitting in Harbor Grace," said George, referring to the trophy that goes to the top Newfoundland senior club.

Harbor Grace has won it only twice since it was put up in 1935.

"We are content to stay in Harbor Grace for the rest of our lives," said Alex. "Why shouldn't I like it here. I can make my money (about the same as he would get playing in the minors) here for half as many games a season and hardly any travel."

Alex says the NHL is "hard on a little fellow" but that this had nothing to do with his departure. "I guess I knew what plans Sid had for me, and I just couldn't turn this offer down."



The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Longshot punters had a good night at the Western Fair Raceway Tuesday, starting with the third race, when Amber Chief B came up strongly in the stretch to pay $45.40 for the win.

The fourth delivered an exacta of $68.10 when Cook's Brogue finished first at $7.30 and outsider American Pilot got the second spot and paid $9.70.

Then in the sixth, the favorite players got another shock Molly O Biggs paced the mile in 2:11 4-5 and returned $34.00.

The Tracks

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Eddie Hal, a seven-year-old gelding from the McDougall Stable at Lambeth, won the $500 feature race at the Garden City Raceway Tuesday night but needed every inch of his early lead.

Winning by only half-a-length Eddie Hal was pushed hard in the final stretch by the favorite, Magic Millie from the Belleville farm of Irwin Ness. Armbro Explorer, of the Bar Joe Stable in Brampton, was third.

Eddie Hal, in gaining his first win in two starts at Garden City, returned $11.70, $4.60, and $4.30 across the board

Depending On Title Winner

WBA Claims Challengers Offered Deal

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The commissioner of the World Boxing Association said today his organization's proposed elimination tournament for the heavyweight boxing championship was scuttled because the top-rated challengers were offered a deal involving the outcome of the Cassius Clay-Sonny Liston title fight.

Abe J. Greene also said in an interview here that a challenger already has been chosen to fight the winner of the Clay-Liston heavyweight championship fight next Monday in Boston. The WBA does not recognize it as a title fight.

The WBA, which objects to the Clay - Liston fight because it was agreed upon before their first meeting at Miami Beach last February, has suspended both fighters for violating its ban on return - bout clauses in contracts for championship fights.

After suspending Liston and Clay, the WBA proposed an elimination tourney for the heavyweight title involving former champion Floyd Patterson, Doug Jones, Ernie Terrell and Cleveland Williams.

"I charge that a deal has been made to frustrate the effort to develop a tournament which would lead to a champion other than these two (Clay and Liston)," Green said.

"Deals have already been made with the challengers we rated for the tourney depending on the outcome of the fight.

"If Clay wins again . . . because there is a big gate in prospect, he will fight Patterson, and if Liston wins, Patterson will retire from boxing and Liston will fight one of the other three . . . whichever one will be the biggest draw."

Greene said Liston wouldn't fight Patterson because he twice knocked him out in the first round, and "the bout wouldn't draw."

Cassius Clay
Wants God In His Corner

BOSTON (AP)—Cassius Clay hopes God will be in his corner when he takes on Sonny Liston next Monday night in defence of his world heavyweight boxing championship.

"If I win, it'll be the will of God," Clay said Tuesday in a display of the deeper man better known as a talkative clown with a punch. "If I lose" he added, "It'll be God's will."

Clay, who has adopted the Muslim religion as well as the religious name, Muhammad Ali, said his new religion has given him a billion followers around the world, followers who never heard of boxing until he became champion.

He said he receives letters every day from countries like Pakistan, Egypt, Turkey and Morocco. The writers ask him to visit and they will pay for him.

The champion said he will visit the Middle East after the fight, especially Turkey "where 40,000 people are waiting to see me."

Meanwhile the challenger, Liston, worked out in historic Plymouth, many miles from the scene of the fight at Boston Garden.

They will go against University of Western Ontario Mustangs in their league opener Nov. 26.

Other teams in the league are University of Montreal, Queen's University, Laval University, McGill University, University of Toronto and University of Waterloo.

Jet Woes Delay Juniors

CALGARY (CP) — Montreal Notre Dame de Grace Maple Leafs, who clash here today with Edmonton Huskies for the Canadian junior football championship, were almost three hours late in arriving in Calgary Thursday when their DC-8 jet aircraft developed engine trouble.

Maple Leafs, seeking to take the title after losing it to the Huskies in 1963 and 1962, were minutes out of Toronto's International Airport when the giant Air Canada jet lost power in one engine and had to turn back.

George Economides, Montreal coach, said Tuesday night the team eventually boarded another aircraft and landed in Calgary three hours later than expected.

Economides said the jet had to circle over Lake Ontario for about an hour to jettison fuel before it could land.

Despite the delay, Economides whipped his charges through a brisk 2½-hour workout at Motwata Stadium in preparation for the 4 p.m. EST championship battle at McMahon Stadium today.

Bears Near Receptions Record

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Morris and Mike Ditka of Chicago Bears are approaching a National Football League record for combined pass receptions, the latest statistics disclosed Tuesday.

The two have a total of 123 receptions, Morris 68 and Ditka 55, to rank first and second in the circuit. With five games remaining, they are only three away from the record set in 1950 by three Los Angeles Rams, Tom Fears, who caught 84 and Glenn Davis and Elroy Hirsch, who snared 63 apiece.

Minnesota's Fran Tarkenton and Bobby Walden accounted for the only changes in the individual leaders. Tarkenton took over from Baltimore's Johnny Unitas as the top-rated passer while Walden replaced Detroit's Yale Lary as the punting leader. Walden has averaged 47.1 yards for 47 punts while Lary's average is 46.3 on 45 efforts.

Jimmy Brown of Cleveland continues to lead ground - gainers with 934 yards in 179 attempts. Jim Taylor of Green Bay is the runner - up with 726 yards followed by Don Perkins of Dallas Cowboys, 697. Baltimore's Lenny Moore remains the top scorer with 84 points, four more than teammate Lou Michaels.

Beavers, Hawks Share Lead After Victories

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Buckingham Beavers have discovered the sure-fire formula for winning Central Junior A Hockey League games and making things miserable for opposition goalies at the same time—scoring goals.

The Beavers walloped Ottawa Capitals 12-4 Tuesday night to remain in a first - place tie with Hull Hawks as the Hawks trounced Arnprior Kenwoods 8-1 at Arnprior. Only two games were scheduled in the 10-team league.

The high scoring Beavers had three-goal performances from Jacques DesMoors and Lionel Beaulne as they ran their goal total to 53 in just six games.

Although the Beavers have given up more goals than any team in the league, they've outscored the opposition in every game but one.

Grand Prix Title To Gayford

NEW YORK (AP)—Tom Gayford of Toronto, a long-time favorite at Madison Square Garden, won the Grand Prix of New York Tuesday night at the closing session of the National Horse Show. In the process, Gayford:

1. Became the leading foreign rider in the show, winning the Trial Guide Memorial Challenge Trophy.

2. Became the second foreigner to win an event at this year's horse show here His 13-year-old gelding, Jim Day of Toronto, captured two individual events.

The Grand Prix of New York featured a tough course of 13 jumps in the first round. Seven riders went around cleanly including three from the United States. Frank Chapot of Manon; Neal Shapiro on Jacks or Better, and Bill Steinkraus on Snowbound.

Kathy Kusner, the fourth United States rider, aboard Untouchable, had a fine round, and didn't get into the eight-fence jumpoff. But she won the National Grand Prix of Conditional title with 32 points because of earlier success.

DIDN'T QUALIFY

Runner-up Steinkraus had a refusal and a knockdown at the final fence with Sinjon in the jumpoff, so he didn't score a point. Going into the event, Steinkraus had 32 points and Steinkraus 30. That's how they finished, too, as Gayford pushed into a tie with Steinkraus for second spot in the individual standings.

Chapot had eight faults in the jumpoff and Shapiro four Gayford on Blue Beau was the only clean rider in the jumpoff and he was not faultless. He piloted his mount so carefully that his was charged with 1¼ time faults.

Canada finished second to the U.S. in the team standings with 26 points, followed by Argentina with 37, Mexico 44 and the United States won eight of the 11 international events, for 135 points.

The 51st edition of the eight day horse show ended with an impressive parade of the international teams. The teams now head for Toronto and the Royal Winter Fair which gets under way Thursday and runs for 10 days.

"THE FALL OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE"

A Magnificent Film Epic

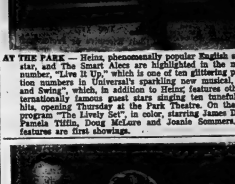
The long-awaited Samuel Bronston epic spectacular, "The Fall of The Roman Empire," is now showing at the Bells Theatre. Starring such outstanding names as Sophia Loren, Stephen Boyd, James Mason, Alec Guinness and Christopher Plummer, "The Fall of The Roman Empire" is destined to become one of the great film recreations of all time.

The story begins approximately 180 years after the birth of Christ. The Roman Empire is at the height of its glory under Emperor Marcus Aurelius who feels that his time to live is short and so he must find a successor to his throne.

Under normal circumstances, the new Caesar would be Commodus (Christopher Plummer), his son, but Aurelius feels that he is not worthy and instead decides to name Livius (Stephen Boyd), one of his ranking generals and the sweetheart of his beautiful daughter Lucilla (Sophia Loren).

This decision is well and good but before Aurelius can officially announce that he wants Livius to succeed him, he suddenly dies. Because there is no tangible proof that Livius is to be Caesar, Commodius ascends the throne and with his corrupt rule, the Empire starts tumbling downward.

Sophia Loren is stunning as Lucilla; her performance ranging from poignant love scenes to intense hatred is superb. Stephen Boyd as Livius gives a powerful portrayal of a Roman General torn between the love of a woman and love for his country.



James Mason as the Greek counsellor Timonides give an interesting and truly excellent characterization. Alec Guinness in the important role of Emperor Marcus Aurelius, is highly impressive. Some of the rulers of the empire is one of the most exciting ever seen on the screen. As Aurelius' evil Commodus, Christopher Plummer is remarkable as a crazed Caesar who topples one of the world's greatest empires.

One of the highpoints of the film is its tremendous scope. The battle sequences are breathtakingly done in Technirama, Panavision and Technicolor and when they are seen, it seems as if the viewer is in the middle of the battle. There is also a fine musical score by Dimitri Tiomkin.

Directed by Anthony Mann and written by Ben Barzman, and Philip Yordan, "The Fall of The Roman Empire" is the kind of film that appears only once in a while — and you will enjoy seeing. The Paramount picture has everything — superb acting, intense drama, a thrilling adventure, romance, big excitement — to make it spectacular enjoyment.

AT THE PARK — Heinz, phenomenally popular English singing star, and The Smart Aleck are highlighted in the musical numbers "Live It Up," which is one of ten glittering production numbers in Universal's sparkling new musical "Sing and Swing", which, in addition to Heinz features other internationally famous guest stars singing ten tuneful song hits, opening Thursday at the Park Theatre. On the same program "The Lively Set", in color, starring James Darren, Pamela Tiffin, Doug McClure and Joanie Sommers. Both features are first showings.

AT THE PARK — Ross Elliott, Marilyn Maxwell (centre) and Pamela Tiffin appear disturbed by what they see and hear in this garage scene from Universal's "The Lively Set," opening Thursday at the Park Theatre, romantic drama with racing car background. The girls star in the color film with James Darren, Doug McClure and Joanie Sommers. On the same program "Sing and Swing", Both features are first showings.

Spoof on U.S. Election Was Natural for Program

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—A spoof of the U.S. election was a natural for what was the Week That Was program Tuesday night. It had been crowded out of television screens for several weeks by solid political broadcasts during the election campaign.

One amusing sketch, which I seem to have read somewhere before, was pegged on Senator Goldwater's pre - election expression of friendship for his Democratic opponents, President Johnson and Senator Humphrey. It had the three of them together over the stinging statements made in the heat of oratory.

Another bright spot was a number which had an actor playing Senator Geiger George Murphy of California doing a song and dance routine to a tune played on the piano by a cigar-smoking Pierre Salinger.

However the happiest numbers were on subjects apart from politics.

They also suffered critical slings and arrows, probably because it has not always been as rosy when been as many of us would wish. But at least it is on the air and thus should be treasured.

Gardner Confirms 'All Mason's Clients Innocent'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Erle Stanley Gardner, the book fastery, was in town for a rare visit to his television branchild, Perry Mason, and to make sure the defence lawyer continues his winning ways.

Gardner's advent was celebrated by a party given by Raymond Burr, the Mason of television, for the losers of the 371 shows during the series' eight years.

Burr didn't appear, but dozens of his defeated opponents did. Gardner was a grumbling participant—"My cars are bad and I have no gift for small talk."

"I come to Hollywood as little as possible," he said. "People are apt to trample me to death, and I start to get behind in my work. I'm always closing offices and opening up new ones because people can't catch up with me.

"It's a danger down at my ranch. It's so remote that people don't just drop in for a few minutes; they start unloading boxes and suitcases. I was once asked what would be the ideal existence for me. My answer: A guest at my own ranch."

MAN EIGHT SECRETARIES

Besides his 3,000-acre spread in Riverside County, he has 27 acres in Pasadena, Calif., and a housebout on the Sacramento River. In these places and offices, he maintains six full-time secretaries, who take the dictation for his books and correspond ("I've forgotten how to operate a typewriter").

His output so far? He couldn't remember, so he had a secretary phone the ranch office. The report came back: 125 books, including 74 Perry Masons.

"Run out of ideas? I don't think I ever will, as long as I maintain a variety of experiences. I try to make each new Perry Mason better than the last one."

He also oversees the television scripts, reviewing them three to five times before production. "My job is to make Perry Mason seem like a veteran lawyer in a courtroom," he said.

Will Perry ever lose?

He chuckled. "They say some people are lucky in their choice of parents. Perry was lucky in the choice of one parent, a man who screens all his clients at the door. All of them are innocent."

RESCUED FROM WELL

SALEM, Ind. (AP)—An 18-month-old girl, mud-streaked and crying, was rescued from a farm well Tuesday after being wedged for three hours in water up to her waist. Two men, neighbors, digging frantically in the hard, stoney southern Indiana soil with shovels, reached the blonde toddler, Deborah K. Dillman, and police took her to hospital.

Statistics released Tuesday by the league showed Taylor with four touchdowns, three field goals, 18 converts and two singles. The previous record for a quarterback was held by Don Getty of University of Western Ontario, who counted 51 points in 1954.

In a single B.M.H.A. juvenile game played Tuesday night, the Tigers whitewashed the O.S.D. Wolves by an 8-0 count. It was 6-0 at half time.

Fleming paced the Tiger scorers with two goals and one assist. He was aided by Dorm with a pair of goals and by Muir with one goal and one assist. Bartley, Olson and Hills added a goal each and Percy drew one helper.

The game was a rugged affair with 14 penalties handed out. Among the sentences were misconducts to Fleming of the Tigers and Mooney of O.S.D.

CITES NEW ADVANCE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Slick coats for teeth will provide the most great advance against dental disease, a Canadian dental scientist predicts. Dr. Gilbert J. Parfitt of Vancouver said the coating will make it harder for bacteria to cling to the tooth surface to cause decay and gum disease. Dr. Parfitt spoke at the annual session of the American Dental Association.

LEAVES HOSPITAL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Walter Jenkins, former aide to President Johnson who was arrested twice on morals charges, was released this week from George Washington University Hospital, a hospital spokesman said Tuesday night. Jenkins was admitted to the hospital Oct. 14. That same day the arrests—one in 1959 and the other last Oct. 7 —became known publicly and Johnson promptly and received the resignation of his aide of 25 years.

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Kelso, four time Canadian Horse of the Year, world's leading money - winning thoroughbred and Horse of the Century, racing since the renowned Exterminator, tries today to break a jinx that has dogged him for three runnings of the $150,000 Washington D.C., International at Laurel.

The seven - year - old horse, winner of 36 stakes is compiling a bank account of $1,803,362, ran second in each of his three appearances in this 1½-mile grass course event which in 13 years had gained world-wide attention.

Kelly, as the popular horse is known affectionately around Mrs. Richard C. duPont's Bohemia Stable, was beaten three-quarters of a length by America's T.V. Lark in 1962, 1½ lengths by the French representative Match II in 1963 and one-half length by the United States' Mongo last year.

"But we are ready for this one," said trainer Carl Hanford as he watched the sleek dark bay work a half mile in 46 1-5 seconds Tuesday and then go out five furlongs in 59 flat. "He never was better."

Grass, except for sting, never has been one of Kelso's favorite foods. But he was the slight choice to break the jinx in what could be his last race. He is eligible for the Galant Fox Handicap at Aqueduct Nov. 21 and could be booked for a match with Gun Bow, but those close to Mrs. duPont say that this will be the gelding's farewell appearance if he wins.

But Kelso faces far from an easy track in opposing Gun Bow, the four-year-old American speedster carrying the silks of the Maryland farm of Mrs. John T. Stanley and Harry Albert, and six hand-picked foreign invaders.

Foremost among the challengers to American supremacy are Italy's Veronese and the slim barrelled three - year - old filly Bella Sfandra from France. Russia's Anilin, Ireland's Biscayne, Venezuela's Primordial and Japan's Ryu Yorel round out the field.

First Monday will be worth $80,000.

Harlech Castle, One of Six Built by Edward I in Late 13th Century, Still Standing

HARLECH, Wales (CP)—Pushbutton warfare with shoulder-mounted rockets and the finger is a far cry from days when the most dreaded weapon to fear was an arrow through the head.

Medieval soldiers who defended the immense castles here nearly seven centuries ago thought the crossbow the ultimate weapon. They also thought Castell Harlech, with its 12-foot-thick walls and six huge towers, was the last word in castle design.

Edward I built the castle as one of a ring of fortresses to keep the Welsh from rising against English rule. Today it is considered the finest example of medieval military architecture in Britain.

The Welsh didn't knuckle under to the English for many years. There were minor outbreaks of violence and then a guerrilla campaign led by Owain Glendower led a spectacular revolt against the English monarch and captured Harlech in 1404 using gunpowder.

Now Owen is the darling of Welsh nationalists who want Wales to break away from English rule.

The capture of Harlech was the climax of Owen's career and held it for four years. He moved his headquarters to it and even called a Welsh parliament there. But Henry IV fought back and Owen was defeated.

Harlech was in operation during the Wars of the Roses and the civil war in the 17th century.

Modern Harlech has its invaders too.

They swarm through a turret attic, past the ragged, unfurled spiked portcullises, through the giant gatehouse, through the barbican and down the last, up the stair turrets and over the battlements.

Their weapons are cameras and guidebooks.

AP Specialist in Communist Affairs Pieces Together Story Of How Nikita Dethroned

A month ago Nikita Khrushchev was a big man in the world. He confidently flashed a grin as he talked with three cosmonauts in orbit. Then things began to happen. Here an Associated Press specialist in communist affairs pieces together the story of how Khrushchev fell and brings into focus the things that tripped him.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Once too often, Nikita Sergeyvitch Khrushchev ,eff Moscow. The men he left behind used his own techniques to topple him from power.

How was Khrushchev dethroned? A combination of the military brass and conservative Communists using lessons learned from Khrushchev—was behind the upheaval.

Why was Khrushchev dethroned? Apparently he lost the support of the Communist party central committee. Soviet communism had been rocked by monumental failures—much of them inherent in the system and the built-in bureaucracy—under a Khrushchev who had struggled to square dogma with practicality.

In the Khrushchev era, the Soviet party and government were humiliated by the Cuban missile crisis by agricultural failures requiring a turn to capitalist farmers to feed the Soviet people—and by a public challenge from Red China to the Kremlin's world Communist leadership.

Khrushchev was not present Tuesday evening, Sept 29, at a Moscow reception for visiting President Sukarno of Indonesia. He did not know that his proteges, Leonid Brezhnev and Alexei Kosygin—soon to take over his job—were meeting that the evening off by themselves in earnest, private conversation.

VACATION BOUND

Khrushchev had not seen too interested in paying homage to Sukarno, a man who had implicitly criticized his policies while seeking Soviet aid. In fact, Khrushchev was leaving for a vacation at his hideout at Gagra on the Black Sea.

By all odds, it should have been safe enough for him to leave. He had a formidable machine in the central committee. In the seven years since he ousted the Stalinist stalwarts and threw them out of the party, Khrushchev had replaced about 75 per cent of all party secretaries around the country.

Many times before he had been able to lure his top men in Moscow he considered his own proteges. Nothing important was in the offing except preparation of a welcome for a three-man team which Khrushchev was going to orbit the earth.

There was no central committee session scheduled until the mid - November the date Khrushchev himself as first party secretary had planned on to take up the vexing problem of China's challenge.

When Khrushchev was greeted the orbiting astronauts by radio he was his old bubbly self. That was Monday, Oct. 12. He promised the spacemen he would be on hand to give them a rousing reception in Moscow. He seemed fully confident he would be there.

SAME OLD ROUTINE

Much of what happened to Khrushchev must remain in the realm of educated speculation. But there were deadly parallels with the history of Soviet politics . . . as suddenly called central committee meeting . . . a speech denouncing the current dictator . . . The military brass wielding a balance of power . . . and ultimately, de-Khrushchevization as there had been de Stalinization under his rule.

Khrushchev himself laid down the pattern in 1957. He enlisted the aid of Defence Minister Georgi Zhukov to overcome with a sudden meeting of the party central committee from all parts of the Soviet Union—and gain his debt of gratitude to the old war hero by disgracing and retiring him.

Khrushchev set the precedent that a central committee could have the last word—even over the president of the party, successor to the Lenin throne, a body never overruled.

The plot may have been in existence a long time. But evidently, from the moment Khrushchev left Moscow Sept 30, well-oiled machinery went into action, masterminded by a clique of powerful military figures and party presidium members.

The story of 1957 and the anti-party group was repeated. Speeches, letters all parts of the Soviet Union, central committee members flew into Moscow. They arrived from farflung points around the world, abandoning diplomatic stations in response to an urgent summons.

There was plenty of time to work on them. The plotters could use to good advantage, a well-known resentment of Khrushchev's obvious favoritisms—his appointment of relatives and friends to juicy assignments at home and abroad, his tendency to live high his wife and children, his tendency to try—despite lack of full dictatorial authority — to run a one-man show.

The plotters played heavily on his many failures at home—in agriculture, in the economy and failures of the economy, in the rise of youthful and intelligent dissidents against party strictures. Such things could threaten the party's authority.

They also played heavily on Khrushchev's foreign policy contributions to the up-listing of communism around the world. They could point to the loss of a Kremlin grip on a world Communist conspiracy. They could point to loss of authority and direction of the world Communist movement. They could point to mishandling of a quarrel with China.

Khrushchev appears to have been nicely tricked.

PLEASANT-SOUNDING PLOT

The timetable of Khrushchev's fall is obscure at times but from available evidence it developed about as follows:

Tuesday, Oct. 13—Something went out of whack. The spacemen land. Khrushchev starts to talk with them by telephone as was customary. One report has him at the Black Sea resort talking with a visiting French Communist. Another report has it that Khrushchev received a telephone call at Gagra telling him a committee meeting had been called How ever and wherever he may have received that information, Khrushchev probably was enraged. Nobody but he—first secretary of the party—could call such a meeting.

Wednesday, Oct. 14—The central committee is in session. As Khrushchev had done in 1956 at the 20th party congress, this time there is another secret speech. The speaker is the dour Mikhail Suslov, veteran Stalinist and Suslov, voicing a long indictment of Khrushchev's leadership, accuses him of having himself in an impassioned three-hour speech, but his central committee audience is not swayed. He is outvoted.

Thursday, Oct. 15 — Kremlin leaders meet with a Cuban delegation, but there is no sign of Khrushchev. The party presidium "granted N.S. Khrushchev's request to be relieved of his duties because of his advanced age and deteriorating health." Brezhnev and Kosygin (whose names had appeared fairly rugged).

Saturday, Oct. 17—The press and radio announce Khrushchev was forced out Charges being to appear: Hare-brained schemes in handling phrase mongering, one-man decisions, violating the collective leadership principle.

Now, new confusion reigns in the Communist world. Khrushchev's principal supporters, the Chinese, applaud his fall but diplomatic observers wait, waiting to judge what the new regime might stand for.

Throughout the world Communists, reeling with shock, demand explanations. In itself this is a mark of the Khrushchev decade. Communists before had always accepted Soviet upheavals with equanimity. The reaction this time betokens a loosening of the Kremlin grip on world Communism.

FALL HARD

When mighty fall in the Communist system, they fall hard. Soon, Communists began to accept explanations. Khrushchev was reported assigned to a four room apartment in Moscow on a pension of $1,100 a month And there was bitter irony in it. The same apartment building houses V. M. Molotov and Marshal Zhukov, whom Khrushchev had disgraced.

Now de - Khrushchevization would set in, Khrushchev would be watched so there would be no comeback. He would gradually be isolated with his family and friends.

Publicly, the most important accusations concern Soviet humiliation in the Cuban missile crisis, embarrassment at agricultural failures and the strong challenge from Red China. But probably most important is the sin of treading on the wrong toes.

Only two weeks before he was deposed, Khrushchev was pictured publicly as ready to turn his attention to consumer industry. This was more than heresy. It was a one-man revolution. For 20 years of the Soviet Union, emphasis had been on heavy industry which made it world war three military power, with the consumer industry a poor third. That was left. The Khrushchev notion implied cutting military spending and the party could not like it.

WILL BLAME HIM

Almost everything that has gone wrong with the Soviet Union and world communism is likely to be blamed on Khrushchev in a general re-education of a Soviet public which now he had been all too popular.

But many of the things that happened in Khrushchev probably would have happened anyway. The developments seemed to spring from causes inherent in the Soviet system.

Khrushchev's experiments with Soviet - style economy seemed clearly the result of riding and intense pressure from a growing Soviet middle class, and popular opinion—something which never existed under Stalin—forced to impel him to a foreign policy carefully avoiding the possibility of a world war showdown with the West.

Food Rationing Plan in India Said Shattered

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri's food rationing program in the Indian Communist stronghold of Kerala State appeared shattered today. Looters demanding food attacked food areas.

The situation held grave political implications for Shastri, who last week pledged to carry out Nehru's warnings that the government machinery was too inefficient to handle rationing for Kerala's 20,000,000 people.

Shastri had hoped rationing in Kerala would open the way to solving the critical food shortages in other parts of India. But the rationing phrase monger-ing, one-man decisions, violating the collective leadership principle.

Students led food riots throughout the state. The rioters stoned officials and police and looted shops, shouting "give us rice or shoot us."

Mobs of 1,000 or more students roamed the state capital, Trivandrum, near the southern tip of India. Police used tear gas and clubs on demonstrators in Quilon. One crowd looted a passenger train at Shoranur.

The Communists helped over throw the Congress Party government in Kerala in June this year, forcing the central government to take over the state administration.

Four Nuclear Storage Dumps Not Yet Ready

OTTAWA (CP) — Completion of four nuclear storage dumps in Canada for RCAF air defence command, originally scheduled for Oct. 30, has been delayed for a "few months," the defence department says.

The dumps are being built at Chatham, N.B., Bagotville, Que., Val d'Or, Que., and Comox, B.C., to hold the Genie rocket-armed air for Voodoo jet interceptors. The cost is $2,028,681.

Informants explained that the delay means that the Voodoo's will be unable to assume a full clear role until next spring, or about two years after the Liberal government took office.

By that time, the Genie, nine feet long and weighing 800 pounds, will have been in operational use in the U.S. Air Force air defence command for eight years.

Three other nuclear systems have been put into operation by the armed forces since the Liberals assumed office.

They are the nuclear bombs carried by the RCAF CF-104 low-level jet bombers stationed at Zweibrucken and Baden-Soellingen in West Germany, the nuclear warheads for the Honest John artillery rockets at Hemer and Werl in West Germany; and the nuclear noses for the Bomarc anti-aircraft missiles at North Bay, Ont., and La Macaza, Que.

Herald Sells Hand Press To University

CAMPBELLFORD — An unusual feature came to light this week in Campbellford when it was disclosed that the editor and publisher of the Campbellford Herald, W. A. Kingston, had sold an old Washington hand press which was purchased in 1873 by Mr. J. T. Vosper who founded the Herald.

McMaster University, Hamilton, was the purchaser. Dr. W. J. Cameron, professor of English at the university, advertised and four such presses were found, one in the Archives Museum in Ottawa, one at Upper Canada Village, one in Michigan, and this one in Campbellford.

Mr. Vosper used the press until 1892 when he purchased a new press to print a larger paper. The old press was kept and used for some extra purposes.

In 1904 the late George A. Kingston purchased "The Herald" and became editor and publisher. In 1913 Mr. Kingston built a new building but retained the old press for printing proofs, large signs and posters.

After Mr. Kingston's death in 1936 his son, Wilbert A. Kingston, became the paper's editor and publisher. Since then the old press has been used as a single impression press, sometimes for large signs but mostly as a make-up stone.

The press has now been shipped to McMaster University and Mr. Kingston has recently acquired a modern press but must now find a new make-up stone.

JUNIOR AUXILIARY

Two girls were enrolled in the Junior Auxiliary of St. John the Baptist Anglican Church, Miss Kimberley Lloyd and Miss Darla Reynolds. This brings the number up to ten members. It is necessary for the girls to complete at least four weeks' regular attendance memorizing the members' prayer, the Promise and the Five Aims. The weekly program is made up of a study of missionary work in the world with an emphasis on India. A scrap book is being formed on this country on all aspects of its life. The young members are busy quilting blocks to make a child's quilt for a missionary need. In prayer life, interest is centred upon the Diocese of the Arctic; the Sunday School by Post in the Western Diocese and the workers of the M.S.C.C. Activities embrace also church-manship, missions, dorcas work, first aid and nature study.

At the enrolment, the girls received their membership cards and green felt ties.

The branch is supported by the Women's Auxiliary, its leaders being Mrs. Kathleen Thompson and Mrs. Lois Mickle. Meetings are held in the Parish Hall every Thursday.

Pension Boost Not Effective Until 1968

OTTAWA (CP) — Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) accused Health Minister Judy LaMarsh Tuesday of misleading MPs and Canadians old age pensioners into believing they'll get extra old age pension payments in 1966 based on increases in the cost of living.

Miss LaMarsh denied any such action, arguing that she had never indicated the extra payments, pegged to changes in the consumer price index, would start when the Canada Pension Plan comes into force Jan. 1, 1966.

Mr. Knowles quoted Miss LaMarsh's statement in the Commons Monday before details of the government pension bill were made public. But when the printed bill was made public several hours later, it showed that extra payments due to living cost increases would not come into effect until 1968 and would amount to 75 cents a month.

Miss LaMarsh maintained it has been known for some time that various provisions of the Canada Pension Plan would come into force at different dates after the pension plan it self went in force in 1966.

The pension plan bill for the first time would use the index of living costs to make adjustments in the basic $75-a-month old age pension now paid to all at age 70.

She said the New Democrats had urged such a relation between pensions and living costs changes. Mr. Knowles sounded unhappy that the government had adopted this principle.

Divergencies in Culture Greatest Problem in Issue

The divergent make-up of the Communist world casts the biggest obstacle in the path of a solution to Soviet-Chinese differences and it is doubtful that these differences can be resolved in the foreseeable future.

New strains in Soviet - Chinese relations as well as in relations among other Communist governments will no doubt crop up from time to time as the Communist states take on more mature complexions.

Communist officials from a number of countries took advantage of the anniversary of the 1917 Russian revolution to converge on Moscow to partake in festivities as well as to exchange views on how to reduce or eliminate sources of friction in the Communist Bloc.

Notable among the visitors was Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, who took advantage of the removal of Nikita Khrushchev to try to find out how far the present Soviet leadership is willing to stray from the policies of the former Soviet premier.

QUESTION OF PEACE

Moscow and Peking have avoided trading insults since the removal of Khrushchev, who often spoke loudly on Soviet - Chinese differences, but Leonid Brezhnev, the new first secretary of the Soviet Communist party, and Alexei Kosygin, the new Soviet premier, have maintained they will not alter Soviet foreign policy—of which maintenance of world peace is an important plank.

The question of world peace has been a major thorn in Soviet-Chinese relations for some time.

The Soviet Union has sought to improve relations with such countries as the United States and at the same time to maintain leadership of the Communist camp.

The Chinese, on the other hand, in trying to wrest leadership from the Soviet Union, continue to argue that war is inevitable and have attempted to prove this whenever feasible, in Korea, Southeast Asia and India.

WITHDREW SUPPORT

Soviet - Chinese tension increased when Russian military and economic support was withdrawn in 1960 as the two Communist powers pursued divergent attitudes toward world problems.

China's growing population and her inability to increase its food production at a satisfactory rate apparently were the thought of war somewhat less repulsive in Chinese Communist minds than in the minds of the Soviet government which is striving to increase living standards at the cost of avoiding war.

It is therefore inconceivable that such independent policies can be reconciled, despite Chou's visit to Moscow, without one country or the other surrendering completely its basic policies of the last few years.

But an effort at reaching some sort of understanding has been launched. It is doubtful much change in Soviet-Chinese relations will come of it—except one country or the other accepts war as the path to Communist expansion, or the Chinese accept peace.

7 Persons Die In Fire Reported Set By Arsonist

Blaze Sweeps Tenement In Holyoke, Mass.

By ARSENE DAVIGNON

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — Seven persons — five of them children—died when a general alarm midnight blaze, believed set, destroyed a five-story tenement.

Officials said the fire, which apparently started on wooden rear porches, was the worst in the history of this industrial city located in Massachusetts' Connecticut Valley.

Four of the victims were members of one family. The other three dead were two small brothers and a little girl from a third family.

Five persons were taken to hospital. Some 50 to 60 persons either fled the building or were rescued down ladders. None of the five injured was reported on the danger list.

Fire Chief William W. Mahoney said the fast-spreading fire "definitely was set." A volunteer rescue worker quoted a first floor tenant as saying he thought he thinks was an intruder in the cellar of the building shortly before the fire was discovered.

ACCOUNT FOR ALL

There was confusion as to the number of victims until six hours after the blaze was brought under control in Holyoke's The Flats section. Fire officials said at 2 a.m. however, that all known occupants had been accounted for.

Another volunteer worker, 19-year-old Ronald N. Langlois, said he was able to get into the burning building three times and rescue six or seven children. But, he said, on his fourth trip flames began circling behind him and he had to dash from it upper floor despite the screams of children.

The victims were:

Mrs. Aida Dupont, 52; her daughter, Pauline, about 20; Pauline's sons, Maurice, 3, and Ronald, 2; Leo Roberge, 10, Leo's brother, Edward R. Jr., 7, and Mary Anne Pronovost, 8.

Ronald's body has not yet been recovered until hours after the fire was out.

The Roberge boys' parents and a brother and sister were among the patients in St. Holyoke Hospital; Edward R. Roberge Sr., about 30 his wife, Mary, 45; their daughter, Barbara, 16; their son, Gerald, 3, Gerald Pronovost, 5, brother of Mary Anne.

TALKS AT SCENE

Volunteer rescue worker Robert Brodie, of South Hadley Falls said he went to the scene when he got out of work at a nearby factory shortly after 11 p.m.

Trading Deficits Shored Up

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Britain's first socialist budget in 13 years lifted the spirits of widows and pain among many others with its increased gasoline and income taxes.

The Tory opposition was scheduled to open its main attack in the House of Commons today, following up Sir Alec Douglas - Home's initial comment that the budget is only the "tip of the iceberg" in Labor overment taxation.

The general newspaper reaction is that the dose of strong medicine is no more powerful or distasteful than most been expected from James Callaghan, the 52-year-old chancellor of the exchequer, and he administered the potion with a smiling, bedside manner.

Delivering his autumn emergency budget in an hour-long address Wednesday, Callaghan said his main aims were to trading deficit, combat inflation at home and apply taxation to ensure social justice for the needy.

The budget slapped a six-pence (7½-cent) tax boist on a gallon of gasoline, lifting premium prices to about 80 cents, and a sixpence increase on the basic income-tax rate, meaning that a married couple with two children and an income of £1,600 annually will pay £233 more compared with the present £224, 4D. The new rate, effective April 6, means Britons will be paying 41¼ per cent of wages in tax.

TO GET TOUGHER

Callaghan also announced he will introduce a tougher capital gains tax in the main spring budget and will also propose a new corporation tax to replace the present 15-per-cent company profit tax and company income levy.

The budget did little to answer the big question of how long Prime Minister Harold Wilson, with a majority of only five in the 630-member House of Commons, is likely to continue before calling a new general election.

"No government would willingly face the country soon after putting sixpence on petrol and doubling the tax on what we see the budget as the forerunner of an election next May or June.

"The main burden of the April budget is clearly intended to be borne by business and the investor, rather than by the individual wage or salary earner," says The Telegraph, "to PLUG LOOPHOLES

Callaghan said he is determined to plug tax loopholes and make sure rewards go to workers and diligent businessmen rather than speculator.

A main object of the budget was to provide the legal background for Britain's recently-instituted 15-per-cent surcharge on imports.

Callaghan asked powers to run until Nov. 30, 1965, renew-

Electoral Map Next In House

OTTAWA (CP) — Back from a Remembrance Day holiday, the Commons heads again today into work on legislation to redraw Canada's electoral map.

Before the House is a new proposal to overcome one on the main hurdles facing the legislation — formation of commissions to handle redistribution in each province.

Transport Minister Pickersgill, guiding the redistribution through the Commons, suggested to the House Tuesday that the speaker of the Commons be given the task of pick ing two of the three persons in each province who would redraw riding boundaries on the basis of the 1961 census.

The original bill designated the leader of the government and opposition leader to select one member each for the provincial commissions.

The federal representation commissioner, now Nelson Castonguay, would sit on all commissions and the chairman of each commission would be appointed by the chief justice of each province.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker asked Tuesday that consideration of Mr. Pickersgill suggestion be put off until today to allow MPs time to study it. The House gave unanimous agreement.

The formula for picking the commissions is a major roadblock for the legislation. The other hinges on the amount of difference to be permitted in population of rural and urban ridings.

Mr. Pickersgill said making the speaker responsible for the commission selections might end the impasse.

China Appears to Have Soviet Regime Over Barrel

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP News Analyst

China's team in Moscow seems to have the new Soviet regime over a barrel in the struggle over ideological direction world communism will take.

Premier Chou En-lai and his delegation found a concession from the Kremlin in return for extending the current chilly truce in the dispute. From the strong bargaining position, China appears to have forced the Kremlin to back away from its plans for a December meeting of international Communist leaders to prepare for a world meeting.

Instead, there are to be Soviet-Chinese talks in Peking early next year. But in the long run, this concession means little.

Luxembourg Changes Rulers

LUXEMBOURG (AP)—Grand Duke Jean today became the first man to rule Luxembourg in 46 years.

The 43-year-old grand duke succeeded his mother, Grand Duchess Charlotte, who abdicated after ruling her tiny country of 330,000 people for 45 years. It was the longest reign of any living European monarch.

In a quiet ceremony at the grand ducal palace, the 68-year-old grand duchess signed the abdication decree. She had announced her retirement because of failing health.

Thousands cheered wildly as the new grand duke and his wife, Belgian Princess-Charlotte, sister of Belgium's King Baudouin, walked on a red carpet from the palace to the nearby Parliament Building to take the oath.

Luxembourg is one of Europe's most prosperous countries, with no unemployed.

Indonesian Tells Aussie Premier White Domination of Asia to End

JAKARTA (AP) — Indonesian Foreign Minister Subandrio in a warning to Australian Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies said today that the policies of clear development shows that white capitalist domination in Asia will be eventually eradicated.

Subandrio's warning was prompted by Menzies' decision to introduce conscription and take other defence measures because of the Indonesia threat to Malaysia.

Subandrio, speaking at the installation of a civil defence unit, urged Menzies to "seriously study the growth of Asian peoples and take into consideration the development of their strength in five or 10 years."

He warned Menzies the time has passed when Australia could decide the fate of Asian peoples. "There is no other way for Menzies but to adjust himself and foster friendship with Asian peoples," he said. "The alternative is for Australia to be a hostile terms with Asians."

Reliable sources said today that the views and opinions of all British embassy personnel are leaving Indonesia as a precautionary measure because of the Malaysia crisis. About 10 families are affected.

Leave Neighbors Alone, Rusk Tells China

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk says that unless Communist China decides to leave its neighbors alone in Southeast Asia "there is trouble ahead."

"We have made it very clear and we are not going to pull away and leave Southeast Asia to be overrun . . . ," he said.

Rusk gave the warning Wednesday night in an interview recorded for a Columbia Broadcasting System report on "the United States and the two Chinas."

Rusk disclosed no basic changes in U.S. policy on China.

Rusk, expressing deep disappointment with the Peking regime, said the U.S. opposition to the Chinese government has "nothing to do with our basic attitude toward the Chinese people."

Rusk said arms reduction talks with China are not "on the immediate horizon." He noted that there is a need for progress in disarmament talks already under way in Geneva.

Reminded that France has indicated willingness to join China in a summit meeting on disarmament, Rusk pointed out that France has a chair at the Geneva talks "which she has not occupied."

As for the view of some Western Allies that if Communist China were admitted to the United Nations she would be easier to deal with, Rusk said, "I am very doubtful about that. The first place, the UN is not a reform school."

Rusk said ambassadorial talks with the Chinese in Warsaw have given the U.S. a clear picture of Peking thinking and "we do not like what we found out."

He reaffirmed that the United States has no intention of turning over 11,000,000 free people on Formosa to the mainland Chinese regime.

Atom Sub Raises Japs' Ire

By KEVIN GARRY

SASEBO (Reuters) — Police today clashed with thousands of demonstrators throughout Japan protesting the arrival of the first U.S. nuclear - powered submarine to the country.

The 2,250-ton Sea Dragon crossed its way through heavy rain into the U.S. naval base at Sasebo and set off a wave of left-wing protest.

While 1,800 police dealt with some 2,000 socialists and students outside the base here, demonstrators in Tokyo broke the windows of police armored cars and blocked traffic on main streets.

National police estimated about 27,000 left-wingers staged anti - Sea Dragon demonstrations in 23 other Japanese cities today.

The demonstrations at Sasebo when the submarine arrived early today finished well before the strength of the police. They arrested 15 students who tried repeatedly to break the 10-deep police lines 200 yards from the base's main gate.

Nine persons were reported injured in the Sasebo demonstrations.

OFFICIALLY WELCOMED

The mayor of Sasebo, Japanese naval officers and U.S. Embassy officials were aboard the Sea Dragon when she moved up the narrow channel to the skipper, Cmdr. Dallas Guthe, 37, of Pawling, N.Y.

The officially-announced purpose of the visit was to provide shore leave for the crew of the nuclear-powered vessel.

The Sea Dragon was commissioned five years ago and has since sailed 140,000 miles, mostly under water.

Guthe said he had taken no special precautions here that he had not taken on other ports which had included Hong Kong and Naha, Okinawa, in the past months.

Guthe told a Japanese questioner: "The reactor is still running right now."

Meanwhile, as the rain slackened, the demonstrators outside the base's gate kept up a barrage of chanted slogans as they stood and occasionally sat down in front of multiple lines of police.

Many of the demonstrators wore crash helmets which prompted one American official to say: "It looks as if they may mean business later on."

But Washington officials have pointed out the Sea Dragon and other attack-type subma-rines in the Pacific Fleet which may call in the country are normally not armed with nuclear-tipped weapons. They presumably will be in the more distant future.

Rhodesia High Court Orders Release of 17 Nationalists

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesia's high court handed Prime Minister Ian Smith's white government a sharp setback today, ruling that African nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo and 16 other Africans are being detained illegally in Gwelo jail.

Chief Justice Sir Hugh Beadle and two other judges agreed that the Preventive Detention Act under which the 17 Africans were held is inconsistent with the constitution's declaration of rights.

The court ruled that the government's orders jailing the men abroad was cancelled.

Nkomo and his associates will not be released immediately however. The judges ordered their order until Nov. 20 to give the government time to appeal to the Privy Council in London.

Recent threats by Smith to grab independence under a unilateral declaration have split his country's white population. SUnder the 1961 constitution, independence for Rhodesia requires an act of the British Parliament. The British government wants to assure the Negro majority of ultimate power before giving the territory independence.

Most white Rhodesians are of British stock, retaining close ties with Britain. Their homes are decorated with pictures of the Queen; they hold British passports.

A unilateral declaration would make one feel like a traitor to the Queen," said one businessman.

Deadlock Over Peacekeeping Costs Unbroken

U. S. Willing to Settle Dispute in Many Ways

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union's UN colleagues has dismissed as "empty" President Johnson's overture to resolve the deadlock over financing of UN peacekeeping activities.

Johnson in a message Wednesday said the United States is willing to resolve the U.S.-Soviet dispute "in any number of possible ways . . . consistent with the UN charter."

Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko told reporters that Johnson's statement was "an empty thing" and that his government would not budge from its position.

The Soviet Union refuses to pay $52,600,000 in arrears for The Congo and Middle East peacekeeping operations. It charges the operations are illegal because they were approved by the General Assembly rather than the Security Council where the Soviet Union has indicated it might quit the United Nations if it deprived of its vote.

After a meeting with UN Secretary-General U Thant, Fedorenko referred reporters to a statement from his government Saturday which released the Soviet position. It also said if the "colonialists" were allowed to use the UN charter nor their own interests, the Soviet Union would have to "review its attitude towards the United Nations and all its activities."

The United States also has threatened to withhold its annual pledge to UN programs financed by voluntary contributions if the Soviets refuse to pay. Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, has called the threat blackmail.

AGREE TO FLIGHT

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain has agreed to carry out free of charge the relief and resettlement of about 900 Danish troops in Cyprus, a UN peacekeeping force in Cyprus, an authoritative source said here on Wednesday night. The RAF will fly back to Denmark the troops to be relieved by Irish troops as the Danish forces who are to take their place. The British decision to help fly the Danish troops was taken in response to a request from UN headquarter.

Red Anti-Aircraft Guns Hamper Efforts to Assist Flood Victims

SAIGON (AP) — Communist anti-aircraft fire and heavy rain hampered efforts today to airlift thousands of flood victims in Viet Nam's major flood disaster.

"Neither the weather nor the Viet Cong promise much is the way of a letup," said an American spokesman.

More than 1,000 persons have been reported drowned in flood waters that have surged through 10 provinces.

Many were caught in flood waters that burst out of the mountains in Guang Tin province. Other deaths were reported in coastal Binh Dinh province.

Some U.S. planes have flown into Saigon from Okinawa and Clark Air Base in the Philippines with supplies.

West of Saigon, Communist guerrillas ambushed a government infantry column on its way to a hamlet under attack, killing 26 troops and wounding 23.

The Vietnamese news agency published a message of support from President Johnson to Premier Tran Van Huong, who took over the government two weeks ago.

But despite support from the armed forces and the United States, Huong's position appeared shaky. Students were still talking of demonstrations against his government if he does not order a cabinet reshuffle by Friday, and Buddhist leaders said their attitude toward the government was one of "wait and see."

More Idle Due Auto Layoffs

OTTAWA (CP)—Auto industry layoffs triggered a 40,000 increase in unemployment of 258,000 between mid-September and mid-October.

A joint report today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the labor department put the mid-October jobless rate at 3.7 per cent of the labor force. It was 3.1 per cent in September and 3.9 in October of 1963.

Total employment rose at 6,740,000, down 60,000 from September. The drop occurred largely from the seasonal dip in farm jobs but was bigger than usual because of the auto industry layoffs.

The DBS labor estimates are based on a sample survey of 36,000 households during the week ended Oct. 17.

FACTORY JOBLESS

The job picture in brief, with estimates in thousands:

	Oct. Sept.	Oct.
Labor force	6,982 6,972	6,843
Employed	6,724 6,734	6,585
Unemployed	258 218	265

In the regional breakdown, Quebec and Ontario showed the largest increase in unemployment rates. It was 5.1 per cent in Quebec, compared with 4.3 the previous month, and 2.9 per cent in Ontario, up from 2.2.

Unemployment rates for other regions, with the September comparison bracketed: Atlantic 5.6 (5.4), Prairies 1.9 (1.6) and British Columbia 4.3 (3.9).

Adjusted for seasonal patterns, the national rate was five per cent.

SHOWS ADVANCE

Employment showed a substantial gain in the year-to-year comparison, up by 138,000 or 1.8 per cent. For non-farm jobs the increase was 153,000, or 2.8 per cent, most of it in manufacturing industries.

The number of jobs rose in all regions except Quebec where there was little change. Biggest job increase was in B.C. which had a 4.3-per-cent gain.

The report said the increase in the female labor force slowed down in October after the sharp expansion of 1963 and early 1964. On the year, it was up 48,000 compared with a 73,000 increase in the male labor force.

Pilot Collapses After Landing 64 Passengers

NEW YORK (AP) — A pilot flying a jet airliner into international Airport with 64 passengers from England Wednesday night, then collapsed and died in the cockpit.

Kazimiers Fraser, 50, pilot of the British Overseas Airways Corporation Boeing 707 had made a beautiful landing, said co-pilot Michael King.

King took over the controls while other crew members vainly administered oxygen to Fraser, who had a heart attack while awaiting taxiing instructions. King steered the plane to the ramp where the passengers left, unaware of the incident.

Reduce Herds in Fear Of Shortage of Feed

Lack of adequate rainfall during the past summer resulting in less than expected hay yields, has prompted many livestock men in the Quinte district to reduce their herds so they will have enough feed to last out the coming winter.

Local livestock men say that herd reduction is fairly general in the area.

And in some instances the animals are being sold at less than top condition with result that farmers are having to take depressed prices.

An official at the Belleville Livestock Sales at Belleville confirmed that the herd reduction was quite general, while local cattle buyer Mike Levine said many cattlemen were finding there was insufficient grass to finish cattle properly before selling.

NO COMPLETE SELL-OUTS

As a result rather than buy expensive feed to fit cattle properly for market, many farmers were selling off part of their herds earlier than anticipated.

A Canadian Press wire report from Ottawa yesterday said that many livestock men in Eastern Ontario were having to completely dispose of their herds because of feed shortage.

Mr. Levine doubted, however, that there were any complete sell-outs in this area.

"It's serious enough here, but we are not in the fringe of the drought area farther east," he said.

This is also the feeling of Ivan Bell, agricultural representative for Prince Edward County. Mr. Bell said while many farmers have sold off a few head, he had not heard of any cattlemen selling out completely.

"We have our problems in the county because of low water supply, but they are not insurmountable," he said.

With wells drying up many farmers in the county were having to draw water for their stock Mr. Bell said.

QUITE A PROBLEM

And for farmers with large herds this was admitted to be quite a problem.

A milking cow in full production will drink as much as 25 to 30 gallons if given all she required.

A Hereford beef steer on the other hand, depending on its size, will drink between eight to 16 gallons a day.

Because of the low water conditions and dry wells many farmers are drawing water this week from Lake Ontario.

Many truckers with 1,000 gallon tank trucks haul water daily from the water filtration plant at Belleville while countless farmers draw their own water supply.

And it isn't only farmers who are having trouble with their water supply.

Wells of bay shore residents are also low and going dry and because of the low bay level residents pumping water from the bay are having to extend their lines.

Mathematically gifted high school students from Belleville, Trenton and Picton, will spend Saturday at Queen's University in Kingston to discover where their talents might lead them.

It will be the first "Mathematics Day" ever held at Queen's.

Nearly 1,000 students from all parts of Ontario and from Quebec are expected to attend.

Twelve students from Moira Secondary School in Belleville, along with four teachers will take in the "math" day at Queen's. Quinte Secondary School will send 11 students and four teachers.

At Queen's, the students will meet some of the university's mathematicians who are working to improve mathematics programs in Canadian high schools, will be given an objective view of the possibilities of future study at Queen's.

Their day at the University will open with a talk by Professor A. Coleman, head of the mathematics department, who will discuss the application of some mathematical principles to university studies. Professor E. D. Cornell, director of Queen's computing centre, will tell the students of methods used in programming a computer.

Nearly Went Down With Ship Says Officer

By GERRY McNEIL

QUEBEC (CP)—Gerald Lockley, 37, of Owen Sound, Ont., an officer on the 18,000-ton Lucille Hall since the $8,000,000 ore carrier went into service in 1961, told a formal inquiry Wednesday how he nearly went down with the ship Sept. 5.

The vessel was hardly its 726-foot length from shore, being towed in stern-first by a tug in an attempt to beach it after a collision with the 11,000-ton Greek freighter Apollonia, when it struck bottom.

"There was an awful roar," Lockley recalled. "It was sort of like an explosion. The ship lurched up, and I could see the wheelhouse disappearing.

"This rumbling and then the explosion . . . I jumped off the starboard stern into the water.

Lockley and five others were plucked from the dark, foggy St. Lawrence about 45 miles north of Quebec by the tug.

Lockley and first mate Stanley Palmer, 32, Gaspe, Que., told the transport department inquiry the men were all volunteers.

The collision with the Apollonia threw Lockley to the deck. Palmer told him to check the after-cargo doors, but Lockley had to back off after getting a blast of hot steam in the face.

The captain told Palmer: to ask the Apollonia, then locked in the pilothouse, to keep way, age, to stop backing up. The motion was drawing the ships together.

Locking meanwhile helped get lifeboats ready. Passengers were put aboard with some crew members.

City Population Is Now Over 32,000 Mark

Belleville's population is now up over the 32,000 mark.

At least that is the assumption to be gained from assessment department figures in the quarterly administration report of city manager J. B. Reynolds.

At September 30 the assessment department listed the city's population at 31,900, an increase of 1,350 over that of last year. This is an average increase of over 100 per month and puts the current figure over 32,000.

And the assessed property value in the city has grown along with the population.

For the first nine months of the year a total of $2,725,200 in assessment including $1,200, 190 residential, was added to the city roles.

It is estimated that when the roll is balanced the total taxable assessment for 1965 will be approximately $103 million

Dr. Dymond Blames Boards For Hospital Beds Shortage

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Matthew Dymond of Ontario said Wednesday Metropolitan Toronto hospital boards are to blame for bed shortages in their hospitals.

He said the department pays grants for hospital construction and hospital care, "but the initiative for the hospital construction has to come from the hospital boards."

"I warned in 1959 that they were going to have a bed shortage unless they did something about it."

Dr. Dymond was asked to comment on reports that about 2,000 persons, including more than 1,000 cases listed as urgent, are awaiting admission to the city's main hospitals.

Surveys showed that hospitals in Ottawa, Kingston, Hamilton, Windsor, Sault Ste. Marie and London faced similar situations.

HAS DIFFERENT PROBLEM.

Meanwhile, Toronto's new $40,500,000 Riverdale Hospital faced a different problem, Superintendent Dr. George McCracken said 282 of the hospital's 600 beds are not being used because of staff shortages.

The hospital needs 305 more registered nurses, 100 more graduate nursing assistants and has been unable to find them despite extensive recruiting campaigns.

Some figures for hospitals with urgent cases awaiting admission: Kingston General Hospital 335, St. Michael's in Toronto 75, Kingston General 75, Hamilton St. Joseph's 30 and London Royal Victoria 20.

Staff, Students Of Quinte Pay Solemn Tribute

The students and staff of Quinte Secondary School remembered the men of Canada who served in two World Wars and in Korea and paid solemn tribute to those who paid the supreme sacrifice in a service of solemn remembrance held during weekly assembly on November 10.

The service was opened with Sentences of Remembrance by Mr. Laughlen a veteran of the Second World War and the singing of the hymn, 'O God Our Help in Ages Past.' Two readings by Quinte Secondary School students were read: 'Remembrance Day,' read by Lois Kelleher and 'Let Us Pray,' read by Lyn Harrington.

On the stage of the auditorium the school memorial wreath lay before a cross and the Union Jack attended by a uniformed Air Cadet as guard of honor.

After the sounding of the Last Post by Don Bentley, the assembly observed a period of silent meditation before the sounding of Reveille, the service closed with the singing of 'O Canada.'

Resignation Of Minister Is Accepted

CHARING CROSS, Ont. (CP) The executive of Kent Presbytery of the United Church of Canada accepted Wednesday the resignation of Rev. Russel. D. Horsburgh, pastor of Park Street United Church in Chatham.

Mr. Horsburgh was remanded in custody Tuesday until Nov. 16 for sentence after juvenile court Judge W. H. Fox found him guilty of five charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency. Mr. Horsburgh, who was acquitted on five similar charges, has indicated he will appeal the conviction.

In accepting Mr. Horsburgh's resignation, effective immediately, Rev. F. G. Risdon, chairman of the Kent Presbytery, said in a prepared statement: that the clergyman's relationship with the presbytery and conference is "still under review."

Mr. Risdon said the executive has declared the Park Street pastoral charge vacant and has appointed Rev. C. R. Praskett of St. Andrew's United Church, Chatham, the interim chairman of the charge.

Ford Plant At Oakville Faces Layoffs

OAKVILLE (CP)—A second Canadian auto company is facing layoffs because of strikes in the United States.

Ford of Canada said Wednesday it hopes to be able to keep turning out cars this week, but after that shortages of vital parts imported from the U.S. will mean layoffs for at least some of the 4,900 workers on the assembly lines.

The truck production lines, where 1,100 men work, will be able to keep going until next week, the company said.

Ford said its engine and stamping plants at Windsor will continue scheduled work at least temporarily, with production being sacrificed.

WILL BE AFFECTED

But a spokesman added that if the U.S. walkouts continue for long the Windsor operations will be affected.

The U.S. strikes started last July by disagreements on local issues in nine points. These supply many key parts for Canadian plants.

The possible layoffs came two weeks after General Motors of Canada Ltd. laid off 3,000 production following a one-month shutdown caused by a strike at its parent company in the U.S.

The GM shutdown affected more than 10,000 workers in Oshawa and six GM feeder plants.

Ford had scheduled 3,800 cars and 730 trucks for production this week. Total production this year to date is 130,378 cars and 31,296 trucks.

Ontario Powerless to Act Against Wave of Hate Articles

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is powerless to act against a wave of hate literature spreading across the province, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Wednesday.

He said in an interview that under present law it would be almost impossible to win a conviction against disseminators of literature attacking Jews, Negroes and so-called Communists.

And, the attorney - general said, it would be difficult to add teeth to the relevant sections of the Criminal Code without infringing on the traditional right of freedom of expression.

Mr. Wishart said that although the hate literature could not be considered obscene in terms of law, he considers it "obscene, in my thinking, dirty."

He said his department came to these conclusions after a thorough examination of all hate literature seized by police during the last year.

The attorney-general said Ontario is anxious to initiate successful prosecutions against hatemongers and he had outlined this viewpoint in discussions with federal Justice Minister Guy Favreau. However, it was outside his power to make suggestions to Mr. Favreau.

Soldier Artist Changes Style With Success

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — Determined to change the style of royal portraits, artist Alister Maynard has eminently succeeded.

His portrait of Queen Elizabeth shows her with a pretty face, but the body of a lion.

The Queen's son, Prince Andrew, 4, is pictured tweaking the lion's tail.

The artist, a retired lieutenant colonel of the famed Seaforth Highlanders, also is a former executive of the Council of Industrial Design's Scottish committee.

Said Maynard:

"I just wanted to go away from the stuffy official portrait style and produce something with a bit of gaiety and character."

WHY A LION?

But why the Queen with a body of a lion?

"I wanted to combine the idea of her regality and constitutional position with the warm, humorous family flavor which she brings to the position."

The artist said his painting of the Queen Mother shows her with the body of a duck sitting on a copy of the book, The Compleat Angler by Sir Isaac Walton.

"I shall do the Duke of Edinburgh in a helicopter," he stated, adding that he'll exhibit the portraits in a one-man show soon.

DIES OF BURNS

TORONTO (CP) — A 68-year-old man, who fell asleep in a public steam bath Sept. 30, died Wednesday in hospital from burns and pneumonia. Robert McCoy was found lying on the floor by another customer an hour and 45 minutes after he went into the steam room.

Legion Praised For Work in Community

TRENTON — Last night the Commander of the Northern NORAD Region, Air Vice Marshal J. S. Harvey, praised the members of Trenton Branch 110 of the Royal Canadian Legion and their Ladies' Auxiliary in a timely speech at the annual Remembrance Day dinner with 300 Legionnaires in attendance.

"Your record in youth work and community service is outstanding, the high-ranking officer, himself a member of the branch told the impressed gathering of veterans. And you are fortunate to possess the finest Ladies' Auxiliary I've ever come across. You owe them a great deal," he said.

Commenting on events concerning people of the world today the commander warned that China's recent explosion of an atomic device would endanger the whole world unless the attitude of the Chinese communists changed.

While the 20th century has produced fantastic wonders in technology and science all advancements seem to thrive on unhappiness, he explained. He expressed an opinion that the leaders of the western alliance have been compelled to feel their way cautiously since President Kennedy's death. In contrast he noted that countries of the west enjoyed unprecedented prosperity and unless something unforeseen happened new signs had appeared to encourage hope for mankind's survival and ultimate conquest of space.

Why This Limit?

The third edition of the Canada Pension Plan is now before the House of Commons.

Of course, there is no guarantee there will not be another revision.

As of now, though, it is proposed to tie the old age pensions part of the pension package to the cost-of-living index. In other words, while the additional pensions to be provided by the new contributory scheme will not vary, the present universal old age pensions will increase if the cost of living climbs, starting in 1968.

It would seem unlikely that any revision would lessen this small concession to those who may be wholly dependent on this pension.

There may be some demand, though, that the maximum annual increase be raised.

It is now proposed that old age pensions remain the same if the cost of living declines, remains the same, or increases by less than one per cent in a year.

There can be little quarrel with this. A drastic reduction in the cost of living is highly improbable, and the government would look pretty stupid if it insisted on taking away 75 cents from the people trying to live on $75 a month. Thus the fact that there is no provision for decreasing the pension is understandable.

If the cost of living goes up one per cent, but less than two per cent, the pension will be increased by 75 cents. This is one per cent of the pension now paid, so this increase makes sense.

If the cost of living goes up two per cent, the pension will rise by $1.50, or two per cent. But no matter how high the cost of living may climb, the pension will not be increased by more than $1.50 in any year.

This could be grossly unfair to pensioners. If inflation gets out of control, and the cost of living soars ten per cent or more in a single year, why should those who have the least be the only ones who have no hope of seeing their income keep pace with prices?

The obvious answer, we suppose, is that this curb is necessary because an increase in pensions would be inflationary and because there is no provision for any future reduction if the pension were raised and the inflationary spiral was remedied by government action. But all increases in wages, salaries and profits would also be inflationary, which answers the first part of this argument. As for the second objection, it would be easy to write into the law a provision for withdrawal any annual increase over a certain amount if the reason for this increase were later eliminated.

Wages in the Maritimes

Henry Landry, the New Democratic candidate in Monday's by-election in the New Brunswick riding of Westmoreland, said his party was appalled by the fact that workers, farmers and fishermen in the Maritimes earn less than their counterparts in other sections of Canada. He said the NDP will press for equal standards of wages and work.

This almost sounds as if he believes equality could be achieved by government decree—or by converting employers to the belief that justice demands it.

This, of course, is absurd, but perhaps no more absurd than an orthodox view of the situation—which would be that higher wages were necessary in other parts of Canada to adjust the supply of labor to the regional demand.

Unfortunately, as most reasonable men are now aware, this theory does not work in practice. The departure of workers to other areas where wages are higher does lessen the supply of labor seeking a limited number of jobs, but at the same time the smaller number of consumers also lessens demand and the net result can just as easily be a widening as a closing of the gap between the wage levels in the different areas of Canada.

It is fortunate that the average Maritimer is a stubborn individual with a deep love for his native region. Otherwise the Maritimes would have suffered an even heavier drain on their manpower than has occurred and the standard of living there would have been even further below that of "Upper Canada" than it is.

Tax concessions, which have been instituted by the present Liberal regime, appear the only feasible way to promote an early solution. Eventually, the natural resources of the Maritimes and the growing population of the world are certain to produce a correction. But Maritimers should not have to wait for this natural development. They deserve aid—even more than they are getting—yet this aid must be such that it does not flout economic laws. The solution will not be easy.

To Your Good Health
Automatic Nerve System Affected by Our Emotions

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: When I become nervous, embarrassed or very tense, I break out in a rash that resembles hives on chest, face, upper arms and neck.

My skin becomes blotchy and I am very self-conscious. As soon as I start relaxing the rash begins to disappear, usually in 10 to 15 minutes, depending on circumstances.

Do you have any suggestions? — C. R.

I wish you had mentioned your age. A trouble like this is quite common among young people but tends to disappear with maturity and self-confidence get over blushing.

Sometimes there is a second phase of the same sort of nervous reaction, around the menopause.

Your physician may be able to help.

You put your own finger on the key to the condition: The hives or blotches appear when you are tense or upset.

Remember that we have two main types of nervous systems. One is the voluntary system (which we use to control our actions. The other is the autonomic system which operates quite independently of our will.

The autonomic system is affected by our emotions, psychological factors and some other stimuli. It raises "gooseflesh" when we are cold, makes us perspire when it is hot, makes us shiver, or our scalp tingle with fear or excitement. Our heart speeds up and glands pour extra adrenalin into our systems in time of danger.

And among other things, the autonomic system controls the blood vessels. In some individuals the nervous system is more sensitive in this regard. Anyway, that is the general explanation for blushing and similar manifestations, such as your nervous blotches.

As you learn not to let unimportant things upset your emotions, your autonomic system will react less vigorously.

It is possible also to give medication that will lessen the blush reaction — drugs of the belladonna group and others that quiet this special nervous system. These can be taken before any event that might cause anxiety. Unexpected situations might, of course, still catch you unprepared.

Finally, overactivity of the thyroid gland can predispose to this symptom. But if that were the problem, there would be signs such as nervousness, fast pulse, and other indications pointing to that factor.

Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter has a terrific case of impetigo. I have had so much different advice on how to care for it that I am really confused. Nobody seems to agree on the same type of treatment. — Mrs. F. F.

Impetigo is a staphylococcus infection of the skin. The usual treatment is with antibiotics, which, of course, must be prescribed by your physician. Do as he says.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: At what age should one take vitamins? — Mrs. H. W.

At any age when you are not getting enough of the right ones in your food — which is another way of saying that, except for cases of certain diseases, or highly restricted diets, you can get enough vitamins so long as you eat a properly balanced diet.

Taking vitamin in pill form is useless at any rate wasteful if you already are eating and cooking properly. The most commonly destroyed vitamin in cooking is vitamin C.

* * *

"Vitamin starvation" is possible even if you eat a lot. In order to check your diet to make sure you are getting necessary nourishment, write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 136, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of the pamphlet, "Vitamins — The Alphabet of Health." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Curious Byproduct

Edmonton Journal

A curious byproduct of the growth of nationalism has been a correspondingly sharp alcoholic consumption and picoholism.

This is the report of Mr. Archer Tongue, director of the International Bureau Against Alcoholism. In an interview at Frankfurt, Germany, Mr. Tongue said that drinking has become a mark of prestige in new countries in Africa and Asia.

Strictly Personal
Old Statesman Toothless Politician

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: The pride of the Don Juan type of man might possibly be dampened if he ever reflected that if other men devoted as much time and energy to conquests as he does, they would be equally successful; for, if there is one thing that is sure, it is that the world is full of women waiting to be taken advantage of.

Everybody is for "competition" until he is big enough to gobble up his competitors and everybody is against "monopoly" until he is big enough to call it "public service."

A foreign acquaintance of mine, visiting America for the first time, and travelling extensively in various through our cities, confided to me before leaving that it is extraordinary for such a large percentage of the male population to be named "Bill," "Buster," "Mac," and "Hey."

What the disputatious personality fails to grasp is the truth of Bulwer - Lytton's comment that "The real spirit of conversation consists in building on another man's observation, not overturning it."

Our physical habits are more irritating than giving false emphasis to a statement by ending with the word "period" — viz., "I don't care to go, period."

In most cases, what we call an "old statesman" is simply a politician who has lost his teeth and mumbles platitudes where he used to shout them.

Lives there a wife of so noble a stripe,

Who never has sniffed, "If you like that type"?

The most pathetic snobs are those who furiously imagine that they achieve some kind of status by the insignia on the matchbooks they carry.

Organizations for "the defense of freedom" remind me of a pungent remarker in the British magazine Encounter some time back; Freedom, the editorial said, "is not something which has to be safeguarded, but rather something which has to be extended. If one tries to limit it, only defending the freedoms already established, one unavoidably finds oneself slipping backward into repression."

The more devious a woman's tactics, the more obvious become her motives; if subtlety is carried far enough, it ends in self-disclosure.

If you enjoy outrageous puns as much as I do, you may care to share the remark of a friend who returned from India becoming the absence of such delicacies as hot dogs and salami: "When I go back," he said, "I'm going to open a shop in the capital — and call it the "New Delhicatessen."

Ottawa Offbeat
Public Too Well-Informed, No More Sure Safe Seats

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — While the Commons now seems to be slowly recovering from its recent attack of election shakes, the Honorable Members really never will be comfortable as long as this uncertain minority Parliament staggers along, bumping blindly from one crisis to the next.

Is their secret hearts they know, perhaps through little more concrete than political instinct, that if the election does not come very early in the New Year — and the betting now is that it won't — then come it must next spring, summer or even fall.

And so, almost all the Honorable Members are worrying far more about home than about this House.

For while they are reconciled that individually they can not do much about the House — that being in the hands of the Prime Minister, party leaders — they know that if they want to work, there is plenty they can do about home.

Almost all of them subscribe to the proposition enunciated by John R. Matheson, Liberal MP for the Eastern Ontario constituency of Leeds, that in the particular political circumstances, nobody has what used to be affectionately known as a "safe" seat.

John Matheson is Prime Minister Pearson's "flagman" perhaps the one MP who did most to promote the proposed new Maple Leaf flag — and his uncertainty in the political future might be due in part to his constituency lying deep in the heart of what is generally regarded as "Red Ensign Country."

WINDS OF CHANGE

Oddly, the only Members who seem to have much political self-confidence are those of the Western Conservatives — "The Cowboys," as the Liberals call them — whose ridings are happily calm are snuggly safe in the northern reaches of the Prairies.

This is "Diefenland," as they possessively know it, the very heartland of the former Prairie Prime Minister's almost private political preserve.

But except for these favored, or, as you may prefer to regard them, over-confident ones, all other Ridings in the House are trotting about the future.

John Matheson's woes don't all fly from the flagpole to which he has nervously had to rally to nail the new Maple Leaf emblem.

What bothers him and most other Honorable Members is the realization in full of how sweeping have been the changes wrought by the last four Federal elections.

This has been a period of a little less than 10 years, but it has seen the urbanization, at least in some degree, of almost all of the 265 constituencies except, of course, those dwindling few that have yet varying and over the northern frontier fringes.

Bluntly, the prime minister's "flagman" puts it this way:

"There just are no more robes and rubes" — those farmers who are simply have become politically sophisticated."

He supports the transformation, in terms of elections, began back in the 1957 campaign.

CHANGING CANADA

Farming has changed.

In many parts of the nation, the small operator who makes his cows, worked a quarter half-section or three farmed around the cities, has either packed away to be a big-scale operator who has been putting agriculture on something approaching a mass production basis.

Industry has changed.

Small plants, and some not so small, do the once - rural landscape, and workers commute daily to jobs on rapidly-improving highway networks.

And, most important of all, education has changed.

The collegiate in the small town has given way to the big district consolidated school in the big central provinces, the "Red" and Eastern areas, and where students enjoy all the advantages, sometimes more, of metro-city education.

"You should see some of these new schools in what used to be farm country," suggests Mr. Matheson. "You should hear their hands. Listen to their debates, see their drama, watch their teams and go on their bus tours.

"These kids do all the things they do in the big city high schools and more, often, I suspect, perhaps doing them a whole lot better.

"This new generation of kids is smart. It has to be because its families are smarter. They all read the papers and magazines delivered daily with their mail, watch TV, drive a car or even two cars and a pickup truck."

This rural-to-urben transformation has happened, with the dramatic suddenness almost of an explosion, in the past 10 years, and it has been pretty well the pattern all across Canada. With it has come great changes in politics and elections.

"The voters are all smart, most of them as smart as you," the way John Matheson sees them, "Riders are no longer any more. So who among us here in this Parliament has a safe seat? You've got no choice — if you want to survive, you've got to get out and work, work, work."

New Theory Of History

HalMax Chronicle-Herald

We have always distrusted theories of history; there are simply too many of them to accept any one as the "true" explanation.

There is the theory of economic determinism, the "great man" theory, enthusiasm for climatic theories, religious and moral theories. There is no end to the speculation as to why man and nations are as they are.

New explanations are advanced with every passing decade. When the prohibition movement was at its height, the fortunes of nations depended on their degree of sobriety. Now we are being told that a civilization only reaches its zenith when it has become a sophisticated user of alcoholic beverages.

This revelation comes from the British Wine and Spirits Association, featured by the Labor government's new 15 per cent surcharge on imported spirits. The association says,

"The moderate enjoyment of wines and spirits has been a feature of civilized living down from the dawn of history. . ."

How now, Professor Toynbee?

This Fellow Is Real Nut

St. Thomas Times-Journal

We heard the other day of a fellow who must be a real nut.

This character drove the back roads on his vacation and on days didn't travel more than 100 miles.

He even got out of the car now and then and took time to walk a while when he found something that was especially interesting.

He claimed he enjoyed it and that other people would do well to get better than when he left.

Well, it takes all kinds. And other people would do well to make a big thing out of seeing something interesting on his vacation instead of staying out there on the turnpike where any real vacationer belongs, it's a free country and what's to stop him?

It makes you wonder, though,

'We Will Remember Them' Lieut.-Col. A. Duffy Told Veterans at Legion Banquet

RECEIVES LIFE MEMBERSHIP—Former Branch 99 Legion member, Christopher Leggat, was presented with a life membership and citation by members of Branch 99. E. Liddle, left, is seen receiving presentation on behalf of Mr. Leggat, from R. Kirby, Branch 99 president.

"With the going down of the sun and in the morning — we will remember them."

Lieut.-Col. A. Duffy said, "Let us not hide our pride in a bushel basket. Let us stand up and shout for Canada. Let us be proud of our achievements.

"The new generation," he said, "strove mightily to prove themselves worthy successors of their fathers. In so doing, Canada became a full fledged nation of the world — one that fought its own battles, paved its own way, thus contributing its wealth to her sister nations.

"Canada then, has become a respected advisor within the councils of the world," the speaker said.

"Today," he continued, "the young men of our armed forces keep the peace in troubled spots throughout the world. We provide for the people of Canada in the greatest welfare legislation in the world from the cradle to the grave.

"We arrest from what was thought to be an impossible terrain and climate, untold wealth," he continued, "and today we share with the unfortunates of the world Canada is the land of opportunity of 20 million people and millions yet to come.

LET US BE PROUD

"Look at our own communities," he said, "let us teach our young people to be proud of Canada by telling them about our achievements. The only way we have failed our country and our young people is that we have hid our light under a basket. We not only don't teach them about what has been accomplished, but we have failed to show them that duty, service and patriotism are the great virtues of our country.

"I know we did today," he said (referring to the Armistice Day Memorial Service held on Wednesday morning), "but we must everyday, in the home, in our schools and in public."

Col. Duffy continued, "as an organization let us celebrate our country's 100th anniversary with a project that will teach our young people loyalty, duty and patriotism; that they may have an aim in life so that the great sacrifices of those we know today, will not have been in vain."

In closing the speaker said, "in heaven's name let us stand up and be proud of Canada and loud, that our young people will know that duty, service and patriotism are the worthy and great virtues wherever lies real achievement."

During the program, Major Veterans-at-Arms Archdeacon A. S. McConnell presented a memorial service to those men who gave their lives during two Bloody World Wars on altar of sacrifice. Following Archdeacon McConnell's presentation two minutes of silence was observed while in the background Glen Crawford sounded "Last Post" and "Reveille."

KEMGER HONORED

Previous to Col. Duffy's address, president of the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 99, Richard Kirby, presented a life membership certificate and citation to Everett Liddle. Mr. Liddle received the presentation on behalf of Chris Leggat who now resides in Victoria, B.C.

Words of welcome were extended by the president, Mr. Kirby who said, "unless we think and Remembrance Day each day of the year, then our cause is lost."

Others who brought greetings to the members and veterans included His Worship Mayor Jack R. Ellis on behalf of the city of Belleville, and Major Cochrane, representing the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

During the evening's program toasts were proposed to veterans of the First and Second World Wars.

The evening's activities concluded with a film entitled "Field of Sacrifice."

White Cane Club Enjoys Entertainment

On Tuesday evening the White Cane Club met at the Kiwanis Centre for an evening of recreation and good fellowship. President Helen Wardsheap extended a cordial welcome to the members and escorts.

Two minutes' silence was observed in memory of Mrs. R. S. Baverstock, followed by silent remembrance of the war dead.

Pat Baverstock thanked the club members for flowers sent, and for expressions of sympathy extended to her family during their recent bereavement.

Arlie Scott read the names of members celebrating birthdays in November.

The members participated in a lively game of table bowling. The ladies obtaining the highest score were Doris Lloyd and Pat Baverstock. Harvey St. Onge and Charlie Dolan were the winners for the men's team.

The highlight of the evening was the entertainment provided by the father and son team, Harry and Darrell Ward. The toe-tapping music played by these gentlemen on the banjo and accordion was most enjoyable. To the delight of his fellow members, Harry Ward accompanied Mr. Hoskin and his son, on the piano for several well-known numbers.

George Zimmele thanked the gentlemen for a most enjoyable musical program.

The Kinsmen ladies prepared and served a delicious lunch, for which Vi Waite sincerely thanked them. Helen Ward's laugh thanked the members of Mrs. Mona Club for transportation.

PARIS (Reuters) — Quebec Premier Jean Lesage today conferred with French President de Gaulle attending a luncheon at the Elysee Palace.

The talk centred on developing cultural relations, especially by providing university teachers and an expansion of exchanges in the field of advanced education, official sources said.

Lesage, who earlier this week met French Premier Georges Pompidou, Wednesday announced that France had granted special non-diplomatic status for the Quebec government's general delegation in Paris.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

The Rabbis tell a quaint story. They explain why it was that Cain slew Abel, for the text itself provides no immediate clue. Cain and Abel had the whole world before them and yet the first child became the first murderer. In a fanciful moral teaching, those sages explained that Cain and Abel agreed at first to divide the world in half, each taking his rightful share. When Cain announced to Abel that he would build a temple to God in his part of the world, Abel promptly proposed to do the same: each claimed God for himself. So, Cain rose up and slew Abel — in the name of "his" god. The Story, obviously, echos down to our time.

ESSENTIAL EQUALITY

Perhaps for this reason, it is necessary for the Bible to recount another narrative to drive home the point that was missed. In the story of Babel, the Bible is very explicit: "And the whole earth was of one language and of one speech." When this happened, men began to feel that they had a monopoly on truth, and so they thought to build a tower with its top in Heaven.

Again the vision of man's essential equality was ignored. For only "they" were to build the divine tower; the "others" could not share. So God scattered them over the face of the earth, each with a different language, some with different creeds. The story of the Tower of Babel points to the great paradox of human existence: while we are all made of the same stuff, God wants us to sense our uniqueness. Far from destroying difference, God builds His world upon it. The monolith, not the iconoclast, is the intruder upon the heavenly design. Mankind is one, but men are many.

DEMOCRATIC DREAM

The spiritual meaning of the democratic dream is caught up in such a vision as this — and it is firmly re-inforced in still another Biblical teaching: Micah said it: "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation. Neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree. And none shall make them afraid. For let all the peoples walk each one in the name of its God. . ."

The West is in the process of losing Asia and Africa to its democratic idea not because it lacks material strength, but because it has failed to remember the meaning of its Biblical message. The color line which has been drawn in some democratic countries is a rope about their necks — and, all of this, in the name of the divine mission of western democracy. Clearly, we must alter this thinking if we are to win the world in our dream and to our vision. We cannot attract the minds of thoughtful men by mere reliance upon our power and might. The fateful questions upon which the political peace of the world hang are moral questions: Can we abide with men whose God is not our own? Can we learn to seek political reconciliation patiently?

WORLD RELIGION

The color line is closely connected to the problem of the religious line. Christianity is a world religion, but it is not the religion of the world: there are Moslems, Buddhists, Hindus, and themselves neither benighted nor pagan. As long as we of the west continue to speak to them as though only we had a corner on religious truth, as if without Christianity God did not exist — we are in mortal danger of destroying His world. And what is true outside the West is equally true within the West itself. In this hemisphere, Christians predominate, and their numerical strength must not lead them to spiritual arrogance; they need a sense of "noblesse oblige." Here, Catholics, Protestants and Jews need to learn how to live with one another, and with those outside their churches, as equal partners in the pursuit of the vision.

Numbers and statistical strength do not add up to spiritual power. One with God against the world may also be a majority.

Locked Braces Ruins A Romantic Situation

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This may not happen to me again in a million years — and if it does, that's soon enough. But I need to know what to do, just in case.

My boy friend, Robbie, and I have had 11 dates, not counting the times he has come over just to talk. Last night was the night I have been dreaming about for six months. He kissed me goodnight. It turned out to be more like a nightmare than a dream.

ANN LANDERS

Robbie wears braces, and so do I. Somehow our braces got hooked together and it was the most embarrassing thing that has ever happened to me in my whole life.

We were hooped for only a few seconds, but it seemed like an eternity before I was able to jiggle my head and disconnect us. Shall I say something? What can I do to make sure this doesn't happen anymore? — TOMATO FACE.

DEAR TOMATO — Say nothing to Robbie but ask your dentist to check and make sure there are no loose or hookable wires on your braces.

AND P.S. — It just might be that you put too much heart and soul into that goodnight kiss. Cool it, Kiddo.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Do you have a piece of Alcoholics Anonymous or what? You mention this organization so often I wonder why.

Will you tell me a little about A.A.? Who can join? How? Where does the money go and so on? Thank you.—INTERESTED PARTY.

DEAR INTERESTED — Nobody has a piece of Alcoholics Anonymous but a great many people swear by it because A.A. has provided the answer when all else failed.

The purpose of A.A. is to help everybody and anybody who has a drinking problem. It has no ties with any religious group, takes no stand on public issues, and neither attacks nor defends the liquor industry. A.A. is an informal fellowship of men and women who are determined to live without liquor (because they must) and to help others who are also fighting the battle of the bottle.

A.A. has approximately 250,000 members in about 80 countries. To join A.A. you sign nothing, give nothing and promise nothing. The only requirement is a genuine desire to quit drinking. People who are sensitive about being seen at meetings should remember that their affiliation with A.A. gives them infinitely more dignity than their public performances when they were drunk. To "join" simply look in the phone book under Alcoholics Anonymous and find out when and where the next meeting will be held — and go.

Pretty Women Said to Be Malay Spies

JAKARTA (Reuters) – Indonesians have been warned to beware of beautiful young women—whether white, Malay or Chinese.

They may be Malayan spies, authorities said.

Ali Sastroamidjojo, deputy chairman of the Peoples' Consultative Congress, said in a speech that Malaysia was using beautiful women to try to weaken Indonesia's "confrontation" policy against the Malaysian Federation.

He appealed especially to young men to resist the charms of a woman—no matter how beautiful—if they suspected she was an espionage agent.

A leading Jakarta newspaper, Merdeka (Freedom), said a number of these beautiful agents already have been smuggled into the country after being trained in intelligence, methods of flirtation and Indonesian customs.

It said the women's main objective is to seduce high-ranking government officials to gain information, particularly military secrets.

Merdeka claimed trat the women already in operation in Indonesia were Europeans, Malays and Chinese. It said they were smuggled here through Sumatra but did not say whether they entered by air or sea.

Indonesian authorities recently announced that a number of shapely young women had been arrested on the Riau Islands off Singapore and charged with trying to seduce local officials into betraying secrets about Indonesia

Church Groups

ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN W.M.S.

The regular meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Women's Missionary Society was held on November 10th with a good attendance.

Mrs. W. M. Barlow extended a hearty welcome and Mrs. Mantle presided at the piano for the hymns.

The business portion of the meeting consisted of the various reports. It was announced that the bale consisting of new clothing for a nine year old boy had been sent.

Mrs. H. York and Mrs. D. Kane, welcome and welfare committee, reported that they and several members had made many house calls to the sick and shut-ins. Mrs. G. E. Miller brought greetings and good wishes from Mrs. W. D. Walker who is still ill in the hospital, also from St. Columba church.

WORLD ON DOORSTEP

The program, under the able leadership of Mrs. G. E. Miller and prepared by her, was taken from the new study book, with the theme "Mission on Our Doorstep." With the help of her committee, Mrs. G. Bennett, Mrs. V. Weir and Mrs. Barlow, Mrs. Miller expressed the thought that the world is not only on our doorstep, but in our homes, through radio and television and that the gospel is reaching people in every part of the world as never before. She said it was for this reason the Women's Mission Society was formed, over one hundred years ago, and that we must realize the value of meeting together, in Christian fellowship, so that we may help others.

Mrs. V. Weir gave a reading after which Mrs. Mantle and Mrs. Barlow sang a beautiful duet.

Mrs. Miller closed with the thought, Christian living calls for the best.

Women's Institutes

ELDORADO W. I.

The November meeting of the Eldorado and Ramockburn Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. W. Irwin with 16 ladies and 7 children present.

It was decided to take a survey of the community for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Mrs. Franks spoke on education with action. A reading was given by Mrs. Holgate on olden days of Belleville Collegiate. The topic by Mrs. Gerald Blackburn was on education.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Irwin and her assistants.

St. Margaret's Evening Guild Holds Autumn Tea, Bazaar

In a carnival setting depicting the Mardi Gras the Evening Guild of St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church held a delightful tea and bazaar in the church hall, yesterday afternoon. The event was graciously conversed by Mrs. Carlton Miller, while Mrs. Jim Ritchie was responsible for the unique decor.

The bazaar was officially opened by Rev. J. A. Dunlop, rector of the church. Guests were warmly greeted at the door by Mrs. J. A. Dunlop, honorary president and Mrs. R. Rushton, president of the Guild.

ATTRACTIVE DECOR

In keeping with the festive theme there were many multi colored balloons with intertwining licker tape suspended from the ceiling and each of the guest tables bore a miniature golden party hat. The tea table was also most eye-catching with its white linen cloth centred with a scarlet red cushion bearing a replica crown of the queen of the Mardi Gras and flanked with bright red tapers. The silver tea service and colorful accessories completed the attractive setting.

Conveners of the tea room were Mrs. G. Mountford and Mrs. W. F. Roblin, with Mrs. J. Ritchie as hostess. Pouring tea throughout the afternoon were Mrs. Everett Smith, Mrs. William Gorham, Mrs. J. Dobson and Mrs. R. B. DeBois Wright. A number of other ladies all wearing part little party hats served and replenished the tasty refreshments. In charge of duties in the kitchen was Mrs. R. J. McKnight assisted by a group of the members of the Guild.

VARIETY OF SALES GOODS

The various sales booths completely encircled the hall each laden with a bountiful supply of their respective merchandise. Perhaps the most entrancing was the doily togs booth with teenage dolls backgrounding the display each dressed in a different type wardrobe to fit every occasion. Also displayed were two frilly bassinettes to delight any little girl's heart. In this area was the fish pond always a calling card for the young fry and around the corner the parcel post with its many mysterious parcels all prettily wrapped.

A white elephant table had its usual quota of miscellaneous items with a number of patterns also displayed. The apron area was a riot of color with everything imaginable in the line of aprons with two in particular standing out being so appropriate for the fast approaching Yule season made of red broadcloth and large patch pockets bearing a Christmas motif. The novelties table also had a fine array of items so suitable for the forthcoming festivities with centre pieces, Yule logs and fancy candles displayed.

At the children's booth there were all sorts of knitted items including baby sets, warm mitten and bonnet sets, flannelette pyjamas and housecoats and a cute little set made of red corduroy for a little girl of three.

MANY DELICACIES

Located on the platform were the three tables where the edible merchandise could be purchased. The candy table was laden with petite cups and boxes of assorted sweets, while the homecooking table had a generous supply of pies, cakes, tarts, cookies, homemade bread and buns. The delicatessen table had novel variety of homecooked dishes including meat loaves, macaroni dishes and a number of jars of jellies, jams and pickles.

Those in charge of the various sales tables were: homebaking, convener, Mrs. J. D. Stewart with assistants Mrs. P. W. Pickering and Mrs. F. Platt; delicatessen, convener, Mrs. M. Coles, assisted by Mrs. R. Livock; candy table, convener, Mrs. D. B. Allan, with assistant Mrs. R. H. Hayes; aprons, convener, Mrs. R. Bishop, assistant Mrs. F. Wiggins; novelties, convener, Mrs. F. C. Murray, assisted by Mrs. F. Fraser and Mrs. D. Makl; children's clothes, convener, Mrs. W. J. Black, assisted by Mrs. T. A. Sawyer; white elephant, Mrs. R. Bailey; parcel post, Mrs. M. R. Angus; dolls' clothes, convener, Mrs. G. Sands with assistant Mrs. E. G. Tucker.

A nursery was available for the little tots in charge of Mrs. D. R. Grant, Mrs. W. G. Warren and Mrs. A. M. Duke, while the fish pond was in charge of the Junior Auxiliary under the leadership of Mrs. J. Hawkins.

Tickets and advertising for this most successful event were taken care of by Mrs. L. Garvin and Mrs. W. Lindsey.

WEDDINGS

Easton—Wilson

St. Andrew's United Church at L'Amable was the setting for a lovely candlelight services, when Gayle Marlene Wilson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Wilson of L'Amable, was united in marriage to George Arthur Easton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Easton of Belleville.

The guest pews were decorated with white satin bows with lily of the valley attached. Reverend Henry A. Fuoga performed the double-ring ceremony.

The wedding music was played by Mr. Jack Gordon. He accompanied the soloist, Miss Marlene Wannamaker who sang before the ceremony and during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white satin, featuring an empire bodice of rayon and nylon lace above the semi-bell-shaped skirt. A floor length train completed the back. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a crown of pearls and sequins. She carried a crescent shaped bouquet of red roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Gail Johnston, sister of the bridegroom, and the brides maids were Miss Pauline Gaffney and Miss Diane Wilson, sister of the bride.

The attendants were similarly attired in rose pink, street length dresses of filmy nylon over ribbed rayon taffeta. The fitted bodices had Swiss type, two-tone embroidery. They had scoop necklines and short sleeves. They wore matching shoes and gloves. Their hats were white velvet bows with net atop each, and they carried nosegays of snow white mums.

The flower girl, little Miss Bonnie Rupert, niece of the groom, was daintily attired in pale pink chiffon over taffeta with white accessories and a headdress of pink flowers, and she carried a basket of pink-tinted baby mums.

Mr. Jay Easton, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Alec Johnston, brother-in-law of the bridegroom and Mr. Wayne Anderson, cousin of the bride. The ring bearer was Brock Anderson, cousin of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Orange hall in Bancroft. The three-tier wedding cake, topped with a bride and bridegroom arrangement, centred the bridal table. White candles and the bouquets added to the setting.

The bride's mother wore a rose pink dress of wool with beige accessories.

The bridegroom's mother was dressed in a navy and white three-piece cotton knit suit with black accessories. Each had a corsage of pink carnations.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti for a trip through Algonquin Park.

Guests attended from Bancroft, Belleville, Oshawa, Port Hope, Kingston, Gravenhurst, New York, Peterborough and Pontypool.

Previous to her marriage the bride was honored at a shower held by Mrs. Grace Easton and Miss Pauline Gaffney.

Mr. and Mrs. Easton will reside at 34 Bridge Street East, Belleville.

Spinster First Woman Judge To Preside Over Paris Court

PARIS (Reuters)—A bespectacled, white - haired spinster, 66-year-old Marguerite Haller, has become the first woman judge to preside over a Paris court.

Her cases in the 16th magistrate's court, which specializes in offences against public morals, involve prostitution, sex perversion and procuring.

Miss Haller's appointment as vice-president of the Seine department tribunal at the Palais de Justice created a sensation in French legal circles.

French women won the right to become judges in 1946, but none had presided in Paris until Miss Haller was appointed. She had been a magistrate in the high courts of provincial cities for 18 years.

The first day that Mademoiselle Haller took her place on the bench, seated between two male judges, a technical question of protocol arose. Lawyers and clerks of the court were uncertain about the correct manner of addressing her.

The decision was that Miss Haller should be addressed as Madame la President and not La Presidente. The prestige of her office took priority over the fact that she is a woman in the genders of the French language.

WORKS 12-HOUR DAY

At an age when most women tend to reduce their activities, Madame Le President works a 12-hour day. She presides on the bench from 1:30 p.m. until late afternoon three days each week, and studies case histories in her private office when the court is not in session.

Miss Haller is brisk, businesslike, and to the point. When she smiles, however, she looks more like a kindly grandmother than a judge.

Miss Haller is dedicated to the furtherance of her ideals of justice and order. She considers that she is merely a person doing a specific job and is in no way a feminist.

Daughter of a French army officer, she is the only member of her family to embark on a legal career. She became interested in law in her early teens, and first served as a judge at the tribunal of Reichstadt during the French occupation of Germany.

Miss Haller has acquired a reputation for being both severe and compassionate, depending upon the individual person and any extenuating circumstances.

More Day Care Homes Needed Says Council

TORONTO (CP)—A suggestion more day-care centres should be established to help children of new Canadians become better adapted to Canada was made Wednesday night at the annual meeting of the Provincial Council of Women of Ontario.

Children of non-English-speaking parents are likely to learn the language and customs more quickly within a mixed group at a day-care centre, said Herbert Gabriel of the Canadian Scholarship Trust Plan, a panelist at the meeting.

He added that parents, themselves should start the centres within their own communities, assisted by business. They should not wait for government help.

Business groups must be convinced of their responsibility in establishing these centres, said Gertrude Davis, a home economics teacher at a Toronto high school. She said business should hire mothers on a part-time basis only, or business and community organizations should co - operate in establishing more schools.

Robert Nixon, Liberal Member of the Legislature for Brantford, noted that 30 day-care centres in Ontario are financed by both the municipal and provincial governments. Nine of these centres are in Toronto.

Public Image Main Deterrent To Selection

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) An American teacher suggested here Wednesday that the great set determent to the selection and retention of able people as teachers of nursing is the "model or public image" projected by persons already in the teaching profession.

Speaking to the conference of directors of schools of nursing of Ontario, Dr. Margaret Lindsey, professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia University, in New York, suggested that the idea of "recruiting," prospective nursing teachers "should be deleted since it is a matter of selection."

"This selection of teachers of nursing from the ranks of the able practitioner," Dr. Lindsay said, "must be guided by a deliberate selection program at all levels of preparation. Such a program must maintain challenging standards if able student are to be retained."

While it is important for the teacher to be a "superb practitioner," she said, "it does not follow automatically that the superb practitioner is therefore able to teach."

Characteristics of the prospective teacher are an inquiring mind, basic intellectual ability, good communication skills, great vision and dedication to the profession, good physical and mental health and a high degree of flexibility in personality.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

SHE HAS A SMALL HOUSE AND MANY FRIENDS

What does a hostess do when she has invited 20 people to dinner and has room for only eight at her dinner table?

The answer: It's back to the drawing board to map out a buffet.

Of course, one question leads to another. Why should a hostess get herself into the fix of inviting 12 more than she can handle?

Well, the girls can answer that easily. It just happens. Names get added to the original handful and somehow it just wouldn't do to take them off. By this time, the hostess has made her decision that it will be a buffet.

Unfortunately, the thought of a buffet in many cases is apt to transform many a hostess into a cringing washling. She tortures herself with thoughts of service, menu and a supposed lack of seating space.

Fortunately, a buffet, properly planned, can be the simplest way to feed a large group. The informality of the service tends to break down the reserve of some of the guests and results in that ultimate of entertaining — a relaxed, happy hostess.

HOW SHE DOES IT

Here's how she achieves her serious state:

First she decides that the dining table seating eight is perfect for setting out the buffet. The menu? Very simple: Perhaps a big bowl of shrimp, another bowl of sauce, sliced roast beef and ham, a bowl of gravy, hot rolls and bread, hot sweet potatoes, oven-roasted potatoes (which were cooked with the beef) and a big bowl of salad. All hot foods should be kept that way on warming plates.

The food problem solved, she calls four friendly neighbors and borrows their bridge tables and chairs. These she sets up in the living room.

Food preparations are simple. The sauce is made the day before, and the shrimp cooked the morning of the dinner. Both are kept cold in the refrigerator. The canned ham and roast beef are cooked together in the oven (in separate pans, of course). The cooking is finished while her guests have cocktails, and she need excuse herself only to make the pan gravy.

At dinner time the men pitch in to set up the bridge tables. The service goes smoothly, and a number of guests go back for seconds.

Coffee and dessert are even less of a problem. A 40-cup electric coffee-maker perks away merrily while the dishes are carried to the kitchen, scraped and stacked in the dishwasher.

The informality of the occasion is so well established that guests stay seated at the bridge tables for more than an hour after dinner. The men then leave to again, fold the tables and chairs and stack them in a corner of the dining room.

Buffet, anyone? It's really no trouble at all.

First Canadian To Be Honored By Institute

TORONTO (CP) — The first Canadian to be honored for humanitarian service by membership in the U.S. National Institute of Social Sciences is Mrs. Egmont Frankel of Toronto. She will receive her medal in New York City Nov. 15.

The institute's major purpose is to bring together "men and women representing the highest aims and standards of American life." Most of its members are American and its awards have gone to scientist Marie Curie, medical missionary Wilfred Grenfell, researcher Jonas E. Salk, statesmen Bernard Baruch, singer Marian Anderson, philanthropist Andrew Carnegie and botanist Luther Burbank.

Mrs. Frankel's award is in recognition of her work in the battle against cancer. She is honorary president of the Ontario Cancer Society Toronto branch and chairman of the Princess Margaret Hospital and Lodge Auxiliary.

In 1959 she was appointed the only woman member of the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation.

Requests Nursing Homes Be Licensed, Inspected

TORONTO (CP) — A resolution asking the Ontario department of health to take over the licensing and inspection of nursing homes was passed Wednesday at a semi-annual meeting of the Provincial Council of Women of Ontario.

Several resolutions dealing with health and the aged were passed on the first day of the two-day meeting, presided over by Mrs. W. P. Augustine of Windsor, provincial president.

Another resolution to be presented to the Ontario government will protest an increase in rates and the selling methods of the Physicians Services Incorporated.

ASK CO-ORDINATOR

Council voted to ask the provincial government to appoint a co-ordinator for the affairs of the aged. They resolved to present a brief to the Ontario select committee on aging, out lining improvements for housing, health, welfare, education and economics of senior citizens.

In confirmation of a resolution passed in June by the national council, the provincial group will ask Ontario to press the federal government for grants for the construction and maintenance of facilities for medical and social care for the chronically ill.

They agreed to back a resolution from the Ontario Association of Superannuated Women Teachers to step up tax exemptions from $1,500 to $3,000 for people over 65. The 2,000 exemption now applies at age 70

In an opening talk National President Mrs. H. H Stevens urged delegates to work to lift the moral standards of the nation. "People are getting beyond shock. We as women should do something to stir our moral fibre"

Readers Have Varying Views On Noisy Children, Dogs

DEAR DORIS — A Daily Reader complained about screaming children and barking dogs. I can only agree with her.

We live in the same kind of neighborhood . . . children screaming from morning till night. Seems the whole street belongs only to them. They are in every house but where they live. Mothers hardly even look all day where the children are or what they do.

DORIS CLARK

Have you any idea, Doris, how nervous you get, especially when you have a baby of your own that can't sleep because of all that noise? I had my doctor here one Sunday afternoon. He stayed only a few minutes and said: "I could not live here for a week. It's terrible, that noise!" — ANOTHER DAILY READER.

DEAR DORIS — I was wondering, could you please tell us if that person who wrote that letter (Daily Reader) is human?

I have eight children. We also have a dog. But our children come before my dog. And I certainly would not think of giving up my one of them for a dog. Does that person stop to think that he or she was once a screaming child?

Dear Doris, you are not the only one who would like to hear from Daily Reader ten years and three bouncing babies later! — A MOTHER OF EIGHT.

DEAR DORIS — About that letter from Daily Reader. I am a lover of dumb animals and I feel that we are the kind of people that should own them, as there are many poor things that are neglected and this is where our S.P.C.A. workers come in.

What I cannot understand is why this lady would watch this poor dog, listen to his barking and see him being teased by children and, worst of all, being neglected by his owner. Why doesn't she phone the Humane Society? It just takes a second and I can assure you they would be there in no time. — A THIRD DAILY READER.

DEAR THREE — Thank you — all of you. Anybody else want to let off steam about screams?

Club Activities

HARMONY STUDIO CLUB

The Harmony Studio Club held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. R. Veley.

Students and guests were welcomed and the regular business was received.

The first part of the program featured "Studies" with James Noakes, Rodney May, Deborah Grass and Patricia Huddleston, each playing a study.

Mrs. Veley gave a talk on "Technique"—(What makes music?) with a further demonstration of Grade Six work played by Sheryle Cretney; Grade Seven by Susan Sweet, and Grade Eight by Karen Terry.

Presentation of certificates to last year's successful students was made by Mrs. Harold Hancock and Mrs. Veley presented a congratulatory card to the student with the highest mark in his or her grade on the Conservatory examination.

A highlight of the program was the presentation of a $25 scholarship to Linda Noakes for having received the highest mark for all of Ontario in the Great Three Conservatory examination in piano. Mrs. Veley congratulated Linda, who will receive a silver medal for the same achievement. This medal will be presented to Linda at the Conservatory Concert Hall, Toronto, in the near future.

"On Wings of Song" (Mendelssohn) was played by Diane Shorey and "Sonata" (Haydn) by James Noakes.

James and Linda Noakes played two duets, "Fairy Bells" by Englemann and the "Puxie King March", also by Englemann, brought the program to a close.

Refreshments were served.

SEA-SAW

Dear Susanna: I am convening our decoration booth at our Christmas Fair and would appreciate any instructions you might have for centre pieces using driftwood. — Muriel Lockhart

I rather liked the "neptune look" that was given to driftwood at a fall fair I recently attended.

Nearly everyone who has ever visited the sea shore has brought home collection of shells, star fish, sea horses, lace-like ocean plants, seaweed and so on. Such item as these were combined with the driftwood.

A typical example was a rather interesting piece of wood with a section of fish netting draped over one side. A handful of shells was scattered at the base, and a couple of saucy-looking sea horses perched, one below the other, on two of the stubby branches.

Their method of displaying these, both for sale purposes and for a decoration idea was rather unique too. They had arranged one in the centre of each of the small tables that were set up in their tea room. Then, as you sat there nibbling home-made cake or drinking a cup of coffee, you couldn't help but want to say: "I'll take this one."

One darling idea was to place a marble in a knot hole. It looks exactly like an eye, and right away your driftwood comes alive and takes on the form of a monster or some grotesque bird.

For a more festive air or a Christmassy look, use a piece of wood (cedar is ideal) with lots of spindly roots sticking up. Spray or brush it with gold or silver. Tie a tiny bell, a bit of holly and other decorations to the end of each branch. Or, for a hurry-up piece, try tipping each twig with a red or green gum drop — that, I find, is easier done than said!—SUSANNA

Ottawa Mayor Best Known And Most Controversial Woman in the Country

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Amid the clutter on the mayor's desk in Ottawa City Hall sits a small porcelain ashtray bearing a French inscription that translates:

"What the devil can't do, a woman can."

Friends and foes of the ashtray's owner, Charlotte Elliza Beth Hexalyne Whitton, agree it's a fitting motto for the five-foot pepperpot who has often shocked—but never bored—the 380,000 residents of the capital.

As mayor for nine of the last 13 years, Miss Whitton has turned Ottawa's civic affairs into a dizzy whirl and become the best-known, most controversial woman in the country.

Council and board of control meetings, once deathly dull, now explode into shouting matches calling uproars with Mayor Whitton's strident voice overwhelming all comers. The four-member board of control has been called the "board of control."

PUNCHES CONTROLLER

One day she flew at a husky male controller in a rage of Irish temper, punching and kicking him until he beat a startled retreat. An eyewitness almost fainted.

Another time she jokingly pulled out a toy pistol at a board meeting and touched off near-panic.

A news photo of her sliding down a curling rink on her backside, skirt askew and a cabinet minister laughing uproariously in the background made front pages across the continent.

In between such antics, she has become a symbol of aroused womanhood with such Whitton-isms as:

"Whatever women do they must do twice as well as men to be thought half as good. Luckily, it's not difficult."

"The nation that fails to enlist the magnificent resources of its women is flying on one wing and bound for a crash landing."

When she's neither acting up nor speaking out, the 68-year-old spinster works at the mayor's job with all the happy frenzy of a teen-age at a Beatle show, a penny-pinching eye on every facet of the city's $30,000,000-a-year operation.

And although she has been playing coy about it, nearly everybody expects she will run for another two-year term of office in the Dec. 7 municipal election. Two strong males are already in the race, assuring a division of the male vote.

BACKED BY COMMITTEE

Her Worship has two big things going for her—an energetic, devoted women's committee that campaigns furiously for "Our Charlotte" and a platform still chuck that none of her likely opponents can match.

"Charlotte could charm the clock off the Peace Tower," one of them ruefully admits.

Surprisingly, for all the furore she has caused, Mayor Whitton also has a record of solid major achievements. Under her administration Ottawa has carried out its assessment rolls, built a striking new city hall and a $900,000 police headquarters, landed the federal government into tripling its city payments to nearly $4,000,000, expanded hospital facilities, created a money-saving central buying system and has a crosscity express highway near completion.

Her critics contend all these things were inevitable and accuse her of smashing screens of other vital projects just because she didn't think of them first.

Paul Tardif, the Liberal member of Parliament for the Ottawa - area constituency of Russell who left the board of control in 1962 after years of violent feuding with the mayor, put it this way:

"Charlotte has to run the whole show herself or she won't play. It's impossible to reason with her once she makes up her mind. Now, how can anybody work with a woman like that!"

TWITS MALES

Mayor Whitton—who detests the spinster label of "Miss"—brushes off such criticism as male frustration and loves to rub it in. Once near the end of a board meeting she had completely dominated, she snapped:

"Speak up, gentlemen. I am not opposed to male participation in government!"

But there have been complaints that she dislikes female participation as well. If it isn't hers, even while she talks of the need for more women in public life. When Ellen Webber, an attractive widow and lawyer, was elected to the board of control in 1962 she and Charlotte quickly clashed and have remained at loggerheads since.

Whitton fans blame the conflict on the fact that Charlotte is a Conservative and Mrs. Webber a Liberal. But it's no secret Mrs. Webber has ideas about becoming mayor some day.

Charlotte herself got into civic politics more by accident than design. In 1950 she lectured a women's club on the way its members neglected public affairs and was promptly challenged by the Ottawa Journal to run for board of control, which up to then had never had a woman member.

She snapped up the challenge rallied a crowd of clubwomen to the Chateau Laurier ballroom and whipped it into a fighting mood.

NEEDLE AS SYMBOL

"There are 25,000 members on the elective boards of this country and how many of them are women? Not 200!" she cried.

Within an hour the Charlotte Whitton Committee was born. Its enthusiasm spread over the city and Whitton workers began popping up everywhere their symbol a needle and a strip of blue thread worn on the collar.

On election day Charlotte Whitton rode herd for controllers, piling up a 7,000-vote edge over her nearest opponent.

Her first battle was to insist on the board's tradition of naming as deputy mayor the controller with the most votes. Then Mayor Grenville Goodwin died suddenly and on Oct. 15, 1951, Controller Whitton was sworn in as mayor for the 14½ months remaining in his term.

Almost before her astonished male colleagues knew what was happening, she was in complete command.

In 1952, wearing daring needles "because the job is bigger," her Committee of 100 helped her ring up a 3,923-vote victory and in 1954 helped boost the margin to more than 10,000.

She "retired" at the end of 1956, cleaning out of her desk such knick-knacks as a licensed revolver she had forgotten was there and the cherished axe story, although she's a non smoker.

WROTE COLUMN

In 1958 she ran as a Conservative for an Ottawa seat in the federal election, losing by a whisker. She wrote a column for the Ottawa Citizen for two years and in 1960 recaptured the mayor's seat.

For a time there were rumors that John Diefenbaker, then Conservative prime minister, was set to appoint her ambassador to Ireland, perhaps to the Senate. The mayor dropped hints that she would be happy in either post but the final call never came.

"Diefenbaker double-crossed Charlotte," one of her close friends says. "If he had named her to the Senate and sent her out campaigning he'd have won the 1963 election. Charlotte could have got those few extra seats he needed."

Insiders, meanwhile, say Mr. Diefenbaker was so shocked by the mayor's physical attack on a controller that he withdrew the nomination for the ambassadorship and a group of influential senators talked him out of the Senate appointment.

Whatever happened, it was one of the few times Charlotte Whitton set her sights on a goal and missed.

She was born March 8, 1896, in the Ottawa Valley lumbering town of Renfrew, eldest child of a Yorkshire - stock Protestant father and an American-born Irish Roman Catholic mother. The first two children were raised as Anglicans, the next two as Catholics.

STARRED IN SPORT

A "brainy little girl," she entered Queen's University with six scholarships and emerged in 1918 with a fistful of medals in English, history and pedagogy. Along the way Lottie Whitton became the first woman to edit the Queen's newspaper, captained the girls' ice hockey team and won letters in basketball and field hockey.

Her scholastic brilliance attracted the attention of a Liberal cabinet minister and she served on his political staff for two years.

In 1926 Charlotte became executive director of the Canada Welfare Council and for the next 15 years traveled Canada studying welfare services, playing a major role in raising the status of welfare work from a charity to a recognized profession. Her battle for the welfare of mothers and children won international attention.

When war broke out in 1939 Canada agreed to shelter 10,000 children from bomb - battered Britain and Charlotte was assigned to organize the program. In one hectic weekend she set up the plan under which the youngsters were resettled in Canadian and American homes.

In 1947 she made a special survey of welfare practices in Alberta and exposed a system which "sold" babies across the border. A magazine article based on her report led to a libel action by the province which was hastily dropped after a royal commission confirmed Charlotte's findings. "Babies for export" was a national sensation.

INSISTS ON PRIVACY

By now she had a flock of honorary doctorates and government medals behind her flowing signature and was a success as a lecturer and writer. That finally led her to the mayor's seat in Ottawa, her adopted hometown.

Throughout her career as social worker, lecturer, writer and mayor, Charlotte has managed to keep her private life out of public view and shuns personal interviews like the plague. She lives in the same six-room apartment she first took in 1928 when she settled here, located in a four-suite block near fashionable Rockcliffe Park village in the east end.

Her favorite relaxation is to get away to her cottage at remote McGregor Lake. It's accessible only by boat and most of the main cabin was built by the mayor.

After putting in 12 to 15 hours a day on official duties Charlotte usually unwinds in the library of her home, a collection of books ranging from poetry to detective fiction. She owns just about everything ever written about Elizabeth I or England, ranked by Charlotte as the first modern woman.

Her home companions are a housekeeper and a mal- cat of dubious background that wandered into her campaign office last election night. Felix as she calls him, is considered her good luck charm.

WEAKNESS FOR SHOES

Frisbie has she lives "fairly carefully" and stays well under her $15,200-a-year income from the mayoralty. "Her clothes are expensive but she makes up for that by wearing them a long time," one reports. "Charlotte's only real vanity is for shoes; she buys scads of them."

Louis St. Laurent, when he was prime minister, once told the mayor he had the most attractive ankles and feet of any woman in Canada. Even today her slim legs and ankles seem to defy age.

Her long grey - streaked hair is kept in a short, wavy and businesslike cut and she fights an incessant battle to keep her weight down to around 130.

Charlotte enjoys a social drink, usually gin and tonic, but has a long record of battling against new liquor outlets in the city. Her aversion to public drinking places stems from her childhood days in Renfrew when the hard-drinking habits of her Irish uncles, all rugged lumberjacks, shocked the rest of the family.

Once she described early Ottawa as a town of 10,000 "and, of course, 8,000 of them were drunks."

ENVOYS JOKES

As an aging spinster she gets her friends to keep close tabs on any jokes about her that begin making the rounds and likes to use them herself at times even when they're a bit lively.

One of her favorites goes like this:

Faced with a rush trip to Toronto one night, she found only an upper berth available on the train. Shortly after settling in, a man in the lower began snoring loudly and she couldn't get to sleep. Annoyed, she leaned out and shook his curtains, whereupon the man poked his head out and told her: "Who thanks I saw you when you got on."

Told with Charlotte's masterful timing, that punch line has rocked dozens of convention openings.

FACES OF A MAYOR — Charlotte Whitton, mayor of Ottawa for nine of the last 13 years, has turned Ottawa's civic affairs into a dizzy whirl and become the best-known, most controversial woman in the country. When she's neither acting up nor speaking out, the 68-year-old spinster works at the mayor's job with all the happy frenzy of a teen-ager at a Beatle show. (CP Photo)

One of her less successful projects as mayor was the purchase of flowing robes for the entire council—scarlet for the mayor, red for controllers and blue for councillors. She bulldozed most of her male associates into wearing them on special occasions but during her out-of-office period they were stored in mothballs in some remote cupboard and haven't been seen since.

Charlotte unearthed the mayor's outfit, however, and at the slightest excuse will don her robe, three - cornered hat and gold chain of office. Her enemies make cracks about "Queen Charlotte I of Ottawa."

But it's really not the "Queen" they mind. It's her spirited style of reign.

U.C.W. Meeting

MARSH HILL UNITED CHURCH WOMEN

MARSH HILL — The November meeting of the Marsh Hill UCW was held at the home of Mrs. Berson Mitts with 11 members and one visitor present.

Mrs. Harold Deitor, the president, opened the meeting with a reading, followed with a two minute silence.

Mrs. Allyn Finkle conducted the worship service, assisted by Mrs. Ivan Clare.

Mrs. Alex Tanner, chairman of stewardship and recruiting read an article on Stewardship and introduced Mrs. Keith Bray of Ivanhoe, Presbyterial secretary of stewardship and recruiting, who was the guest speaker.

Mrs. Bray gave an outline of the duties of her committee and said that the UCW has a great opportunity to foster Christian Education both in the home and the community.

She said, "If we are not good stewards ourselves, how can we open doors for others? We need the ability to see beyond our own doorsteps. The Christian must always use his stewardship as a privilege to serve God."

Mrs. Berson Mitts thanked Mrs. Bray for her thoughtful and informative address.

The members reported sending 36 cards and two letters and making five house calls and 13 hospital visits.

Mrs. Harry Coulter, chairman of citizenship, read an article on "Children's International Camps."

Mrs. Allyn Finkle reported she had attended a meeting of the Christian Education committee.

Mrs. Farley Lindenfield read a letter from the Presbyterial supply secretary stating the allocation which is five yards of print and sewing supplies.

Mrs. Deitor read a letter asking for nominations for offices in the Presbyterial. A letter was also read from Mrs. Don Williams, chairman of the Presbyterial "finance committee stating that the allocation will be raised by three and one half percent.

A donation was made to the church school for extra help.

Mrs. Berson Mitts, delegate to the regional meeting at Metro, gave her report.

The hostess served refreshments.

Every home heating fuel claims economy, dependability, cleanliness, convenience.

But compared to other fuels Natural Gas is best.

Just how economical is economical? How dependable is dependable? Just how clean is clean? Compare one fuel to another and the facts will prove that Natural Gas is best no matter what the others claim.

Fact: Natural Gas costs far less than electric heating, and in most areas of Ontario less than oil.

Fact: Natural Gas is so economical that you can heat an entire house with normal insulation evenly, including basement . . . no need for individual room thermostats, for closed off rooms.

Fact: Natural Gas requires none of the extra thick wall and ceiling insulation, or the special basement insulation required by electric heating.

Fact: Natural Gas is dependable. Supply lines are buried underground. Weather and road conditions, power failures or burned out fuses do not disrupt the flow of fuel.

Fact: Natural Gas burns cleaner. All its volume is turned into heat energy. No soot. No greasy deposits. No baked-in dirt on walls or drapes.

Fact: Natural Gas forced air systems make living more comfortable and healthier. The warm air is circulating and being filtered constantly. Uncirculated air, as provided by electric heating, is stale air.

Fact: Natural Gas lets you conveniently and economically use your heating system for air conditioning during Summer months. Lets you humidify the circulating air too.

Fact: Natural Gas, properly installed, with Automatic shut-off and other modern safety controls is as safe a heating system as you'll find anywhere. Electricity leads the list of fire causes over all other forms of energy. (Ontario Fire Marshal's Report.)

Fact: With Natural Gas, service is free.

There is other evidence. But these facts are enough to show that although every fuel makes the same claims, if you compare one fuel to another, Natural Gas is best.

ST. MICHAEL'S PARISH COUNCIL
C.W. LEAGUE

The regular meeting of St. Michael's C.W.L. was held on Monday and was opened with an Act of Consecration. The coming social program will consist of a dessert meeting with the exchange of small gifts at the regular January meeting and members will show slides of their various travels. On Friday, February 12 the Queen of Hearts Ball will be held and will be convened by Mrs. J. Sheridan. The council will cater at a dinner for the V.O.N. on February 15 under the convenorship of Mrs. G. O'Brien. Thanks were extended to all who contributed in making a success of the Masquerade dance and the rummage sale both of which were held on October 26.

Mrs. D. Moran and Mrs. J. Gallagher will visit the sick in hospital in conjunction with other volunteers.

The spiritual convener, Mrs. J. Farrell read an article pointing out the spiritual benefits derived from participating in the Eucharistic Meal. Mrs. Farrell also spoke of the Masses, psalms and rosaries recited for the recently deceased Rev. J. Buckley and members of the parish.

SPONSOR CITIZENSHIP

In her report Mrs. P. J. Kelly, press and publicity convener, urged that members acquaint themselves with all phases of CWL endeavour in order to converse in an informed articulate manner on the league when the occasion arises and improve the public image of the organization. It was announced by Mrs. H. Brown that a parishioner, a young Yugoslavian woman would have her citizenship sponsored by the civic action committee at Citizenship Court in December. Mrs. Brown suggested that members of this council would find it interesting to visit this court in session. The social action committee is working to capacity-assisting families in need. There is a need for more welfare workers. The committee is planning towards a reorganization program at an early date.

CONSIDER CREDIT UNION

A word in favor of credit unions was given by Mrs. R. Ackerman who explained the basic principles concerning invested funds, the many benefits and the wide spread establishment of the organization. Consideration is being given to establishing a credit union in St. Michael's parish depending upon the show of interest.

The council president, Mrs. J. R. Rashotte outlined briefly the early history of the CWL giving the need to seek betterment of social scion as one of the original motivations in formation of the League. Mrs. Rashotte requested all conveners to attend the regional meetings when possible in order to gain first hand knowledge of the needs and aims of CWL action in our own area.

TO PURCHASE GIFTS

It was decided that a specified sum of money will be spent on the purchase of Christmas gifts in conjunction with the Ontario Mental Health Association, Belleville branch, for the female patients in Cobourg Ontario Hospital. Mrs. R. Collins will act as liaison between CWL and OMHA.

At the conclusion of the business session, Mrs. G. O'Brien introduced Mrs. J. M. Parrott, the guest of the evening. Mrs. Parrott entertained the ladies with slides of her trip to Moscow. From her pictures Mrs. Parrott showed a modern Moscow inhabited by people of very human quality. The children were the same as children everywhere.

The traditional dwellings are fast being replaced with modern apartment structures and the interest the people have in the performing arts is evidenced in the well dressed capacity crowds attending the richly furnished theatres. The appreciation of the ladies was extended by Mrs. R. Collins to Mrs. Parrott for taking them on a pictorial journey. Refreshments were then served by the hospitality committee.

TRAFFIC - LOSSES

Almost 33,000 persons have been killed on Canada's highways in the last 10 years, and 870,000 injured.

Sportswear Shown in Many Colors

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP)—A half hour before the Zacari sportswear show began here Wednesday, a platinum blonde was toting all the wash bowls in the ladies' room dyeing pairs of mesh stockings shades of green and yellow.

Somebody elsewhere was putting the finishing stitches onto a tight green jumpsuit, a design fresh off the drawing board of couturier Antonio Castillo of Paris.

Yet all was decorum when the first group of shapely misses scrambled onto the long runway to demonstrate how a good distaff sport should dress this spring, whatever her gems.

The green and yellow mesh hose, probably still a little wet, showed up to advantage with matching shoes, skirt and short culottes called pants skirts.

The green jumpsuit with its doublebreasted matching jacket with pleats that flared at the side was a part of a series of coveralls appropriate for gardening or circus high-wire acts. Many owned their breathless fit to two-way stretch fabrics.

STRETCH ESSENTIAL

Stretch, either at the waistline or throughout the garment, was an essential element in most costumes, whether they were destined for the golf course, the family yacht, or a bicycle path. Without a little give in the goods it is doubtful the ladies could sit down in pipe-stem slacks.

But the models wearing short shifts were just as attractive with unfitted yardage of arael jersey or silk and rayon fabric hanging loosely over then architecture.

Loose or tight, almost every thing was bright.

There were ram e-hand screened cottons combining yellows, reds or blues, and from French knots flower petals and hot pinks and golds, shaped into ponchos, worn over really short shorts, and topped off with matching straw hats like Maurice Chevalier's, or gaudy berets.

There were polka dots and broad stripes or bold brush strokes, patterns in everything from bikini shorts to pants suits.

B. G. H. Alumnae Hear Former Graduate Nurse

The Belleville General Hospital Nurses Alumnae met in Education Hall for their monthly meeting with Mrs. Ruth Bly presiding.

A Christmas pot-luck supper was planned for the next meeting. The coming Star Dust ball was discussed and the plans are well in hand.

MISSION HOSPITAL

The speaker for the evening was Miss Doris Donnan, a graduate of Belleville General Hospital who after graduating left for Hay River to work in a Mission Hospital for four years, located north of Alberta on the shores of the three years old and situated on the Great Slave Lake.

Miss Donnan showed pictures of the hospital, the patients and townsite. In this isolated and beautiful country it was noted, the patients and population were mostly Indian. Some had to be flown by plane to the hospital or if serious were flown out to Edmonton or Yellowknife hospitals. Fishing and hunting are the chief industries.

MANY DUTIES

As a nurse Miss Donnan had many duties to perform besides nursing such as the laundry for the hospital patients, scrubbing and cleaning the hospital, ordering and looking after drugs and medicines. When the one doctor was away she acted as interim doctor, giving anasthetics, delivering babies.

Her experiences were awesome but with faith and prayer help came from above and things always worked out.

Miss Donnon revealed how the staff served the physical, mental, and spiritual needs of the patients by nursing care and getting to know the patients in taking over their troubles and taking time to get close to them. Their spiritual needs were given by reading the Bible and praying with them.

Miss Donnan stated experiences in this mission hospital were most satisfying and full of opportunity to give and care for those less fortunate in this vast Canadian northwest.

In thanking Miss Donnan, Mrs Taylor said that Belleville General Hospital Nurses Alumnae were proud to have her as one of their graduates.

Mrs. Doucett and Mrs. Rutherford provided refreshments, thus closing a fine evening.

Holiday Buffet Chicken Loaf

By MARY MOORE

Originally the cold chicken loaf recipe I am giving you today was designed for slicing for sandwiches. But it is too important for this humble purpose.

It will be a fine item on your buffet table when you are entertaining around Christmas time. An outstanding feature of this chicken loaf is its slice-ability — using a sharp knife you can slice it as thin as you like. An expert carver could cut this loaf into 20 slices. Indeed, if you do use it for sandwiches it would have to be cut that thin.

Please clip this recipe now and put it in your party plans file for reference a month from now. Or make it now and use for lunch box sandwiches, keeping baldover portion of loaf very cold. Excellent hot too.

COLD CHICKEN LOAF

(To slice for buffet or for sandwiches) — 5½ cups diced cooked chicken (see below); 2 cups commercial toasted breadcrumbs or ground breadcrumbs from dried-out bread; 1 cup whole milk; 3 large eggs; 2 tablespoons green onion flakes or finely chopped green onion or grated raw onion, 1¼ teaspoons salt; ¾ teaspoon MSG (accent); ¾ teaspoon pepper; ½ cup chicken broth (see below).

To get my 5½ cups diced cooked chicken I bought a 4-lb. one and pressure cooked it at 8 lbs. pressure for 1 hour in 1½ cups water, OR boil in 1½ cups water covered, until meat nearly falls from bones. Tip off ¼ cup of this rich broth and reserve. Carefully turn hot chicken out onto large platter or tray to cool enough to handle. Strip meat from bones. Reserve skin and soft cartilage. Discard bones. Grind skin and soft cartilage. Chop chicken meat — it should be in ¼" pieces or smaller. (NOTE: As you chop you discover any little bones you may have missed.) While chicken cooks put breadcrumbs in large bowl, add milk and all other ingredients and mix and let soak until chicken is ready. Add chicken broth, ground chicken skin and chopped chicken meat and mix well.

Line bottom of loaf pan (4½ x 8½ x 2¾") with wax paper. Butter paper and sides of pan generously, turn in mixture, press down well, smooth top, cover with foil. Stand in larger pan containing 1" of water and oven-poach at 375 deg. Fahr. for 70 minutes, removing foil during last 10 minutes (cool chill overnight) before turning out, removing wax paper and slicing.

NOTE: The chicken loaf may be made 48 hours in advance, if desired, and kept well chilled. In addition to my suggestions above for using this loaf for a Christmas buffet party and for slicing for sandwiches, you could use it sliced for a cold salad plate, prettily garnished with red apple jelly or small cranberry jelly moulds or spiced crabapples or pears.

Tenants Must Pay Flat Rate Service Charge Says P.U.C.

CAMPBELLFORD—The regular meeting of the Public Utilities Commission was held November 10th with all members present.

At a special meeting since last regular meeting $175 was granted to the industrial committee of the Chamber of Commerce to pay for refreshments and luncheon for Industrial Day held previously by the Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. J. Sparling addressed the commission with a complaint of over charge for water. By motion the amount was authorized to be refunded. A letter was read concerning the water supply to Colin Collins' building and place of business.

Mr. Collons' building houses the Ontario Liquor Control Board business as well as other rentals. The letter was forwarded by Mr. Collins' solicitor suggesting a water could be installed instead of charging tenants for flat rate service.

It was explained by P.U.C. the by-law distinctly states each tenant must pay a flat rate service charge.

The P.U.C. manager, James McMullen, had been authorized to discontinue water service by November 17, if Mr. Collins does not comply with the by-law.

Manager James McMullen was authorized to make plans and arrange for the annual Christmas party given by P.U.C. to staff and other employees of the Commission also employees of the town and the staff.

HONORED BY VISIT

Last week Campbellford and particularly former members of P. U. C. were signally honored by the visit of Mr. J. Andrew Lange of Schutz Pearer Engineering Sales and Service Associates of Syracuse, N.Y.

Mr. Lange was accompanied by two others, a consulting engineer and a land surveyor, Walter K. Neubauer, RELS and Russell L. Sulpen, P.E. of O'Brien and Gere, Syracuse, to inspect and observe the Campbellford Filtration plant.

The reason of the visit of these important officials goes back to 1962 when all plans and arrangements were finalized, the tenders given to Lightfoot Construction Co. of Belleville under the engineering supervision of J. D. Lee Co. of Kingston, to build a new filtration plant in the town of Campbellford. This involved more than a year of concentrated work and effort by the P.U.C. at that time.

The 1962 chairman A. C. Newman, commissioners J. O. Benoit, H. A. MacArthur, G. Vandewater and Mayor F. M. Rutherford finalized the details and brought to conclusion the building of the plant.

INSPECTED CLARIFIERS

Mr. Lange and his associates came to Campbellford to see and inspect the clarifiers used in the Campbellford plant. They contemplate using the same kind in a new plant near Syracuse, N.Y., which will be designed to a capacity of 36 million gallons of water every 24 hours.

The visit of these men was most gratifying to those responsible for the building of the Campbellford plant.

A committee chosen from the PUC was authorized to complete a purchase limited to $5,000. of diesel and other equipment held at present by a company not in operation at the present time. The PUC feed this diesel and pumping equipment will be a great safeguard for Campbellford's water supply in case of electric power failure.

The manager reported he had been contacted by William Dawson of Canada Wire store relative to the possibilities of obtaining 1000 HP of electricity to the industrial site. Mr. Dawson suspected an industry needing this amount of power might be interested.

Remembrance Day Service At Cenotaph

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford Branch 103 of the Royal Canadian Legion held its Remembrance Day service at Cenotaph and the auditorium of St. John's United Church.

The theme of the service was best expressed by the poem on the order of service:

"Blow, golden trumpets, mournfully,
For all the golden youth that's fled,
For all the shattered dreams that lie,
Where God has laid the quiet dead,
Beneath an alien sky."

Campbellford ministers taking part in the service were: Rev. G. Whitehorn, Rev. A. Wilkins, and the address given by Rev. O. Barrow.

Rev. O. Barrow gave a serious message as an appropriate dedication to the memory of the dead.

Mrs. H. Rowe, a Silver Cross Mother, placed the Provincial wreath. Mrs. Rowe's son was killed in an aeroplane crash during service in Africa.

The town of Campbellford wreath was placed by Mayor Tanner; the Campbellford Legion wreath by Legionnaire Alex McDonald and the wreath of the Women's Auxiliary of the Campbellford Legion branch, by Mrs. E. Hubble, president of the auxiliary.

Other wreaths were: Bemersyde Chapter IODE., placed by the Regent, Mrs. W. A. Kingston; the Rotary Club by G. W. Rutherford; the IOOF by T. Chadwick; Rebekah Lodge by Mrs. E. Wood; the C.W.L. wreath placed by Mrs. P. Mohan.

Due to weather conditions the remainder of the service after the solemn service of lay ing of wreaths was conducted in the auditorium of St. John's United Church.

The benediction was given by Rev. G. Whitehorn, with the "Last Post" and two minutes silence and "Reveille."

The Legion color party in charge of J. Mills was composed of George Parcels and Edward Brom from the Legion, and Mrs. G. Parcels and Mrs. T. Chadwick from the Women's Auxiliary of the Legion.

SURGEON DIES

ATLANTA (AP) — Dr. Murray Quen, known for his technique of removing foreign objects from the chest or stomach without surgery, died Wednesday. He was 72. Quen, founder and chief of staff of the Ponce De Leon eye, ear, nose and throat infirmary, designed the shape and technique of the Esophagoscope, which retrieves foreign objects from the windpipe, lungs and stomach without surgical incision.

China

down peace conditions in no uncertain terms. The conditions are harsh and probably never can be met by the Russians.

'SUPPORT REVOLUTION'

The Peking People's Daily the voice of the Chinese party, warned that the Soviet Union, if it wants to restore unity, will have to support violent revolution everywhere, regardless of risk.

Peng Chen, a power in the Peking politburo, said in a speech this week that "victory of the people's revolution will not come as a matter of course," a pointed warning that Russia would have to stop dragging its feet and disregard risks of war involved in supporting violence.

The Chinese make these points: The Soviet Union must refrain from dictating to other parties. The People's Daily said Moscow must treat Peking as equal, and "it is only when these principles are strictly observed, not only in word but in deed, that the unity of the International Communist movement can be strengthened."

Moscow must purge from power all who supported Khrushchev. The People's Daily called Khrushchev "chief representative of modern revisionism," clearly meaning that many more remain in the Soviet party.

The Chinese leaders insist the world Communist split was not fault of theirs, indicating that if there is to be a cure, it is up to Moscow.

"I was talking later to this first floor tenant," Brooks said, "and he said he was puttering around down in the cellar just before the fire when he heard somebody else. He said he called to him and the other guy said, 'To hell with it' and ran out the cellar door."

The victims apparently were trapped on the upper floors when flames spread inside from the rear porches and raced up stairways.

Want Legislation to Limit Number of Anglers for Char

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — Legislation to control the number of anglers allowed to fish the Tree River and other arctic char streams in the Northwest Territories is to be considered at a territorial council session in Ottawa in February.

A report tabled at the council session now in progress here refers to drastically reduced stocks of char in the Tree River because of large quantities taken by both Eskimos and by sports fishermen last summer.

"Numbers fishing the Tree River can be reduced to some extent by developing and promoting other streams but regulations controlling the number of anglers on the Tree River will be necessary because of its reputation and the fact that it is the closest good char stream to Great Bear Lake," the report states.

Fears were expressed last summer that the Tree River stocks of char would be depleted because of heavy traffic there.

The idea of having fishermen return all char "to the water after they have reached the possession limit has been scrapped. The report says there is a mortality rate of ninety per cent of only returned to the water by anglers.

"It has been proposed that anglers return only char to the water but that all fish caught in excess of the possession limit be given to the Eskimo camps to reduce the domestic fishery requirements," says the report.

The most promising way to deal with the problem was to establish one public and one privately-owned camp in each char stream. The angling quota would be divided between the camps.

This would cut out competition among sport fishing operators for main lodge and outposts camp sites in desirable areas. A series of sport camps within a few miles of each other would probably cause a rapid decline in fish stocks thus threatening the investment of each camp operator, the report says.

BISHOP DROPPED

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul has dropped Archbishop Pierre Martin Ngo Dinh Thuc, member of the former ruling family of South Viet Nam, from administrative authority over the South Vietnamese archdiocese of Hue. No new status for Archbishop Thuc was announced. Thus, apparently, he retains his personal title of archbishop of Hue without control over the archdiocese. Thuc, a brother of South Viet Nam's slain rulers Ngo Dinh Diem and Ngo Dinh Nhu, has not been allowed to return to his country since his family's regime was overthrown.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McColl with Mrs. L. E. Bryant and Mrs. G. R. Putnam spent the weekend with their daughter, Mrs. Al Leighton and family in Toronto.

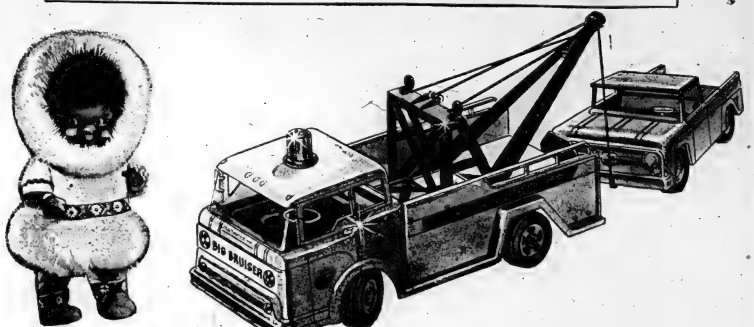
Mrs. Vera Teal was a guest of her aunt, Mrs. B. Bryant, and Mrs. Howard Arthur in Frankford on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Gooding spent Friday in Peterborough with her sister, Mrs. King and Mr. King.

GROUP HOMES WANTED

The Children's Aid Society would be pleased to receive inquiries from married couples in the Belleville area interested in offering group home living to three or four teen-age girls now enrolled in local schools. These are young people who, because of their previous life experience, are unable to accept substitute parents but who can live relatively normal lives in a group setting.

The family or families selected should be between the approximate age of 35 to 45, in good health and free from more than their rightful share of the pressures and stresses of modern living. Because of the needs of the girls involved, it is essential that the applicants do not have children of their own in the age group likely to be demanding of much of their energy and time. Of course, they must be genuinely fond of young people and able to demonstrate their fondness by acceptance, understanding and warmth of personality.



Since the family will be considered to be an integral part of the Society's child care program, professional counselling and direction will be regularly available. For their efforts they will receive adequate and mutually satisfying compensation.

Pen Pal Fastest Growing Form of Communication

By JACK HUTTON

Interested in taking a trip around the world for five cents?

You'll need one sheet of paper and an envelope. And the fare, collected in advance, is a five-cent stamp.

The fastest growing form of international communication doesn't lie in the United Nations or any other diplomatic organization. Experts say it consists of the pen pal movement.

No matches the experience of receiving a tissue-thin letter with a strange - looking stamp from an unseen friend who sat down to write to you days earlier in another part of the world.

Somehow, that corner of the world — Africa, Australia, the West Indies, South America, just name it — never seems as remote again. Because you have a friend there.

EXCITING

I'm unfolding today the results of several months' research to make available through this column exactly that type of communication. And I'll confess I'm a bit excited about it.

Volunteer workers with the Canadian University Service Overseas have arranged to send us names of interested students from their areas. You'll find the first of those names at the bottom of this column.

But we're not stopping here. Every week from now on you will find three or five names included in this column. As a start I'm offering you a new found friends in Jamaica and Ghana. I hope we can spread over the world before we're through.

I'm calling this Project Pen Pal — or PPP. If you have a better and less cumbersome name to suggest, I'd be glad to hear it. (I've already discarded Project Quill, Operation Pen Pals and several other titles.)

The stories that have unfolded from pen pal exchanges would fill several books. I've heard of people flying to Europe to attend the wedding of pen pals they've been writing to for a decade or more.

EVEN MARRIAGE

An American who had been writing to a friend in Germany for years helped him leave West Germany shortly before World War II broke out. Some people even claim they've heard of pen pals eventually marrying each other.

Somehow I hope they exchanged pictures before the fellow proposed.

I should say right now I can't claim credit for the idea. The inspiration for PPP came two months ago on a visit to Ottawa when I heard a friend describing a tour of African teachers' organizations.

Father J. H. Conway (I hope he reads the results of his chat) was talking about the aid pouring into new African countries from a variety of nations — China, the United States, the Soviet Union, Canada, Great Britain and many more.

"You know," he said, "I left with an entirely fresh idea of people. Foreign aid, no matter how generous, is always suspect in other countries. You can't blame them for wondering what's asked in return.

"But the words of a student miles away are never questioned. Letters from Canadians are excitedly received, read and reread, and passed from grade to grade in a school.

"I believe that the most influential ambassadors we have in Africa today are letters written by pen pals. It is a wonderful form of communication which can't help but increase our links with the new countries."

UNKNOWN COUNTRY

I was still mulling over Father Conway's words weeks later when I heard delegates to the Canadian Education Association in Winnipeg, Man., talking about the need for a different way of looking at the world.

"We tend to think of ourselves as a huge, powerful country," one delegate told me. "Sure, we have a lot of territory and untold resources. But we're pretty small and terribly young when compared with others."

He, by the way, suggested some other title for our experiment — Project Open Windows. Very apt, too.

I'm asking one favor if you take advantage of our list of names. Would you write to me, in care of this newspaper, to let me know what response you have? I'd like to know — and so would the rest of our readers.

Here is our first list. Good luck.

Techiman Secondary School, P. O. Box 85, TECHIMAN, Brong, Ahafo, Ghana — Samuel K. Akloo, Sampson Ampomah, Joseph Ameyaw, Simon Ameyaw, Stephen K. Anau, Stephen O. Adjei, Kofi Abu, Kwame Amoateng, George T. Amankwah, Jacob Adedokun, Peter Adedokun, Albert Badu, Lawrence Abrahene, Kwaku Boye, Ernest Bimpeh, Robert Danso, S. K. Effa, Edward Kodom, Joshua Ampofo, Stephen Marfo. (All the boys, average age 15, speak and write English.)

JAYCEE DRIVING TIPS

Driver training is a very important asset to teenagers of today. With the ever increasing number of cars on the highways today, the better the driver the better the chances for survival.

The need for driver training in our high schools can be proven by a number of drivers under twenty-five involved in accidents.

1. Most enforcement authorities believe that a driver who hits a car from the rear is: (a) not necessarily to blame, (b) not to blame under some circumstances, (c) only partly to blame or (d) always at least partly to blame?

2. If the braking distance at 20 miles an hour is about 20 feet, the braking distance at 40 miles per hour is about: (a) 40 feet, (b) 60 feet, (c) 80 feet or (d) 100 feet?

3. Keeping the minimum following distances, helps mainly in the prevention of: (a) head-on collisions, (b) chain-reaction accidents, (c) passing accidents or ((d) pedestrian fatalities?

Answers to the above questions: 1. (D); 2. (C); 3. (B).

Canada's supplies of newsprint to Britain will remain under the levy although Callaghan made exceptions of books, periodicals, ships and aircraft.

The 8,500,000-member Trades Union Congress described the budget as fair and "sensible" but some union leaders said—in a comment that sounded ominous for Callaghan's incomes-policy hopes — that it may lead to new wage demands when the tax increase is felt next spring just as union conferences are starting.

Callaghan predicted an overall deficit for Britain at the end of the 1964-65 year of up to £550,000,000, compared with the £791,000,000 predicted by the Tory government last April.

He placed at £130,000,000 the cost to the government of providing increases to Britain's 8,300,000 pensioners and beneficiaries of various types.

TUNIS (AP) — President Habib Bourguiba named his son foreign minister Wednesday in a Tunisian cabinet reshuffle. He replaces Mongi Slim. Labor Council Of Peterborough Protests Rates

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The Peterborough labor council will protest the scheduled 7 1 increase of Physicians Services Incorporated medical insurance rates.

A letter of protest is to be delivered to the provincial government by Keith Brown, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Peterborough.

The decision was made Tuesday night at a labor council meeting at which Arthur Thorpe, PSI enrolment officer, and Henry Welshbach, welfare director for the Ontario Federation of Labor, debated the proposed rate increases.

Mr. Thorpe said the increase was necessary to keep PSI from again going into debt. Although $50,000,000 was collected in subscriptions, $53,000,000 was paid to physicians for services. Administrative costs claimed 9.1 per cent of the balance, leaving a profit of $3,600 in addition to an unspecified reserve fund balance.

"No privately-owned and operated insurance scheme can fulfil the needs of the people of Canada today," said Mr. Welshach. Labor's greatest objection, he said, was that PSI "doesn't ask anyone" before increasing its rates.

Rates must increase in line with improved services, replied Mr. Thorpe. He said the hopes this would be the last rate increase for the next three years.

Tom Cirpoli, council member, said the impression that an subscription increased, rates would decrease.

Mr. Thorpe replied that PSI pays 90 per cent of prescribing physicians' fee schedules which are set by the Ontario Medical Association.

Man, Woman Killed in Two-Car Crash

LISTOWEL, Ont. (CP) — A man and a woman were killed and four St. Marys nurses were injured Wednesday night in a two-car crash at the intersection of Highways 19 and 56, seven miles east of here.

Dead are Mrs. George Bullen, 60, of St. Marys, a nurse and Clayton Querin, 59, of Guelph, a worker at a new Ontario mental hospital in nearby Wallace Township.

Most seriously injured was Mrs. Doris MacKay, who suffered a fractured left arm and severe head lacerations. Hospital officials today gave her condition as serious.

Mrs. Kenneth McRae was reported in fair condition with fractured ribs and other chest injuries.

Mrs. Oliver Bell suffered a fractured left leg and possible back injuries. Mrs. J. L. Little suffered a fractured right ankle and lacerations. Both women were reported in satisfactory condition.

The five nurses were on their way to a nurses' dinner in Listowel at the time of the crash. Mr. Querin was alone in his car.

Labor Govt. Wants Power To Retain Extra 15 Per Cent Import Duties Until Nov. '65

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—Britain's Labor government, unveiling its first budget, has asked for power to retain the extra 15-per-cent import duties until Nov. 30, 1965.

James Callaghan, chancellor of the exchequer, emphasized in his budget speech Wednesday that he intends to review the curbs next spring — indicating he may want to make some reductions or modifications at that time.

But he made it clear that the legislation for the surcharge might be renewed after Nov. 30, 1965, for a further period of not more than a year after next November.

The impression left in his speech is that he may not be in any hurry to lift the curbs completely despite heavy pressure from Britain's European trading partners who accused the Labor administration of the most wrecking the seven-country European Free Trade Association.

Hints of action against Britain continue to be voiced on the continent though no serious counter-measure has materialized.

Callaghan, however, yielded some ground by widening the list of exemptions. Added to the previous list of items such as materials and unmanufactured tobacco are books, periodicals, newspapers, ships of 90 tons or more, shipbuilding components and aircraft exceeding 18,000 pounds in weight.

But two specific items Canada had hoped to see included in the exemptions—wheat and planed softwood—didn't make it. As of last Oct. 27, they and other items whose producers are subject to the extra 15 per-cent tariff.

Callaghan insisted the higher tariffs are of "a temporary character" and that "we regard their protective effect as a serious disadvantage."

"It is not our objective to cushion British industry from competition; if British producers use the protective effect to raise their prices unwarrantably, then we shall ensure that the price review body which is to be set up will have the power to investigate and adjudicate on their actions."

The extra duties were under taken as an emergency measure to reduce imports and nur ture a critical international payments gap estimated at some £800,000,000 this year.

Imports were "swollen" by shipment into Britain of goods "largely of the kind we produce and export ourselves," Callaghan said.

He suggested that through next year's payments deficit will decline, it still "threatened to be disconcertingly large."

Thompson Looks At Canada's Aid to Kenya

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—Robert Thompson, leader of the Social Credit party of Canada who spent 15 years in Ethiopia as a headmaster and government education official is back in Africa on a factfinding mission for the Canadian external affairs ministry.

He is gathering the contribution Canada can make to economic and social development in the commonwealth countries here.

Thompson, who arrived in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia Wednesday, spent two days in Nairobi, in talks with Governor General Malcolm Macdonald and Kenya ministers and government officials on various aspects of Canada's aid programs.

"I want to find out how Canada's aid program is being administered and find out what other schemes might be financed efficiently by my government," he said.

Canada currently is giving technical aid to Kenya in education, forestry and geological survey. Twenty-nine Kenya students are studying in Canadian universities.

HAS TEACHERS, ADVISERS

In Kenya, Canada has specialist secondary school teachers, six technical advisers, five forestry experts and one fisheries officer who heads the zoology department at University College Nairobi.

Thompson, a member of the Canadian parliamentary committee dealing with foreign aid has carried out similar fact finding assignments in Ghana, Tunisia, Jamaica and other Commonwealth countries.

While in Nairobi he also discussed with the Governor-General and Prime Minister Jomo Kenyatta the fate of foreign hostages held in Stanleyville, in The Congo, by rebel forces More than 50 Europeans are being held by the rebels.

De Gaulle's Power Continues To Dominate Western Alliance

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President de Gaulle has scored a new victory in his battle for Europe—by braking West German acceleration toward the establishment of a NATO mixed-manned nuclear fleet.

The French president for some time has fought the United States - proposed nuclear force for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, fearing that such a force would confirm U.S. domination of Western Europe.

His latest battle was won in Paris where former chancellor Konard Adenauer of West Germany lent his ear to de Gaulle earlier in the week.

Adenauer, himself a staunch backer of the proposed nuclear fleet, returned to Bonn apparently under the spel of the French leader's power of persuasion and met with Chancellor Ludwig Erhard.

The result: A West German decision to stop pressing for the soonest possible creation of the force which would result in a multilateral nuclear fleet.

The West German decision came at a time when that country's defence minister, Kai-Uwe Hassel, was in Washington doing what he could to promote the cause of the nuclear fleet.

It also came at a time when the U.S. expressed willingness to delay a little the final signing of the nuclear fleet treaty—originally scheduled for Dec. 1—so Britain's Prime Minister Wilson could discuss the matter with President Johnson when the two leaders meet in Washington Dec. 7-8.

The statement Wednesday announcing West Germany's decision to stop pressing for the creation of the fleet strengthened, however, that West Germany continues to be ready to sign such a treaty.

The creation of the fleet would permit West German ships to be armed with nuclear weapons although the final decision to use the weapons would rest with the U.S. president.

France has argued that the establishment of an eight-power group to frame the conditions of the nuclear force treaty is a violation of the NATO principle of unanimity. The eight countries, all NATO members, are the U.S., West Germany, Britain, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium, Greece and Turkey.

French officials have described the proposed treaty as a blatant agreement between Bonn and Washington. They regard it as a threat to the independence of Europe because it would make West Germany dependent on the U.S.

France considers the proposed treaty incompatible with the year-old French - German treaty of co-operation and with the building of a United Europe.

West Germany on the other hand regards force—to consist initially of 25 surface ships manned by international crews and carrying Polaris missiles—as a further step in integrating German military forces with the Atlantic Alliance.

Failure to push the treaty through would result in a West German effort to obtain independent nuclear arms. Creation of the force would also likely result in a sort of NATO within NATO.

Britain's Labor government has indicated opposition to the force as currently conceived and will depend on the outcome of Wilson's talks on the subject in Washington next month.

Graduation Ceremonies Meaningless

TORONTO (CP)—Pianist Glenn Gould says ceremonies and speeches that are part of graduation ceremonies are meaningless.

Mr. Gould was addressing Wednesday night the convocation of graduates of the Royal Conservatory of Music from which he graduated 20 years ago.

He said he could not remember a word of what the guest speaker had said then.

"I have no reason to assume the years will deal more generously with my remarks to you," he added.

Hasty Pees Officer Appeals For Support of Regiment At Armistice Day Banquet

A high-ranking Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment officer last night confessed himself fighting mad about the recent militia cutback and its affect on the future of his regiment.

"We are bloody mad about it, but we are on the side of the fence where we have to take orders," Major Alex Cunningham, second-in-command of the Hasty Pees told an ANAF Armistice Day banquet.

He appealed to the assembled veterans to support the regiment—one of Canada's champion wartime units—to save it from creeping extinction.

Drawing his fire was last week's decision by Defence Minister Paul Hellyer to amalgamate all sub-units of the regiment with its Belleville headquarters in Belleville.

Six sub-units at Madoc, Port Hope, Millbrook, Norwood, Picton and Trenton were, in effect, disbanded by the nationwide militia reduction. Their armories also are being closed.

The next cutback would see the disappearance of the sole remaining Belleville unit—and the regiment, warned the major.

However, the regiment intends to fight for survival of its satellite companies, said Major Cunningham.

"We propose that the Hasty Pees will not die," the major promised. "We will bring them in (to train at Belleville) if it means we have to buy buses. We will train on weekends if necessary. We will parade in the high schools (in the affected areas) if they will give us the high schools to train in."

ASKS FOR SUPPORT

"The regiment," he said, "means to some of its sub-units because "whether the government likes it or not we are going to have a fighting force to support the regular troops."

He told the veterans: "We are asking that you support us 100 per cent with your sons, because your sons are nearly all of age for the militia."

"We are going to fight for this in my own small way. We need your support — we hope we got it."

Major Cunningham, a war veteran with a distinguished militia record in the Hasty Pees only this year was promoted to second-in-command. However, he personally also fails victim to the new militia scheme, which also sets the age limit for promotion to regimental commander at 40. This, he told the ANAF veterans last night was an age he was approaching and so he will never command his regiment.

"However, I can assure you there are enough younger people behind me to bring this regiment along," he added.

His straight-from-the-shoulder speech was a major highlight of the banquet, since he was presented only by formally represented the regiment.

Guest speaker for the evening was Wing Commander James Arnott, RCAF Trenton, whose speech made the veterans fully aware for the first time, of the huge role played by the airbase on their own doorstep.

SLIDES SHOWN

His remarks focussed attention on the immense task for which the Transport Command has been pressed into service on UN peacekeeping missions.

Slide photographs taken from the various areas of operation showed the unit girding half the globe in the cause of international peace.

In this mission, he emphasized, the RCAF is also "maintaining the best traditions of Canadian servicemen and, perhaps, enhancing them. And I can assure it will continue to do so any time the Canadian government decides our services can be used in these particular areas."

Chairman for the banquet was Dominion ANAF president, Jack Lundberg.

Prime Minister Promises Legion to Review Increases

OTTAWA (CP) — President Fred T. O'Brecht of the Royal Canadian Legion said Wednesday Prime Minister Pearson has promised to review the pension increase in war disability pensions announced Tuesday by the government.

Mr. O'Brecht, from Durham, Ont., made the comment in an interview after a delegation from the 285,000-member Legion made its annual submission to the cabinet.

The Legion brief described the increase, retroactive to April 1, 1964, as "grossly inadequate." Maximum disability pension is $2,160 a year plus $720 for the wife of a pensioner and $324 for one child.

Mr. O'Brecht said Mr. Pearson also promised to study the possibility of pre-dating the increase before Sept. 1.

The increase will not go into effect until approved by Parliament.

Mr. O'Brecht said the Legion received a "very kind hearing which leaves us hopeful that we will get what we hope to obtain."

The Legion asked for a maximum war disability pension of $3,900 a year with proportionate increases for widows and children.

The Legion president said the government had been "very kind" in increasing the rates and ceilings of war veterans allowances which cover 50,000 "burnt - out," needy veterans and 25,000 widows and children.

The Legion brief said more than 60 per cent of the 148,705 disabled veterans receive a pension of $1,296 or less a year—the maximum. For veterans in this group, the pension increase would be $3.60 a month.

The brief said 58,386 veterans receive a pension of 10 per cent or less of the $1,296 maximum. For 5,000 of them, the pension increase would amount to only 90 cents a month.

In 1920, the maximum pension was based on—and made the same as—the salary of a janitor in government service. Since then the pension rate had increased by 600 per cent but a janitor's pay had gone up by 388 per cent, the brief said.

"There is a tremendous gap," Mr. O'Brecht said.

The brief said none of the four previous pension increases granted since 1920 had been "so insignificant" as the one announced Tuesday.

In 1948 the basic pension rate had been increased by 25 per cent, in 1951 by 33 1-3 per cent and in 1957 and 1961 by 30 per cent.

The Legion asked that war pensions and allowances be adjusted automatically every two years according to advances in the cost-of-living index.

In one short paragraph, the Legion reiterated its stand in favor of the Red Ensign as Canada's flag.

"Our minds haven't changed and the prime minister was not surprised," Mr. O'Brecht said later.

Excise Tax Cut May Approach Two Billion

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson has decided to recommend a 1965 excise tax cut that may approach $2,000,000,000, it was learned today, spending money of almost every person in the United States.

Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, an overnight guest at the LBJ Ranch near here, reported Johnson had "tentatively" agreed to a basic decision to abolish all $4,500,000,000 of excise taxes added to the retail price of cosmetics and toilet goods, jewelry, luggage and pocketbooks.

These war-born taxes bear four previous pension increases

In addition, Dillon told a press conference, Johnson will ask Congress to cut the rate and reduce still other excise taxes that would add a good bit "more" to the total cut in the proposed tax cut.

Dillon said the maximum possible tax cut being would be $4,000,000,000, but he emphasized that such a figure was sure to prove too high.

At another point, he spoke of possible action on 65 to 70 different excise levies that net the government nearly $2,000,000,000 a year.

Dillon said he thought "this would be a rather easy bill to pass" in Congress and he expects the proposed tax cuts to take effect next July 1.

Hospital Engineers Vote to Strike

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Stationary engineers at Peterborough Civic Hospital have voted unanimously to go on strike if conciliation fails, Ernest Hedges, business agent for Local 796 of the International Union of Operating Engineers (CLC) said Wednesday.

Mr. Hedges said the strike vote was taken after six months of negotiations failed to produce a contract settlement. The two year contract for six stationary engineers at the hospital expired last month.

A conciliation board hearing was to be held Monday with the board reserving its decision.

Of the six stationary engineers employed, four work in the power house and two are on maintenance. Mr. Hedges said the hospital board is trying to eliminate the engineers on maintenance from the bargaining unit.

GIVES HOSPITAL VIEW

Max J. Swanston, chairman of the board of governors for the hospital, said engineers are needed to operate the power house, but "we don't feel we should have to hire engineers for maintenance."

Mr. Swanston said the hospital board would abide by the decision of the conciliation board. "We have always got along with the engineers in the past and we never came into the picture during our negotiations."

Mr. Hedges said neither the union nor the hospital board was bound to accept the conciliation board report.

"We can and will legally strike seven days after the board hands down its decision if there is no agreement," he said.

British Press Tastes First Budget, Disagree Whether Medicine Good or Bad

LONDON (CP)—The British press tasted the Labor government's first budget today and couldn't agree whether the medicine was bracing or repulsive.

"Hit for sixpence," was the Conservative Daily Mail's headline reaction to the decision of Chancellor of the Exchequer James Callaghan to add sixpence to the gasoline tax and the standard income tax rate.

The Labor Daily Mirror, stressing the benefits to widows and pensioners in the budget, displays "realism, at long last."

"The emergency budget has turned out to be straightforward," says an editorial in the Financial Times, speaking for Britain's business and financial circles whom the general reaction was: "it could have been worse."

The newspaper says Callaghan is gambling on the hope that Britain will soon evolve a workable incomes policy to offset the inflationary aspects of his measures.

The Conservative Daily Sketch says: "This is a bad budget."

But the Liberal Manchester Guardian comments: "The government has given itself the breathing space it needs to prepare its incomes policy, to pave the way to greater industrial efficiency and to promote growth."

The Conservative newspapers attack Callaghan's decision to increase the tax and the price of gasoline as "reactionary and old-fashioned." They say it is a return to the "stop-go" fiscal policies of the previous government the Labor spokesmen have repeatedly deplored.

"The more generous welfare and pensions will be welcomed," says the Daily Mail. "Most of the chancellor's other proposals are fair, logical and old-fashioned."

The Independent London Times concludes: "In general these measures will provide certain relief for those who believe Labor's policies are rooted in the past."

But the country there was immediate and shocked reaction to the increase in gasoline and diesel oil costs. The extra sixpence a gallon will add about £10 to the average motorist's annual bill.

A spokesman for Britain's Road Haulage Association, representing the trucking industry, said the increase will push up costs by £4,000,000.

Here's to Middle Age

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Signs of middle age:

You're busier fighting old bad habits than acquiring new ones.

If anyone asks is it hot enough for you, you have an urge to grab him by the lapels and tell him about the heat wave back in 1925.

Teen-agers look a lot bigger than they did when you were one.

You spend more time in doctors' waiting rooms than you do in night clubs.

Every year you admire your own parents more as you realize how much smarter they were about raising children than you are.

You wouldn't buy a ticket to see the moon if they were selling at three for a quarter.

Getting to work on time isn't much trouble anymore because you rather like to get up earlier in the morning.

Everybody on the highway drives like an idiot except you.

When you see two young people in love you thank heavens you didn't act that silly when you were that age.

Instead of thinking of old age as beginning around 90, you push its onset up to 70 or 75.

There don't seem to be as many bluebirds around as there were years ago.

The only government aid program you're wholeheartedly in favor of is one that will benefit anybody over 40.

At a baseball game you have only one hot dog—if any—because you know two might upset you.

Most of your daydreams are spent in reminiscing, not building castles in Spain.

Next year, you decide, you'll set out fewer tomato plants in the garden —and plant a shorter row of string beans.

At cocktail parties you ration yourself to two martinis, and give up betting strangers that you can beat them at Indian hand wrestling.

Everybody on the highway drives like an idiot except you.

When you see two young people in love you thank heavens you didn't act that silly when you were that age.

FRIENDLY READING

A letter from an old friend makes you feel sentimental (after you have opened it and found he isn't trying to borrow money), and you save it for days and read it over and over.

At work you make fewer round trips to the water cooler. The gang that hangs around there dispenses nothing but tired office gossip—you've heard it all before.

When you wake up feeling like a million dollars, you look for a reason.

You get along fine with your old neighbors, but when they move away you make up your mind to put up a picket fence. Never can tell what the new neighbors will be like.

That's middle age. At least those are ways to tell it—in the other fellow.

STUDENT PRIEST AT U.C.W.

Last Sunday a unique event took place at Johnstown and North Treston United churches when a student from Holy Cross Seminary of St. Genevieve, Quebec took part in the services at these churches. Robert Maclaray who was originally from New Brunswick is studying to be a priest at the Seminary. Three students were sent to Ontario as a test. They attended theology lectures at Queen's University, attended a football game and were billeted with Protestant families.

The minister of the church Brien Thrasher invited the young student to his home and to take part in the church services. Mr. Maclaray expressed his appreciation of the kindness shown him at both churches. It is hoped these visits will establish better relations between the people of Ontario and Quebec.

"Let me get this straight: you can't keep from playing practical jokes even about serious matters. Correct?"

WELSH MOUNTAIN — This is the summit of Mount Snowden, in North Wales, Britain's second-highest peak. Climbing Mt. Snowdon

Historic British Peak

By ALAN WALKER

LLANBERIS, Wales (CP)—When you're trudging up a mountain, there's nothing more embarrassing than being passed by a sheep.

The 3,560-foot Snowdon in North Wales is Britain's second-highest peak (4,406 - foot Ben Nevis in Scotland is the tallest) and anybody getting within a few miles of it cannot seem to suppress the urge to reach the top.

The first couple of hundred feet are easy. You can drive.

Then the real fun starts and soon this reporter learned he wasn't as young as he used to be.

"Now we'll just sit down on this rock and admire Llanberis in the valley."

An athletic Scotsman trots by carrying his fat son on his back. A twinge of conscience. A sheep passes upwards. A man of 60.

Ignore them all—the guide book tells of a mountain railway to the top. That sounds like a fine idea but, reading on, one finds the train since its inception in 1896 "has brought the summit within reach of many to whom age and infirmity have made the journey on foot impossible."

Complete mortification. Start off again wheezing against the wind and dreaming of strong Welsh ale in snug pubs down the valley. Pray for mist to settle in, forcing all climbers back.

CHILLY CLIMB

Surely if the ancient Celts wore nothing but woad—blue paint—and could climb Snowdon's Y Wyddfa peak, a Canadian parka should be sufficient protection against the chill today.

And so, still shivering, you press on. And to help forget the ache in your legs you strike up the traditional Snowdon song to the tune of "Men of Harlech":

"March up Snowdon with your woad on.

"Never mind if you get rained or snowed on.

"You won't need a button sewed on.

"When you're wearing woad."

After 1,000 feet, you swallow pride, skip merrily back to pub and nurse aching muscles.

The old Welsh knew Snowdon as the "eryri" or high land. Its massif, mainly of slate and porphyry, forms a cluster of five peaks linked by sharp ridges. There are fine escarpments in all directions but especially to the east where Lake Glaslyn and Lake Llydaw are dominated by sheer rock walls.

Snowdon was long venerated by the British, and in Celtic folklore Rhita Gawr the giant, King Arthur and Vortigern all are connected with these peaks.

VIEW IS MAGNIFICENT

Llewelyn ap Gruffydd, the last free prince of Wales, retreated to the topmost peak with his army twice before being defeated by Edward I of England in 1282.

Lazy tourists who quail at the rock footpaths stretching far upwards are tempted by local inhabitants who claim that the view from the peak on a clear day is truly magnificent.

It includes the whole hill system of north Wales, the Irish Sea to the west and 20 mountain lakes.

A side amusement is the sheep that seem to live on all Welsh mountains. They gambol and leap without a care for perilous gullies and razor-sharp crags. Yet these are the same sheep that, if you meet them on a highway, refuse to budge.

In fact, a local tradition says the only way to get them to scamper away is to walk up quite close and whisper, in Welsh: "mint jelly."

There are six safe and well-marked pedestrian tracks up various portions of the peaks. Average ascent time is three hours. However, Snowdon is subject to sudden mists and sometimes people get lost among the rocks. The sheep eventually rescue them.

'Gumper' Returns To Stop Hawks 4-1

Ontario Intelligencer SPORTS

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Football will steal the sportlight this weekend with both the eastern and western semi-finals getting under way on Saturday.

Here in the east, Frank Clair will attempt to keep his Ottawa Roughriders going strong in their first of a two-game, points-to-count series against the powerful Hamilton Ti-Cats.

Russ Jackson and his mates had no problems with Montreal last weekend but the Ti-Cats will prove a different story. Hamilton always comes up with the tough, solid football as the season progresses and by playoff time—look out.

The outcome of a football game depends on so many things that to the uneducated, (us, not you), to try and pick a winner is a risk made simple only by the fact that your chances are 50-50, even if you never heard of the game before. After all, there are only two teams involved.

If we had to bet, it would be for the Ti-Cats to win a close one in Ottawa Saturday and a more decisive one in Hamilton next week.

Out west, our heart is with the British Columbia Lions, but for sure they will need more than that to defeat the Calgary Stampeders.

Coach Bobby Dodds had his men hungry, hungry, hungry against the Saskatchewan boys the other night, as the 51-6 score indicates. Dobbs claims the Stamps will do the same to the Lions in their two-of-three set.

We'll call the Lions in three, then on to Toronto for the Grey Cup ding-dong against Hamilton on November 28th.

★ ★ ★

A couple of district OHA groupings are having their troubles, according to district press and the old hockey grapevine.

What was shaping up into a comfact four-team intermediate grouping began to fade when the proposed Belleville entry was forced to withdraw.

The withdrawal left Picton, Trenton RCAF and Napanee in the Lakeshore loop's eastern section.

Now word has it that Napanee has folded its tents and crept silently into the night, leaving Picton and the RCAF Globetrotters holding the bag.

Trenton has been rumored to be seeking entry into the Ottawa Valley or Eastern Senior League, whichever you might call it. We were told at Memorial Arena last Friday that the Globetrotters had been accepted, along with a team from Quebec, and that the loop was being divided into two sections. Trenton was said to be grouped with Kingston, Brockville and a third team, the name of which evades our memory at this time.

However, that league opened its schedule last week and we have heard no official word about Trenton joining the action. OHA vice-president Jack Devine could cast little light on the subject earlier this week.

He confirmed that Napanee was "likely out of the picture," but said Picton was still working out and that he did not think the Globetrotters had been accepted into the Eastern League. An attempt to reach team officials yesterday failed.

One thing sure, Picton and Globetrotters are going to get good and tired of each other if they are the only two intermediate teams in this area.

The possibility of the Lakeshore League's western teams playing inter-locking games is still present but not too hopeful from what we can learn. The smaller western towns were very happy when the easterners were ready to play by themselves down this-a-way. There is little reason to think they have changed their minds now. Centres such as Cobourg and Port Hope find it difficult, with straight home-brews clubs, to compete against the more powerful teams like the Trotters.

And word has it, too, that Stirling is on the verge, or has, dropped out of the Trent Valley Senior "B" grouping, involving Wellington, Tweed and Bancroft.

Wellington is said to be unhappy with the prospect of playing in a three-team setup and if the Stirling rumor is true, that also may send the Wellington boys looking for greener pastures.

Also asked about this matter, Devine said the Stirling story was exaggerated and that as of Monday of this week, he expected an entry from there.

Local junior clubs, including Belleville, are keeping a close watch on the situation, ready to pick up the best of the youngsters if some of the "D" clubs do fold.

Leagues planning to operate with just four entries are always skating on pretty thin ice. Trouble in one spot makes things rough for all centres concerned.

BASEBALL VET DIES

DETROIT (AP) — Oscar Stanage, 81, a survivor of Detroit Tigers baseball championship teams of the 1907-08-09 era, died Wednesday after a long illness. Stanage, who began playing baseball for money while still a student at Saint Jose High School in California, was Detroit's regular catcher from 1909 through 1920.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It took Gump Worsley a year, but he finally made the return trip to the big time.

Twelve months ago the pudgy netminder was shipped out to the minors through no fault of his own. Sidelined with an injury, he watched Charlie Hodge steal his job and keep it all season.

Now the skate is on the other foot. Hodge is on Montreal Canadiens injured list and Worsley is making gestures towards recapturing his old position.

The Gumper, playing his first National Hockey League game in a year, turned in a superb performance Wednesday night and sparked Montreal to a 4-1 triumph over Chicago Black Hawks. The win was Canadiens' first in five games.

Toronto Maple Leafs meanwhile, snapped Detroit's unbeaten streak at nine games with a 3-1 victory and New York Rangers trounced Boston Bruins a 4-2 setback in the other two NHL games played.

The results left Detroit atop the standings with 16 points while Montreal and Toronto closed in with 14. New York jumped into fourth with 13 points, leaving Chicago behind with 11 and Boston deep in the cellar at six.

Claude Provost powered the Montreal attack with a goal and three assists while Worsley half the Black Hawk off in the first period and stopped several dangerous shots in the finale.

Ralph Backstrom, Dave Balon and Gilles Tremblay tallied for Montreal in the second period. Balon got the winner after Phil Esposito of Chicago tied the score briefly in the middle frame.

Provost's goal, his seventh of the season, came near the end of the opening game, which saw Referee Bill Friday hand out 19 penalties.

Worsley, who has pe formed brilliantly with Quebec Aces as they made a run-away of the American Hockey League race, came up with spectbecular saves as the Hawks pressed late in the game. He was exceptionally sharp on drives by Bobby Hull, Johnny McKenzie and Chico Maki in the closing minutes.

At Toronto, Jim Pappin left the bench for the first time in several games and scored the goal that beat the Wings midway through the fina. period. Don McKenney counted for Toronto in the second and Bobby Pulford scored into an empty Detroit net with nine seconds left in the game.

Bruce MacGregor has given Detroit a 1-0 lead in the first period.

Toronto's Terry Sawchuk, playing in the nets against Detroit for the first time since they surrendered him in last summer's draft, turned back 30 of the Wings 31 shots with a crowd of 14,155 cheering all the way.

Detroit's Roger Crozier also stopped 30, but gave up three goals for the second time in as many nights. However, he remains the league's hottest netminder.

Jacques Plante was in goal again for New York as the Rangers capitalized on two-goal performances by Camilie Henry and Earl Ingarfield to climb into a contention for a playoff position.

Although outshot 34-29 by the Bruins before 13,892 New York fans, the Rangers grabbed a 3-1 first-period lead and were in command most of the way.

Wayne Rivers tallied his first NHL goal for Boston in the opener and Johnny Bucyk narrowed New York's lead to 3-2 at 10:34 of the closing period. But Ingarfield spoiled Boston's attempt to tie with his second goal, into an empty Bruin net.

Henry, who has scored five of the Rangers last eight goals, was at the tip-in best. He deflected shots by Rod Gilbert and Harry Howell past Boston's Ed Johnston.

Plante, playing his second game in place of injured Marcel Paille, turned away 16 shots in the first period to keep New York in the lead. His second straight fine performance followed his 1-0 shutout over Toronto last Saturday.

N.H.L. Scoring Statistics

Provost's output gave him a total of 13 points — second highest in the league and five assists for 18 points — tied at that number are Frank Mahovlich of Toronto and Stan Mikita of Chicago, the leader with 20 points, was blanked Wednesday night.

OMHA Openers

Minors Score Win, Tie

Belleville teams gained a victory and a tie as the O.M.H.A. swung into action with a pair of scheduled games here at Memorial Arena last night.

The Bantam Oddfellows blanked Gananoque 4-0 while the midget Oddfellows played to a 3-3 tie with Gananoque.

In a couple of exhibitions, the novice Rivertons downed the peewee Bruins 5-3 and Napanee edged Belleville's Rollins' peewees 6-3.

The next OMHA play involving Belleville has Rollins' peewees at Picton Saturday and Wellington here against the juvenile Travellers on Sunday.

The bantam Oddfellows broke a scoreless tie with two second-period goals last night, then sewed up the decision with another pair in the third.

R. Janisch scored Belleville's second and fourth goals while J. Lumsden got the first and D. MacCormack the third. D. Hutchinson and A. Jones earned one assist apiece.

Goal scoring in the midget game was in the opening period.

John Holgate fired both Belleville markers. Cal Wilson assisted on both and Tom Rosher on one.

Kelly Adair and Fred O'Donnell scored for Gananoque. Assists went to J. Shine, A. Walker, Barry Dickson and J. Robinson.

There were four penalties scored in each of the games.

On the exhibition front, Napanee topped Rollins with a single goal, by M. Garrison, in the third period. Earlier, Elder, D. Johnston and Brinklow had scored for Napanee. Buchanan, T. Meagher and R. Meagher had scored for Belleville to make it 3-3. R. Meagher and Buchanan also got assists.

Jeff Dalton scored all three Bruin goals in the third beat but it was not enough to overcome the Riteway's earlier 5-0 lead. Morton got a Bruin assist.

D. Lupenette was a two-goal man for the novice crew. D. Smith and T. Smrke each had a goal and assist. G. Coogan got a goal and J. Richardson an assist.

End Comes For Reds' Fred Hutchinson

Died Of Cancer

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Fred Hutchinson, former manager of Cincinnati Reds whose baseball career was ended abruptly by chest cancer, died early today in a hospital.

The 45-year-old Hutchinson showing some improvement, was allowed to go to his home on nearby Anna Maria Island last Saturday. But his condition deteriorated rapidly and he was returned to the hospital in an ambulance Tuesday.

With his health failing fast, he had stepped down Oct. 19 as manager of the Reds. The job went to Dick Sisler, who became acting manager when Hutchinson went on sick leave Aug. 13.

Hutchinson, baseball's Manager of the Year in 1957 for his second place finish with St. Louis Cardinals and again in 1961 for a pennant winner at Cincinnati, felt the first pain of his illness last Christmas.

Hospital tests confirmed the presence of a malignant tumor, but he continued to direct the Reds until illness forced him to quit.

CALLED 'THE BEAR'

Hutchinson, sometimes called 'The Bear because of an explosive temper, flew to Seattle last Dec. 24 for a two-month series of hospital treatments.

He reported at Tampa, Fla., Feb. 29 for the opening of the Reds' spring training camp, but by July was forced to pass up road trips to Milwaukee and

FRED HUTCHINSON

St. Louis and enter a hospital in Cincinnati.

He took another leave Aug. 13 to enter hospital in Cincinnati and never returned to his job.

Before becoming a manager, Hutchinson was a successful pitcher in the minors and with Detroit Tigers. His major league record of 90 wins, 71 losses, might have been better had he not missed four seasons, 1942 through 1945, in military service.

As a manager, Hutchinson was sometimes rough and tough, sometimes cool and patient.

FURNITURE SUFFERED

When his temper flared, he took it out on the furniture in his cinbboose office, not the players.

Later, he would get together with offending players, one at a time, for a private discussion of their faults. Because he never exposed one to public embarrassment, all his players liked him.

Hutchinson, a native of Seattle, won 25 games for Seattle of the Pacific Coast League in his first year as a pitcher.

His best pitcher years at Detroit were 1943, when he was 15-7, and 1950, when he was 17-9.

On July 2, 1952, he replaced Red Rolfe as manager of the Tigers. In the next two years, his teams finished sixth and fifth and it was back to the minors in 1955 as manager of Seattle.

Seattle won the pennant that year and from 1956 into the 1958 season he managed the Cardinals. They finished fourth in 1956 and second in 1957. Once again, he went back to Seattle in 1959, but he moved to the Reds on July 3.

A sixth place finish in 1960 was followed by a pennant in 1961, although the Reds lost to the New York Yankees in a five-game World Series. The Reds were a close third in 1962 and fifth in 1963.

After taking over the Reds' management, Sisler called Hutchinson in Florida to tell him that he hated the condition under which he got the job.

"Don't worry about that," Hutchinson replied. "Just give 'em hell."

Scoring Champs Named

MONTREAL (CP) — Halfback Vince Thompson of Ottawa University Gee Gees and fullback Mike Sommerville of Bishop's University, of Lennoxville, Que., are the 1964 divisional scoring champions in the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Intercollegiate Football Conference.

Statistics released Wednesday show that Thompson, third-year science student, won the western-division title with 69 points on 10 touchdowns and nine converts.

Sommerville led the eastern section with 42 points on seven touchdowns as Bishop's went undefeated in four conference games. The Gee Gees played seven games as western members of the conference play an interlocking schedule with the Ontario Intermediate Football Conference.

Divisional champions Bishop's and Gee Gees meet Saturday in Ottawa in a sudden-death final for the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Conference championship. Defending champion Gee Gees won five games and lost two during the season. The two teams are the highest scoring teams in the history of the conference.

Ottawa averaged 29 points a game and Bishop's scored at a 35.5-points-a-game clip.

Clay, Liston Sharp Sparmates Take Beating

BOSTON (AP) — Champion Cassius Clay is laughing at the boxing writers and other so-called experts who have installed challenger Sonny Liston as the favorite for their heavyweight championship bout Monday.

"A thousand newsmen picked Liston before the last fight," he jeered, "but what happened?"

He noted Liston has been installed the favorite again and asked

"Don't they ever learn?"

Clay, who prefers the name Muhammad Ali, insisted Wednesday he will have the last laugh.

"Liston's a slow, old man," Clay said. "I can cut him easy. I'll slice his face up."

Clay showed no sign of humor while going four rounds with his favorite sparmate, Cody Jones. Clay picked up the pace from previous workouts and really took after Jones in the last round.

Jones was dazed when the handlers stepped in to halt the action for the day.

Liston boxed five rounds Wednesday, giving him a total of 148 since he started training for the attempt to recover the crown he lost in Miami.

The challenger also, went one of his sparring partners, Amos Lincoln, knocking the latter's headgear flying with a stiff rap to the head.

Lapse Proves Costly

Trenton Nips Junior 'B's' 4-3

A five-minute lapse in the second period cost Belleville "B's" the opening decision as the OHA Eastern Junior loop got under way in Trenton last night.

Trenton Apple Kings took advantage of the Belleville letdown to score all their goals on the way to a 4-3 victory.

The teams had battled on even, scoreless terms up until that point. Belleville chopped into the lead and cut it to 4-2 by the end of the middle frame, then added the lone marker in the third — but the damage had been done.

Belleville's first home game will be against the Napanee Legion Juniors here Friday night. Game time is nine o'clock at Memorial Arena.

Trenton held a slim 31-29 margin in shots over the route last night as both goalies played well. The losers' Moon was especially tough in the first heat to keep it scoreless.

Ross Copley broke the deadlock at 4:59 of the second, finishing off a play with Bob Brasier.

Then Dave Johnson took over and quickly made it 4-0. He scored the first of his three quickies on a solo effort at 6:23 then converted Rick O'Donnell's pass for his second at 7:00. O'Donnell and Don Morrison drew assists when he completed the Trenton scoring at 10:33.

Jim Rutherford started for Belleville in a losing cause, trigering all three goals.

The "B's" ace fired his first, unassisted, at 13:04, then connected with Larry Stewart to make it 4-2 at 14:44.

Rutherford struck quickly in the third, beating Ken Franks after just 40 seconds of play. Roy Maracle drew an assist on the play.

Belleville pressed for the equalizer throughout the third and attempted to get a sixth attacker into action in the final minute. The move backfired and Belleville drew a minor penalty for having too many men on the ice at 19:40. The extra Belleville player had raced on before Moon reached the bench. That killed the final opportunity.

Belleville gathered 11 penalties and Trenton seven. At 14:32 of the first, the "B's" lost Bob Boyle through a game misconduct when he argued a minor penalty given to Rutherford.

In the third, Dale Lewis and Bill Lang picked up fighting majors at 4:43 and the two Stewarts had roughing minors together at 8:02. Later, L. Stewart served his club's too-many-men penalty.

BELLEVILLE: Moon, Boyle, Esther, Rutherford, Hagerman, Fleming, Pole, Maracle, Townsend, Woodcock, Pringle, L. Stewart, Boomhower, Lang, White.

TRENTON: Franks, Hutchinson, Brasier, Quigley, Genereaux, Lewis, Johnson, Morrison, Stevenson, Glover, O'Donnell, Rogers, G. Stewart, Gibbons, J. O'Donnell.

Leaves Gun Bow Behind

Kelso Cops International Win

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Kelso, the mighty seven-year-old gelding, stormed through the stretch for a 4½-length victory over fellow American Bon Bow and then withstood a claim of foul to take the $150,000 Washington, D.C. International at Laurel Wednesday.

Kelso, under the lashing ride of Ismael Valenzuela pulled away in the final one-eighth mile for an American record performance of 2:23 4-5 for 1½ miles over a grass course. But it was not until 30 minutes later that the official sign was posted and the crowd of 37,800 went into hysterics.

Walter Blum, astride Gun Bow, claimed that Kelso and Valenzuela cut him off as they made the final turn into the home stretch.

Kelso returned $4.40 $2.40 and $2.40 for a $2 bet. Gun Bow paid $2.60 and $2.20 after finishing nine lengths in front of Anilin, the Russian representative, who paid $3.80.

Kelso, already the world's leading money winning thoroughbred, earned $90 000 for Mrs. Richard C. duPont's Bohemia Stable and moved his bank account to $1,893,562. Gun Bow earned $23,000 and Anilin $15,000.

The victory virtually assured Kelso his fifth straight Horse of the Year title as it was his third decision over arch-rival Gun Bow in their five head-on meetings.

Back of the first three horses, in order, came Biscayne of Ireland, Belle Sicambre of France, Priordial of Venezuela, Veronese of Italy and Ryu Forel of Japan. Nearly 31 lengths separated the first and last horses.

Kelso's time bettered the American record of 2:24 2-5 set by Pardao on a downhill course at Santa Anita several years ago. He also wiped out TV Lark's track record of 2:26 1-5, set in winning the 1961 Internationa.

Kelso's time also was faster than the record clocking of 2:30 3-5 set at Laurel Park by Gallant Man in winning the Belmont Stakes in 1957.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Reid Ballentine of Bad Axe, Mich., won the featured $1,200 invitation trot at the Western Fair Raceway Wednesday night with his consistent trotter Bobby Reid.

It was strictly no contest for the four-year-old gelding. He was out of the gate first then settled into second place until just before the half when he went out to win by three lengths.

He went the mile in a rapid 2:07 4-5 and, as favorite of the crowd of 2,581, paid $2.80.

It was Bobby Reid's 24th win in 37 starts this year and his third in four trips at the London track. The win boosted his earnings for the season to $11,098.

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Elvia, a seven-year-old bay gelding, scurried home in front to capture the $2,000 Philip Frost Trot at Garden City Raceway Wednesday night.

Flash Song came out of the pack to grab second by a neck over third-finished Avalon Celia.

The win was the seventh in 37 starts for Elvia this season. The $1,000 which was his share of the purse boosting his 1964 earnings to $5,116.

For Michigan State
Hawaiian Kicks Barefoot!

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—It did the big game Saturday at South Bend, Ind., between topranked Notre Dame and rebounding Michigan State is expected. It may be decided by a Dick Kenney field goal.

That is, if Dick doesn't have a hangnail.

Kenney is Michigan State's barefoot kicker, a young Hawaiian who can punt the ball 60 yards on the fly and send it through the uprights from placement at midfield with his naked toes.

"I've been kicking barefoot since I was eight years old," said Kenney. "We have barefoot leagues in Hawaii, and many of the boys in grade school never wear shoes. It's just more comfortable for me."

Remember 1948?

Stamp Fans Catch Cup Fever

By BOB TRIMBEE

CALGARY (CP) — Since Calgary Stampeders set the East back on its heels and the Grey Cup on its feet with a special brand of western fun in 1948 and 1949, bad times and bad luck has blocked the trail East for the Cowboys.

Every other Western Football Conference club since has played in the Canadian final and as the years passed Calgary fans have become increasingly impatient for another opportunity to blow the lid off the Grey Cup festivities.

For many 1964 has started to take shape as the year Calgary finally got all the way again. Not a seat remained to be sold in 2,500-seat McMahon Stadium for Saturday's opener in the best-of-three final series against the British Columbia Lions.

Kickoff time is 4 p.m. EST and the game will be seen on the CBC's national network. The second game will be played in Vancouver Wednesday, Nov. 18 at 11 p.m. and the third, if necessary, in Vancouver Sunday, Nov. 22, at 8 p.m. Both Vancouver games will be seen on Canada's two national TV networks.

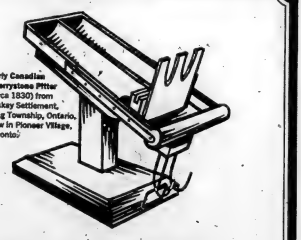
Monday, Calgary battered Saskatchewan Roughriders 31-6 to take the two-game, total point semi-final series 76-40.

And coach Bobby Dobbs is the first to admit an excited, shouting and cheering crowd Monday played a key role in building enthusiasm among his players.

"We could have overcome any deficit Monday. No club would have beaten us."

WINNING KEY TEAM

Dobbs, whose clubs have won more games in the last three years than any other team in Canada, said "our only problem for the final is to help our players recover physically from the hard semi-final. They really were hitting Monday night and they have the bumps and bruises to show for it."



As for such factors as records which show that first-place team—B.C. this year—usually reach the Grey Cup final, Dobbs said: "The semi-finalists have won before, haven't they?"

The club Dobbs will throw against Lions is one of his own making. Six players—linesmen Ron Allbright, George Hansen, Don Lutzi and Tony Palackowski and fullback Lovell Coleman—were here prior to his arrival in 1961.

On offence, the club is geared to the passing of quarterback Eagle Day; the receiving of end Pete Manning and flanker Bobby Taylor the power running of Coleman, Canada's top rusher this season, and newcomer Ted Woods; and the dominative work of Lutzi, linebacker Wayne Harris and defensive half and backup quarterback Jerry Keeling.

Dobbs is the first coach to have a winning season at Calgary since Les Lear did the job in 1948 and 1949 when Calgary won 22 consecutive league games and won one of two Grey Cup tilts, 27-7 against Ottawa Rough Riders in 1948, the year Calgary won every league, playoff and exhibition game it entered.

Under Dobbs, Calgary has won 43 and tied three games in 73 starts. Lear's five-year record was 44 victories and 4 ties in 79 games.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Greek Salt, a handsomely-bred colt owned by Toronto sportsman Conn Smythe, sped to a neck victory in the $11,500 Carleton Stakes at Greenwood Race Track Wednesday.

Second in the field of six Canadian - foaled two - year-olds over a mile of fast track was Flyalong, owned by Tom Hays of Oakville and D. B. Wilson of London, Ont. The favorite, Good Old Mort from the Toronto stable of Ed Seechouse, was third and became the first horse in Canadian race annals to reach the $100,000 mark in earnings as a two-year-old.

Greek Salt, with Jim Fitzsimons up, set the pace. He opened a good lead a furlong from the wire and fought off a stretch drive by Flyalong. Greek Salt was in a rubber match with Good Old Mort, in six previous meetings between the two each had won three times.

Smythe, former owner of the National Hockey League Maple Leafs, purchased Greek Salt for $9,700 at the Canadian Thoroughbred Horse Society yearling sales. Counting yesterday's $6,500 first-place purse, the colt has earned $35,485. In 5 races he has won seven and finished second four times.

Good Old Mort, a $4,500 purchase at the same sales, earned $1,900 for third-place money twice. His total purses to $101,455. He has won six of his 13 races and has been out of the money only

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Goalies have a tough enough job as it is but the new regulations, forcing them to get rid of the puck after they catch it, "unless they're in danger of injury," are really making them hustle this season.

Up until now, the referee used to whistle play dead when the goalie caught the puck and held onto it. Now, if the goalie "tickles" and doesn't play the puck, a penalty must be imposed.

The referees also are strictly enforcing the rule that he can't hold the puck more than three seconds.

As our goalie Roger Crozier points out, sometimes when he catches it, he hears the ice crunching behind him. He doesn't know if a teamate or a foe is coming up on his blind side. It makes it extra hazardous for him to get rid of the puck. He may plop it right on the opponent's stick.

Again, a lot of times he'll catch a puck and it hurts. So he'll hold onto it to give the hand a little rest rather than throw it down and get another shot right back in the same palm.

They're also strictly enforcing the rule against closing the hand on the puck against all players, except the goalie, of course.

A lot of times when there is a high spot or even a pass, it's a natural reflex action to close your hand on it for a split second. You make sure you've got control, then open the palm and let it drop at your feet.

Now the second you close your hand on it, they'll whistle you off.

Of course, there's an unfair advantage in reaching up and pulling a puck down, taking one stride with it, then setting it in position.

If you were allowed to do that, the game would begin to smack of basketball.

I think the goalies actually should be given the edge because they do have such a tough job. All NHL players received a little red book of rule interpretations and enforcement directives for NHL officials this season.

One of them spells out the fact a goalie isn't "fair game" just because he is outside his crease. "A minor or major penalty will be called in every case of unnecessary contact with the goalie" they warned.

In Chess Olympiad

Russian Champ Beaten

TEL AVIV (CP-AP)—Zvonko Vranesic of Toronto defeated Russian champion Leonid Stein in the biggest upset of Wednesday night's second round of the International Chess Olympiad finals here.

But the Canada-Russia score was reversed when Boris Spassky of Russia defeated Dr. Elod Mackasy of Vancouver, the former Canadian open champion, on board four.

In other second-round play, the United States scored a 2½-1½ victory over Romania to lead a western comeback.

Of eastern European teams, only Hungary won, by 2½ to 1½ over Yugoslavia.

West Germnay leads Bulgaria 1¾ to ½, and Argentina leads Czechoslovakia 2-1.

The Netherlands kept up its good form by defeating Spain 3-1. Poland leads Israel by 2½-½.

END IN THE

Earlier Wednesday, in the completion of first-round play, Canada and Spain ended their matches in a 2-2 tie.

Vranesic played to a draw against Spain's Jose Medina in the last of the four matches between the two countries, which had been tied at 1½ points each at the end of Tuesday's play.

As expected, the Soviet Union and other eastern European countries dominated play as the championship series got under way.

Surprise of the first round, however, was the success of the host country in taking one point off the Soviet Union before bowing 3-1.

World champion Tigran Petrosian was held to a draw by Israeli master Zadok Dominitz in an eight-hour battle. Petrosian offered the draw.

It was the first time in these chess Olympics that Petrosian had yielded half a point. Israel gained its other half-point by achieving a draw in one of its three matches against the Soviet Union Tuesday.

The 14 countries in the finals are participating in a round-robin series.

Nationals Blank Braves 4-0

WINNIPEG (CP) — Combining a tight defence with a potent offence, Canada's national team blanked St. Louis Braves of the Central Professional League 4-0 Wednesday night in an exhibition hockey game before 1,485 fans.

The Nationals buried the CPHL club 13-4 Monday night in the first of the two-game series here.

Tonight was the 11th of the 40 exhibition games scheduled for the Canadians, preparing them for the world champion ships being held March 4-14 at Tampere, Finland.

Against CPHL teams Nationals have a 6-1-1 record. They have also won two games in as many starts against Saskatchewan Senior League clubs and lost one game to New York Rovers of the Eastern Hockey League.

St. Louis goaltender Roy Edwards was outstanding as he made 45 stops while National's Ken Broderick blocked only 14 shots for the shutout.

Al Johnson scored two goals for the Nationals. Ron Fairn, Bill Reid and Roger Bourbonnais tallied one each as Canada counted two goals in the first period a scoreless second and added two more in the final frame.

The Braves took 14 of the 20 minute penalties meted out under international rules by referees Gord Kerr and Tony Schneider.

Retain Junior Title

Huskies Thump Montreal

By DAN POWERS

CALGARY (CP) — Edmonton Huskies, led by veteran quarterback Tony Rankel, thumped Montreal Notre Dame de Grace Maple Leafs 43-7 before 9,000 fans Wednesday to become the first western team to capture the Canadian junior football title three times in a row.

The distinction was gained at the expense of the Maple Leafs who the Huskies edged 7-3 in 1962 and bombed 47-3 in 1963.

Hamilton Wildcats set the pace for successive junior football titles, winning the honor in 1946, 1949, 1950 and 1951.

The Huskies, who built up a 33-0 lead before Montreal got on the scoreboard late in the second quarter, rushed 407 yards and added another 114 passing to earn the Regina Leader-Post Trophy, emblematic of Canadian junior football supremacy.

Rankel, who graduated from junior ranks at the end of the game, plunged two yards for one touchdown in the first quarter, completed touchdown passes of 14 and 12 yards to halfback Gil Mather and another 14-yard touchdown strike to halfback Gordon Lund.

Lund broke over tackle and raced 52 yards to score his first touchdown and added another on an eight-yard scamper in the third quarter to give him three in the game.

Fullback Ross Bradford bulled over from nine yards out in the first quarter. End Jon Sterling was good on five converts and passed to Bradford for another point after touchdown.

Montreal quarterback Sandy Purdie, who put on a dazzling late-game passing display, hit halfback Al Schreiber on a 10-yard touchdown pass, combined with halfback Bob Gardner on a 39-yard pass-and-run scoring play, and hit halfback Rick Fairbairn on a 14-yard touchdown toss. Quarterback Ross Johansson scored the other TDDG touchdown.

Guard Jim Hannett converted three of the Montreal touchdowns.

Snell Lowers 1,000 Metres World Record

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Peter Snell of New Zealand, Olympic medalist in the Tokyo games in the 800 and 1,500 metres, lowered the world record for the 1,000 metres, by one-tenth of a second today with a time of two minutes, 16.6 seconds.

The previous record, held by Siegried Valentin of Germany, was 2:16.7.

Snell already holds the world records for the 800 metres, half-mile and mile.

Montreal's Claude Provost, who scored one goal and helped set up the other three as the Canadiens dumped Chicago Black Hawks 4-1.

Camille Henry and Earl Ingarfield of New York, who each turned in two-goal performances as the Rangers handed Boston Bruins a 4-3 setback.

Jim Pappin of Toronto, whose third-period goal broke a 1-1 tie and led the Maple Leafs to a 3-1 victory over Detroit Red Wings.

Bears Stretch String

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hershey Bears are stealing some of the thunder from Bernard (Boom Boom) Geoffrion's Quebec Aces.

The Bears got off to a shaky start in the American Hockey League, winning only three of their first 10 games, as the Aces chalked up 10 straight victories.

But although Hershey trails the eastern division leading Aces by nine points, the rejuvenated Bears are out to prove they're also in the race.

The Bears won their fifth straight game Wednesday night, defeating Cleveland Barons of the western division 8-6. Hershey now has 17 points against the Aces 26 and hold a four point edge over third - place Springfield Indians.

In other action, Pittsburgh Hornets defeated Baltimore Clippers 5-4, and Rochester Americans edged Providence Reds 4-3.

HAVE 19 POINTS

Victory gave first-place Rochester 19 points, four atop second-place Pittsburgh in the western division.

Chuck Hamilton, Gene Ubriaco and Don Awrey counted one goal each for the Bears.

The league office will review a fight between Cleveland's Bill Needham and a fan, which broke out in the penalty box. The unidentified fan suffered facial cuts requiring 12 stitches.

Bob Dillabough and Ted Hampson paced the Hornets with two goals each while team-mates Lowell MacDonald and Murray Hall added the others.

Dave Creighton, Dave Richardson, Ken Schinkel and Dick Meissner replied for the Clippers.

Eddie Litzenberger, Dick Gamble, Bronco Horvath and rookie Peter Stemkowski were the Rochester marksmen. George Ranieri and Jeannot Gilbert fired a goal each for the Reds.

Harry S. Truman Making Formal TV Debut This Week

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — A peppery 80-year-old who has often appeared on television is making his formal debut this week as a television star. He is Harry S Truman, former president of the United States, and the name of his series is Decision: The Conflicts of Harry S Truman. Twenty-six shows already have been completed.

The reason the series—an examination of his major decisions during the eventful years in the White House — has been launched without the usual fanfare is that it is sold to individual U.S. television stations instead of to one of the three major networks.

Most of the 50-odd stations which have acquired the series have launched it this week, but on various nights and in various time periods.

Th Truman series has been a long time in the making. Originally, the former president entered into an agreement with producer David Dworkin to make 13 one-hour shows for network broadcast. Two were made and shown to the networks, which were not interested.

Truman, however, wanted a television series and ultimately the rights were acquired by producer Gene Ben Grafus was assigned to produce the series.

NBC has decided to stop two of the three comedies pulled together under the title of 90 Bristol Court. The first, Karen, will remain in its Monday night schedule, but Harris Against the World and Tom, Dick and Mary, both of which suffered badly in the ratings, will go. No replacement has been decided yet.

Also, NBC has decided to replace The Bill Dana Show with a half-hour western, Branded, starring Chuck Connors.

NBC's Bonanza continues to lead the most recent Nielsen ratings, which is the family's own yardstick of popularity. ABC's Bewitched is in second place and CBS' Petticoat Junction has jumped up into third position.

Recommended tonight:

Dr. Kildare, NBC, 8.30-9.30 EST — First of a three-party story set in Rome: Sophia Loren, Maximilian Schell, 10-11—special program with the Italian star leading a tour of the eternal city.

Terrell Wants Action

NEW YORK (AP) — Ernie Terrell's manager called on the World Boxing Association today to get its heavyweight elimination tournament going.

"We've made no deals with anyone and Ernie Terrell is ready to fight anyone the WBA designates for the vacant heavyweight championship," said Julie Isaacson, manager of the contender ranked No. 1 by the WBA.

Isaacson made the statement in replying to a charge by Abe Greene, commissioner of the WBA. Greene said Tuesday the boxing group's proposed elimination tournament was scrapped because the top - rated challengers refused a deal to take on the winner of the Cassius Clay - Sonny Liston heavyweight title fight at Boston Monday night.

The WBA stripped Clay of the title for failure for the title defence against Liston, the man he dethroned last February, in the rematch set for first fight.

The WBA, after stripping Clay of his crown, named Terrell, former heavyweight King Floyd Patterson, Cleveland Williams of Houston and Doug Jone of New York, to fight it out in a tournament to determine a successor to Clay. Since then, Jones, odstime top contender, has lost to Billy Daniels and Canadian heavyweight champ George Chuvalo of Toronto.

Paramount Party Draws Hollywood's Big Dealers

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It's the changing of the guard at Paramount.

Gone are the old-time moguls. In their place are the hard-working men who have climbed from the ranks.

Chicago - born Weltner, 63, started with Paramount 42 years ago in its processing lab on Long Island, New Yorker Koch, 48, began in the playdate and contract department of Paramount's New York exchange in 1954, and got a job as a film librarian at 20th Century-Fox in Hollywood in 1935.

In 1944, Koch graduated to second assistant director on keys of Tex Ritgdon and continued rising to become director, independent producer and head of Frank Sinatra's New York enterprises, his last post before his secondary at Paramount.

STAR ATTENDS

A sizeable number of the town's wheeler-dealers came to the party honoring Koch, including such stars as Sinatra, John Wayne, Yul Brynner, James Garner and Natalie Wood.

Among the dealers was the king of them all, Swiftly Lew Levine, whose marriage to Paramount has been blessed with a bright, newly baby (Lew's Carpetbaggers). Hal Wallis, partner with Paramount for New York, was present to make appearance.

Also present were such veteran movie makers as George Cukor, Frank Capra, Henry Hathaway, Howard Hawks, Otto Preminger, Mervyn Leroy and William Goetz.

No one can estimate how many deals were begun or concluded at the Paramount party. Enough power was present to finance and film 75 movies. Everyone seemed to be doing big business except the bartenders. With so much at stake, drinking is inclined to be cautious.

Clair Must Juggle
Scott, Tucker Are Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders' defensive team has sparkled in its last two games, and it will have to continue to muzzle opposition, teams if the Riders want to get into the Grey Cup final.

The Riders held Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts scoreless in their last two games, but when they meet Hamilton Tiger-Cats here Saturday in the first game of their two-game, total-point Eastern Football Conference final series may not have as much help from their offence as they would like.

The Riders still have quarterback Russ Jackson, fullback Dave Thelen and halfback Ronnie Stewart to carry the load, but they'll be missing regulars in the other two backfield positions.

Halfback Bo Scott, a late season addition, and speedy flanker Whit Tucker will be among the spectators Saturday, and Ottawa coach Frank Clair will have to juggle some defensive backs to help plug the holes.

Tucker's loss was expected earlier, but Scott was still a possible starter until Sunday night's workout when his injured ankle failed to respond to continued treatment.

SPARKS GETS NOD

Scott's absence means Clair will have to go with another Canadian, Rick Black, as a running mate for Stewart and Thelen. With Black as a starter, Ed Ulmer will take over as relief man for the offensive halfbacks.

Defensive half Tommy Neal, who managed only one game with the Riders before going into back trouble, will be back in the lineup, and Clair will respell Ulmer and Poirier when they see offensive action.

Hamilton coach Ralph Sazio has no worries about injuries after a two-week layoff but has kept his club working each day so "we're not going to Ottawa with any complacency at all."

Clair says ball control "will decide this one, and the" means we not only have to stop Hamilton more than we have but sustain our own offence "then we do stop them."

Buckaroos Take Over Top Spot

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

While Seattle Totems were slipping idle Wednesday night, Portland Buckaroos moved in and took over first place in Western Hockey League.

Portland moved one point in front with a 7-2 victory over the visiting San Francisco Seals. In the only other game of the night, Los Angeles Blades beat Vancouver Canucks 5-3.

Portland leads the league with 18 points, Seattle has 17 and Los Angeles is third with 15. Next is Vancouver with 14 points, four more than Victoria Maple Leafs. San Francisco trail, with only six points.

Cliff Schmautz scored the Buckaroos with two goals. Pat Stapleton, Andy Hebenton, Art Jones, Bob Ertel and Tommy McVie added the others.

San Francisco's only scorers were Charlie Burns and Art Nicholson.

Packaging Willie O'Ree led the Blades, scoring twice while team — mates Gord Haworth, Ian Wilkinson and Brian Smith got single goals.

Bev Bell, Bruce Carmichael and Howie Hughes scored for the Canucks.

Uranium Mining Pollutes Waters At Elliot Lake

No Immediate Danger But Fear Long Hazard

TORONTO (CP)—Some waterways in the uranium-mining area around Elliot Lake have been contaminated by radioactive waste that is threatening future use of the water, the Ontario Water Resources Commission says.

The commission said Thursday there is no immediate hazard for those in the area, but announced it is working with the Ontario health department on control measures.

The commission and the department "are concerned with the possibilities of a long-term (many years) hazard that could develop should the situation not be brought under control at this time," a report from the commission said.

"The measurements of radioactivity in water, in aquatic life, and in lake sediments have indicated that in some of the lakes, radium concentrations are approaching levels that may become serious enough to preclude the use of these lakes for certain purposes if the spread of contamination continues," the report said.

It did not specify what "certain purposes" the water might become unfit for.

THREE OPERATE

At one time, 10 companies were active in the area but declining demand for uranium ore has left only three still operating.

The mining companies used water from adjacent lakes and streams in the mining process. "Tailings", or leftovers of the mining process, contain a powdered radioactive material which can be dissolved in water and produce long - term contamination.

Ground water which became contaminated "is apparently seeping into the lakes, and quantities of tailings have also come in contact with lake water.

"The levels of contamination found in these lakes at present are regarded as transient rather than permanent," the commission's press release said, "and it is assumed these levels

Back in 1958 after the Faraday Uranium Mines commenced milling operations, a somewhat similar situation to that now reported at Elliot Lake existed in Faraday township in North Hastings.

The mine had commenced milling operations without application for permission to establish a tailing pond with result that some tailings escaped into a creek which ran into Bow Lake.

Tourist operators on the lake and cottage owners fought the matter fearing the lake might become unusable. The Ontario Water Resources Commission tested the lake and reported that although the water had become slightly hardened there was little radio activity.

However, the resulting publicity caused tourist operators to lose business and $90,000 in damages was awarded.

After this the mine company established a tailing pond the trouble was entirely cleared up and after 1960 the Water Resources Commission have shown no radio activity in the lake.

The Faraday mine closed down during the past summer and the mine tailing pond is now becoming solidified.

Fire Damages Mail Car and Bag of Mail

GANANOQUE, Ont. (CP)—A mail car in a Montreal-Toronto CNR express and one rail bag were damaged by fire early today.

Conductor Clarence Weese of Belleville noticed the fi.e about eight miles east of here and had the car sealed until it arrived here and the fire could be fought by the Gananoque fire department.

The fire, cause of which is unknown, started in the floor of the car. The floor was badly damaged and the rest of the car scorched.

ZOO CAMEL'S NECK IN SPLINTS — Fuzz, the 2½-year-old Columbus Zoo camel, survived a blow on the neck by another camel, Clyde, when "by all rights she ought to be dead," the zoo veterinarian said. Here Fuzz wears a proper neck splint and is recovering from severe tendon damage and separation of vertabrae. The spinal cord was only stretched, Dr. Lee Simmons, the veterinarian, said. Editors' Homes Damaged

QUEBEC (CP)—Police are investigating damage to the homes of two Quebec newspaper men, Jean-Charles LaDurantaye, managing editor of Le Soleil and L'Evenement, and Lorenzo Paré, editor-in-chief of L'Action.

In both cases, small containers filled with printers ink were thrown at the walls of the two houses and total damage was estimated at $1,000. Mr. de LaDurantaye's car also was splattered with ink.

Samples of the ink have been sent to provincial police laboratories to determine whether analysis will provide any clues as to its origin. No arrests have yet been made.

Threatening telephone calls also have been made to the homes of the two men and for some time food and electrical appliances they have not ordered have been delivered on a collect basis. Taxis also have shown up at the two homes reporting they had been given the addresses by telephone.

FOLLOWS EDITORIAL

The vandalism at Mr. Paré's home occurred after he published an editorial appearing a report made by Attorney-General Claude Wagner about events marking the Queen's visit at Quebec City, Oct. 10-11. The report said Mr. Wagner had not been able to find any evidence of police brutality during the visit. Mr. Wagner said he was unable to find any evidence that a drop of blood had been shed in the streets. He blamed extremist statements for the climate of tension that

Japanese Police Repulse Rioters Protesting A-Sub

SASEBO (Reuters) — Police today repulsed waves of more than 2,000 leftist rioters who tried to storm the United States naval base here in protest against the visit of the American nuclear submarine Sea Dragon.

Police said four demonstrators including a member of the Lower Representatives were arrested following new violence at three places near the base between police and the mob.

Police said about 1,100 Communists, 1,100 Socialists and labor leaders and 150 students staged snake dance and sitdown protests around the base this afternoon.

The 2,552 - ton submarine, which passed into its berth here Thursday, triggered off mass action by students, unionists and left-wingers.

Police said 37 policemen were injured and more than 50 demonstrators arrested in clashes in this southern Japanese port city, Tokyo and Kobe Thursday night.

The visit of the first nuclear sub to come to Japan was opposed by the main Socialist opposition party, the giant 4,000,000-member labor union federation Sohyo and many Communist-led organizations.

They claimed the ship symbolized the first step toward the introduction of nuclear weapons into Japan.

Sohyo ended such submarines presented radioactivity health hazards and turned the country into a provocative target.

House Names Members

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservatives and Liberals, at each other's throats much of this parliamentary session, joined Thursday night to lift the Commons over the most contentious of two hurdles in the constituency redistribution legislation.

An amendment to have the Commons Speaker appoint two of four members in each provincial redistribution commission was approved by a stand ing vote of 92 to 11, with the New Democratic Party charging the temporary truce was a product of a "back room" deal between the two major parties.

Still at issue when the debate resumes today is a clause setting out the tolerance levels to be used when determining the population difference between urban and rural ridings.

The appointments clause had hamstrung the legislation since last spring.

The original bill, opposed by the NDP, designated the prime minister and the Opposition leadfer to appoint two of the four members. The chairman would be named by the Supreme Court justice in each province. Fourth member on each of the 10 commissions would be Representation Commissioner Nelson Castonguay.

PARTISAN TINGE

The NDP claimed this left a partisan tinge to the traditionally - political job of redistribution and moved an amendment to have the Supreme Court justice name three members. So, every one takes us for granted."

United States Has Four-to-One Edge In ICBM's

Russia Maintaining Lead in Submarines

LONDON (AP)—The United States still will have more than a four-to-one edge over Russia in intercontinental ballistic missiles by early 1965 but the Russians may begin catching up after that, a leading Western research institute estimated today.

The annual review of the Institute of Strategic Studies also said Russia is maintaining its numerical superiority in submarine strength and "there are indications that the Soviet naval air force and missile-firing submarines are coming to play a more central role in her strategy."

The U.S. Strategic Air Command has clear superiority in the number of intercontinental bombers, the review reported, but Russia maintains a strong force of medium bombers capable of strikes at Japan or Western Europe.

STUDIES DEFENCE

The institute studies problems on defence, world security and disarmament.

It is a private British organization which has close ties with the British defence ministry and gets its information from a network of more than 30 correspondents around the world, many of them British military attaches. Earl Attlee, the former prime minister, is its president.

The review said the Soviet Union finished 300 intercontinental ballistic missiles — double the number a year ago — and this may increase substantially in 1965.

But, by early 1965, the U.S. will have 823 ICBMs, compared with 745 a year earlier.

"However, the report, said, "this may be the last year in which the Western superiority in long-range striking power is so marked as the American ICBM program becomes substantially completed next year, and if the Soviet naval shipbuilding is continued under Premier Alexei Kosygin and (first secretary Leonid) Brezhnev."

Trouble With British Honduras Is That It Is Too Well-Behaved

BELIZE, British Honduras (AP)—The trouble with this tiny British colony is that it's just too peaceful.

Independence is there for the asking, but no one seems in a hurry for it. This depresses the colony of international attention it craves, angering underdeveloped country."

It has no Communist threat. This disqualifies it for U.S. aid.

That, in sum, is how some British Honduras see them selves.

"We're too well behaved," says Prime Minister George Price. "We're not inviting Russia here to build bases and, instead of communism, we preach democracy and freedom. So, every with a huge following among the colony's women.

If he is single, married he'd have no party," a critic said.

Since 1960, Price has bossed the wedge of land jammed in between Guatemala and Mexico on the Caribbean coast. This is Britain's last colony on the North American continent.

Shipwrecked British seamen settled in what now is Belize, the capital. Although Spain several times sacked and destroyed the settlement, she curiously never bothered to occupy the area. Some 200 years after it was first settled, Britain got around to recognizing it as her own.

By right of succession, Guatemala now claims the colony. British officials, fearing the existence of Spanish sovereignty over the area, point to a treaty with Guatemala in 1859 establishing the existing boundaries. The Guatemalans say the treaty is not valid.

Also by right of colonial succession, Mexico claims the northern—and richer—part of the country, including Belize. But the Mexicans, openly sympathetic with local feeling against Guatemala, have let it be known they'll not press their claim unless there is any serious consideration of Guatemala's pretensions.

Prince Charles, 16 on Saturday, Highly Aware of His Position

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles—16 Saturday — is developing into an independent, conscientious and sensitive young man highly aware that one day he will be a king.

Prince Charles was ruffled recently when some newspapers accused him of adopting a Beatle haircut. He is reported to have said: "Beatle hair cut nothing. I was wearing my hair the way I do before the Beatles were heard of."

Charles is much in favor of the Beatles, however. More than a regular in the corridors of Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle and Balmoral Castle when nothing with the quartet's blasts.

When he is away from his school, tough Gordonstoun up in Scotland, the prince takes his Beatle records with him. He also owns a guitar.

Charles' head got him into trouble once before. When he was a student at Cheam School and was answering questions at a geography test, he is said to have told schoolmates: "That

The next thing Prince Charles knew he was getting the business, the traditional business for showing off.

He was thrown to the ground after class and several boys in rapid succession sat on his head.

At Cheam this ancient process is called "shrinking the nut," the nut meaning the head.

Pope Paul Donates Crown To Assist Poor of World

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul donated his gold and silver three-tiered beehive crown today to the poor of the world. Vatican officials said his action symbolized the concern of the Roman Catholic Church for those "who suffer" misery and hunger."

The Pope placed the tiara on an altar in St. Peter's Basilica during a special mass honoring ancient St. John Chrysostom, revered alike by Roman Catholics of the West and Orthodox Catholics of the East.

Archbishop Pericle Felici, secretary-general of the Vatican ecumenical council, announced the papal service that the Pope had decided to give away his crown after hearing the "many and grave words expressed in the council on the misery and hunger of these days."

During a council debate on modern world problems earlier this month many prelates called on the church to help achieve a balance in the world's wealth between rich and poor nations.

The crown is the one used for Pope Paul's coronation June 30, 1963. Studded with emeralds, diamonds and rubies, it was made for him by artisans in Milan, where he was archbishop before his election as Pope.

The 10-pound crown is almost bullet - like, with a slimmer, more modernistic appearance than the Vatican's other beehive crowns.

Its value is not known but is

-- Gordon

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Gordon said Thursday the economic challenges facing Canada require a willingness on the part of both government and industry to take chances."

"This is not the time for a timid, cautious or faint-hearted approach," the minister said in a luncheon speech to about 200 Ottawa accountants.

Mr. Gordon said he hopes the Economic Council of Canada in its year-end report on economic trends and problems up to 1970 will be "brave enough" to indicate in a general way the kind of policies it considers necessary.

Meanwhile, he said preliminary indications are for a "very substantial" increase in Canadian capital investment in 1965. This year estimated investment was up 15 per cent over 1963, largest year-to-year gain since 1956.

The minister said some Canadians have become "preoccupied in a morbid kind of fashion" with economic problems of the country. However, there were no greater cause for some cases smaller than the problems of other nations and they shouldn't frighten us or make us timid."

He listed four main difficulties:

1. The large Canadian deficit in transactions in goods and services with other countries, especially the United States.

2. Abnormal control of some key Canadian industries.

3. The changing nature of Canadian society. More and more people were in the cities, fewer on farms.

4. The need to work always for national unity.

Viet Cong Moves in After 5,000 Drowned by Floods

SAIGON (AP) — Communist Viet Cong guerrillas, capitalizing on the flood disaster, began waste to 10 provinces, are reported moving openly from the mountains into the crippled valley they left months ago. Viet Nam in which more than 5,000 persons have been drowned.

Refugees from the flood told South Vietnamese authorities they had been accosted by Viet Cong men and forced to tear up their identity papers. Widespread elimination of the papers would help the Communists to move with comparative freedom through the disrupted region.

The Saigon government can do little about Viet Cong activity in the flooded regions. Communications are disrupted and highways and railroad beds washed away in an area of more than 7,000 square miles. Two hundred miles of South Viet Nam's only north - south railway and the main-north-south highway are gone.

A U.S. spokesman said another storm is expected to hit the southern central coast some time next week.

Roads and bridges throughout an area of 7,000 square miles were washed out. Two hundred miles of South Viet Nam's only north-south railway and the main north-south highway were gone.

"This flood has hurt our communications more than thousands of tons of Viet Cong explosives could have done," a U.S. military adviser said.

"To rebuild all this will take large engineer units," said another American adviser. "If the Viet Cong tries to interfere with this work, very large numbers of security troops will have to be brought in to secure the engineers. This could be damaging to other areas if we have to divert troops here."

U.S. officials felt that the Viet Cong probably got off lighter because their base areas are on high ground.

Relief supplies were being flown in from U.S. bases in Okinawa and the Philippines.

The flood waters were receding slowly, but it was still raining in much of the devastated area.

The U.S. command in Saigon sent a team of logistic and medical experts to the scene. Vietnamese army helicopters were moved in, seeking to prevent epidemics. Technicians and disaster experts poured in from Saigon.

The government ordered all government employees and military personnel to donate one day's pay to the flood victims.

Mountain valleys and coastal plains were swept clean by the flood waters that poured down from the mountains after a series of storms. Entire hamlets of flimsy bamboo huts washed away without a trace.

Nichols Chemical, Sulphide, Will Close at Year's End Due Loss of Mine Market

Loss of a large share of its sulphuric acid market with the closing of the uranium mines at Bancroft will force the Nichols Chemical Ltd. plant at Sulphide to cease operations at the end of this year.

This was the disheartening announcement made yesterday by company officials in a bulletin read to Rungerford Township and Tweed municipal officials and to the Tweed Chamber of Commerce at a special meeting in the Tweed council chambers.

The bulletin stated company intention was to close the Sulphide plant on December 31st of this year.

65 EMPLOYED

When the plant closes, 40 hourly rated employees and 25 salaried supervisory personnel will lose their jobs, although some of the employees are expected to be offered alternative employment at other company plants operated at Valleyfield, Que., and in Western Ontario.

Nichols Chemical manager H. G. Knapp is in Valleyfield today but another company official, E. F. Arias, today confirmed yesterday's announcement.

"It will be a big loss to the area and to Tweed village," he said.

He said that company intentions are to close out completely the sulphuric operation at Sulphide, while the fine chemicals operations will be transferred to Valleyfield.

Nichols Chemical at Sulphide, about seven miles northeast of Tweed, is one of the oldest mining operations in the county and at one time when mines were being operated the number employed was far in excess of that today.

In recent years peak employment at Sulphide has been between 50 and 60 persons.

When the Deloro Mining and Smelting Company was operating much of the Nichols Chemical production of sulphuric acid went to Deloro.

Then, with the decline of this Deloro operation, opening of the uranium mines at Bancroft provided a new market and the chemical plant was able to continue normal operations.

However, since the closing will lose their jobs, although some of the employees are expected to be offered alternative employment at other company plants operated at Valleyfield, Que., and in Western Ontario.

GROUP HOMES WANTED

The Children's Aid Society would be pleased to receive inquiries from married couples in the Belleville area interested in offering group home living to two or three teen-age girls now enrolled in local schools. These are young people who, because of their previous life experience, are unable to accept substitute parents but who can live relatively normal lives in a group setting.

The family or families selected should be between the approximate age of 35 to 45, in good health and free from more than their rightful share of the pressures and stresses of modern living. Because of the needs of the girls involved it is essential that the applicants do not have children of their own in the age group likely to be the cause of much of their energy and time. Of course, they must be genuinely fond of young people and able to demonstrate their fondness by acceptance, understanding and warmth of personality.

Since the family will be considered to be an integral part of the Society's child care program, professional counselling and direction will be regularly available. For their efforts they will receive adequate and mutually satisfying compensation.

Printers Claim Offers Made To Quit Union

TORONTO (CP) — Four Ottawa printers testified Thursday their employers offered them wage increases, promotions and pensions on the condition they give up union membership.

The printers gave all members of the Ottawa Typographical Union which is seeking Ontario Labor Relations Board certification to prosecute two officers of intercity Typesetting Limited. The board resumes its hearing today.

The men said the offers were made in June, a month before the printers' plant closed down by President C. E. Stewart and Vice-President David Russell. The union claims the actions of the two executives breached five sections of the Ontario Labor Relations Act.

The printers said they were called into Mr. Stewart's office for individual interviews after they had refused requests to do work for General Printers Limited, another printing firm from which 25 union members were on strike.

OFFERED PENSION

Harold Parrott said Mr. Stewart told him July 22 that his company would fold if it did not do work for General Printers spoke and offered him, in the presence of Mr. Russell, a fully-paid pension and a $10 per week raise if he would agree to do work for General Printers.

He testified Mr. Stewart said: "You've got along without a union card." He said he refused the offer and was dismissed two days later.

Elvin Wilson, a deaf - mute, testified through written notes that Mr. Stewart offered him a $10 pay increase if he would leave the union. Printers Ernest Wright and Peter Scott gave similar evidence.

C. A. Morley, counsel for the two executives, said the suggestions that the printers were asked to give up union membership existed only in their minds. It was clear from evidence that Mr. Stewart's objective was to keep his employees doing work that was assigned to them.

He said there was no evidence to implicate Mr. Russell, since he merely sat in on some interviews while Mr. Stewart was alleged to have done the talking.

"Through Bible Lands" Vividly Portrayed at BCI By Dr. Charles F. Taylor

By A. HENDERSON

Last evening at the Collegiate auditorium the distinguished author, lecturer, and photographer, Dr. Charles Forbes Taylor, unfolded to the huge audience which filled every trenchant survey approximately by four thousand years of the "Greatest Story Ever Told,"—the life of Jesus.

Beginning with the progenitor of the Jews, Abraham, "Called of God from Ur of the Chaldees," observed — and try went out not knowing whither he went, "over the sandy deserts, through mountain passes, along valleys, until finally he arrived at the appointed destination—Palestine. Through the times of the patriarchs, judges, prophets and kings, to the birth of Christ, His ministry in Galilee and Judea, His death by crucifixion, and His resurrection and ascension.

The speaker, who was introduced by Reverend F. G. Colquhoun, minister of Holloway St. United Church, has had a remarkable career. He was born in Palestine, before his father's congregation; at nine years he gave his first speech to the audience of 2,000 and for the past 40 years has addressed a half-million people. He is also the author of ten books, and has his name in the United States Book Who's Who.

In replying to Mr. Coleman's introduction, Dr. Taylor mentioned that he had been a guest of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville; how honored he was to take part in their fine work of helping others, and happy in meeting unexpected friends.

DAMASCUS

Among the many scenes shown were those of Damascus, where the Apostle Paul was let down in a basket as a fugitive from the law when the people were after him; but now, Dr. Taylor said, he understood they have a street which retains as the task of climbing the steep stairs is no longer needed. In advance of all scenes, the mountain slopes; the same type which Solomon used in the building of the temple, wood which, after hundreds of years, will still be intact. Damascus is famous for its lovely gardens, and the street called "Straight." Here the native women make exquisite wooden shoes; weaving at hand looms, and the famous mosques with its beautiful stained glass window.

THE SMITTEN ROCK

The audience was led through the land of Moab; Aramon, and Gilead, where grow the balsam tree, which is known as the "Balm of Gilead"; along the Dead Sea to the ancient city of Israel; the rock that was smitten by Moses to give the thirsty people water, from which still flows out, a never - failing stream; the shepherds' cave where David hid from Saul; the land of Edom peopled by Esau's descendants; the tower-studded city of Bozrah; the rock which have chiselled steps leading to the summits; the burial place of Sarah, Abraham's wife, and his family are buried; along the land where Abraham made his fatal mistake; the hillside where David, as a lad, tended his father's cattle; and he pronounced the lovely psalms which he sang, accompanied by his harp; where he slew Goliath, the giant, in the wide field of flowers; Solomon's Pool, with its blue water from which spring water was pumped to Jerusalem; the Artesian fountain which is now being irrigated by boring 3,000 feet to the underground ocean, and concluded all vividly portrayed by accompanying 2824 references.

One of the outstanding scenes was the realistic and wonderful carvings in the rock at Petra, chiselled out from the mountainside. All the carvings, seen from time to time, were almost incredible in their fine work of detail. The place where Jacob wrestled with the angel; where his name was changed from "Supplanter" to "Prince of God", was noted.

The second portion of the travelogue, dealt with the coming of Jesus; the culmination of the faith of Abraham, — to Bethlehem in a tiny babe. Scenes were shown of Egypt where He was taken to escape Herod's fierce anger, and details in the home at Nazareth and the old carpenter shop where He learned the trade as an apprentice with Joseph; his work-a-day streets; the making of wooden toy farm and the people where Jesus read the Scriptures. The seas of Galilee where Jesus used to preach to the multitudes, with its surrounding towns of Capernaum, and Bethsaida where Jesus made his home, and the synagogue, the stones of which still remain with their hand carvings showing the Star of David, surrounded by the vine, the pomegranate, and flowers; the pool of Bethesda, the Wailing Wall, and Omar's mosque, the fountain, the beautiful garden of Gethsemane; Calvary, the Field of Blood, bought by Judas for 30 golden gains; and the Mount of Ascension where Jesus was caught up in a cloud.

These, with many others were shown.

The travelogue was fittingly closed with Rudyard Kipling's immortal poem, "When Earth's Last Picture is Painted" by the lecturer, with the lines, "And each in his separate star will paint the thing as he sees it, for the God of things as they are."

Thieves Are Disturbed By Plucky Housewife

The pluck of a young housewife yesterday may have saved an entire William Street apartment house from being ran sacked by thieves.

Police did not divulge her name but said she pursued two men from the building.

Although the pair escaped, detectives later found an automobile—with articles already taken from the apartment block.

The thieves had already ransacked one apartment in the building, when they were disturbed.

After leaving their loot in the car they returned to the building and knocked once on the door of a second apartment before slipping the lock.

However, the woman—wife of an airman stationed at Trenton—met them in the entrance of the apartment. Police say she was on her way to open the door in reply to the knock. Had the thieves passed a few more seconds before making their escape in the getaway car, they would have been seen by Mrs. Andra school grounds, with the men eventually outdistancing the woman.

Police said they were dressed like "business executives" and it's feared they may be from Toronto.

Many apartment thefts are reported "easy by the locking devices on most units—which can be slipped back," say police.

"Anyone who sees people loitering suspiciously around apartment buildings should contact us immediately," said detective sergeant Harold Reid.

Church Women Do Not Back Critics of CBC

TORONTO (CP) — The women's board of the United Church of Canada does not endorse a petition now circulating in Canada which criticizes the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the board secretary said Thursday.

Anne Ward said a letter was sent to the 102 presbyteries of the United Church Monday last; month, stating the board's position on the petition, known as the declaration by Canadian women.

The petition, organized by Ethel Gordon, an officer of the department of national health and welfare in Ottawa, charges that the CBC is promoting immorality through some of its programs.

The letter to the United Church Women said the board declined to endorse the petition on the grounds that it was too general, undocumented and too restrictive in some of its forms of expression.

British MP's Will Get Raise In Their Pay

LONDON (CP)—Prospects of a pay increase for members of Parliament were made known Thursday while the rest of Britain was still choking over the cost-of-living increases generated by the Labor government's first budget.

Sources in Westminster said Prime Minister Harold Wilson has decided to go ahead with a pay increase for MPs — the first in six years—despite the inevitable outcry.

The increases, likely to be announced next week, probably will raise ordinary members' salaries to about £3,000 a year from the present £1,750. Cabinet ministers likely will get £8,000 a year, an increase of £3,000.

The prime minister's salary may go up to £15,000 from the present £10,000—of which £4,000 is tax free.

Wilson's move would have been unpopular at any time, but it is even more so now that the ordinary taxpayer is just beginning to realize how much he will have to cough up as a result of the extra sixpence-a-gallon tax on gasoline announced in Wednesday's budget.

The new tax raises the price of a gallon of premium-grade gasoline to about 81 cents. The increase seems likely to produce increases in commodity prices and transport fares throughout Britain.

Union Requests Federation to Call Strike

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — A union here has asked the Ontario Federation of Labor to call a general strike across the province if three Toronto newspapers and two firms in London, Ont., and Dunville refuse to bargain in good faith with their striking employees.

The 6500-member local 199 of the United Automobile Workers (CLC) said in a letter to federation President David Archer a general strike would be a step towards breaking what it termed the strike-breaking tactics of the five firms.

The letter, sent Thursday, named the Toronto Star, Telegram and Globe and Mail, Wolverine Tube division of Calumet and Hecla of Canada Limited in London, and Lanark Manufacturing Company Limited in Dunnville.

It said Mr. Archer should first "issue an ultimatum to the five companies to sit down and bargain in good faith. If they refuse, the federation should call a general strike.

About 800 printers have been on strike at the three Toronto newspapers since July 9, but the papers have continued publishing. In London, Wolverine has continued production despite a strike by its employees that started Aug. 19. Lanark employees are seeking higher wages.

Three Reeves Not Satisfied With Police

TORONTO (CP)—The heads of five Metropolitan Toronto municipalities said Thursday the Metro police force is not providing adequate law enforcement in their areas.

Three Reeves - Albert Campbell of Scarborough and Leonard Ford of Long Branch and Mayor Donald Russell of New Toronto—said they favor establishing their own police forces to handle local problems.

Mayor Beth Nealson of Leaside and Reeve True Davidson of East York both said their municipalities are given inadequate police protection

Reeve E. J. Pivnick of Forest Hill, the only other head of the 13 municipalities that comprise Metropolitan Toronto who could be reached disagreed. He said it would be a retrograde step if the municipality formed its own force.

MOVE NOT WISE

"For better or worse we are wedded to the present force and I don't think it would be wise for the inner municipalities of Metro to form their own force," he said.

Reeve Campbell said after a two-hour meeting with Scarborough council and the Metro Police Commission that Scarborough may soon form its own force.

"We are not satisfied we have enough police on patrol duties to prevent the vandalism that is taking place," he said.

Magistrate C. O. Bick, police commission chairman, said Scarborough has more police protection per capita than it had when the Metro force was formed in 1957.

First Building in Newest Industrial Area Is Opened By Dignitaries of City

Belleville's newest factory was opened today. The 10,000 square foot building for Northern Electric's contractor support department was turned over at 10:30 this morning to A. F. G. Tooth of Northern Electric, manager of the department. Keys were passed over by developer Abe Tobe of Belleville, vice-president of Pan Properties Ltd., owners of the building. Mr. Tooth told reporters this morning the department employs about 40 people.

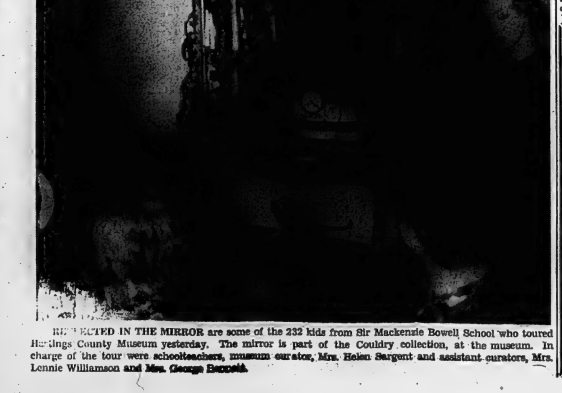
Frank Murray of the Belleville Industrial Commission was master of ceremonies at the opening. He called for comments from Belleville's mayor, Jack Ellis, from Mr. Tobe, from Mr. Tooth, from Chamber of Commerce president, J. C. "Pat" Houston, from city industrial commissioner, Ernst Kneisel, from contractor, Wasil Sidor, and from gas company manager, Harry Gibson.

The mayor congratulated the contractors and the developers on the speed with which the building was completed, and said the project was a credit to the city's new Industrial Commission. Mr. Tooth said he hoped the building will prove an incentive to further development of the area. Mr. Kneisel said the significant feature of the opening was that it was not the opening of a single building, it was the opening of a whole industrial park. He said about 300 acres on the north of the city are now serviced and waiting for industry.

The building was constructed in a nine-week crash program to fit Northern Electric's specifications. It houses the department which services and maintains radar and other equipment supplied by Northern Electric to the RCAF. No new employees are being hired by the department, for the time being, but the added space of the new building is expected to make the work of the 40 employees now in the department more efficient.

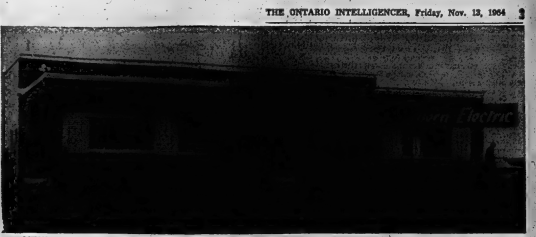
Only Three Have Names Added to List

Only three persons turned up at city hall last night to have their names added to the municipal voters' list.



And all three of them turned up before the 7:30 arrival of the presiding judge, J. C. Anderson.

"I just hope there is no one left off the voters' list," said city clerk Adam Stalker. "Not one person came to the chambers between 7:30 and 8:30, the advertised time for the hearing."



But owners or tenants whose names are on the assessment roll, but for some reason may have been omitted from the voters' list, will still be able to vote.

Such persons may come to city hall and get a certificate which on presentation at the polling booth will allow them to vote.

This year there are more than 18,000 names on the voters' list — more than 1,000 up from last year.

NEW FACTORY for Northern Electric Company's contractor support department was opened this morning in Belleville. The 10,000 square foot building was built in just nine weeks. The firm occupies the building on a lease-back agreement.

Decision on Militia Units Will Stand

OTTAWA (CP) — The government Thursday faced a flurry of questions on plans to disband certain militia units, and Associate Defence Minister Cardin indicated that none of the decisions will be reviewed.

He said that before a decision was reached on each unit, Defence Minister Hellyer, Mr. Cardin and officials of the department went over the decision three or four times. "I cannot say we will review the situation."

Opposition leader Diefenbaker asked whether Prime Minister Pearson had received a letter from the Northern Ireland Associated Clubs which pointed out that with the disbanding of the Irish Regiment of Canada and the Irish Fusiliers, no Irish units will remain in the militia.

The prime minister said he received such a letter but he was sorry that "circumstances are not such as to give favorable action . . ."

Rod Webb (PC — Hastings-Frontenac) said he assumed the same thing applied to the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment. Mr. Cardin said a great deal of consideration had been given to all decisions and there was nothing he could add.

Thant Turns Down Proposal By 3 Countries

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Secretary - General U Thant Thursday turned down a proposal from Canada and two other countries that would have delayed the first shots of the coming showdown over United Nations finances.

The proposal, put before Thant earlier in the day by representatives of Canada, Italy and Japan, would have post poned for two or three weeks Monday's scheduled ninth conference for technical assistance programs.

The United States has announced that it will refuse to make its usual pledge at the conference, in view of Soviet and French refusal to pay peace-keeping assessments.

Thant's announcement said only that, "after considering the pros and cons," he has informed the three representatives that it would be extremely difficult to put off the meeting.

President Promises to Work With Mexico to Fight Disease

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson, pledging to "take up arms" against disease, fighting disease, poverty, hunger and ignorance, pressed ahead today with final talks with Mexico's President - elect Gustavo Diaz Ordaz.

Diaz Ordaz, himself a landslide election victor who will be inaugurated Dec. 1 as the Mexican president, was winding up a 27-hour stay at the Johnson ranch.

In welcoming Mexico's first family - to - be Thursday afternoon, Johnson said:

"We are meeting here to talk together and to work together and to take up arms together against the ancient enemies of mankind — disease and poverty and hunger and ignorance."

Diaz Ordaz responded by saying:

"I am here to seal a friendship with a warm handshake with President Johnson from me and the Mexican people, and to him and through him to the American people."

He said he was sure the two leaders "will be able to work together with reciprocal respect and joint co-operation to maintain the principles that have inspired our two peoples."

Johnson Secures Record Lead Over Goldwater

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has a record lead of 15,600,000 votes over Senator Barry Goldwater as unofficial returns from the Nov. 3 presidential election continue to trickle in.

All but about 870 of the more than 175,000 voting units having reported, the unofficial vote is: Johnson 42,374,665, Goldwater 26,731,717.

The president has 61.1 per cent of the presidential vote of 69,306,122, including some 200,000 votes cast for Democratic electors in Alabama who were not pledged to Johnson.

With 270 needed to win, Johnson rolled up 486 electoral votes by carrying 44 states and the District of Columbia. Goldwater got 52 with six states.

When the still uncounted absentee ballots and third party votes are added about a month from now, the official vote is expected to be close to 70,000,000 compared with 68,800,000 in 1960.

Ignoring Economic Facts

The Montreal branch of the St. Jean Baptiste Society wants Canada divided into "associated states." Some may say there is nothing new in this proposal, since it was first made public last spring.

But on Tuesday the Society presented this suggestion to a Quebec Legislature committee on the constitution. The St. Jean Baptiste Society is not a "lunatic fringe" group and one might reasonably have hoped mature consideration would have convinced its members of the drawbacks inherit in any such plan as that for "associate states." This hope has proven unfounded. We are thus forced to conclude that many French-Canadians of good-will and considerable intelligence take this attitude towards confederation as we have known it for almost a century.

It was discouraging, too, to discover that the advocates of the plan have considered one of the obvious drawbacks and have discounted it.

Francois-Albert Angers, an economist from the University of Montreal, said that if Canada were to take any economic reprisals against Quebec for its breakdown in negotiations regarding the relationships between the proposed associated states, Quebec could retaliate by linking its commerce with the United States and Latin America.

Is it possible that an educated man, and an economist to boot, does not realize the price which the "associate states" of Quebec would have to pay for any closer links with the U.S. would be its economic independence?

And, even if relations between the "associated states" were so amicable that no question of retaliatory economic measures arose, is it not obvious that division would certainly weaken our economy? We are having enough trouble as it is, with all of Canada at least technically united, in maintaining control of our own development. Time and again we hear pleas for an increase in Canadian investment in Canada, in order that we may not become wholly an economic satellite of the U.S. If we are having these troubles today, would our difficulties not be immeasurably increased if we split the political control into a number of "associate states?"

Is it not a fact that one of the things which irks French-Canadian most is the large degree of control of the provincial economy by English-speaking Canadians, from both inside and outside Quebec? Why does annoyance at this control by English-speaking Canada blind them to the fact that the alternative proposed by the St. Jean Baptiste Society could easily substitute financiers who are not Canadians at all for Canadians speaking another tongue?

Labor Laws a Handicap?

John J. Deutsch says Canadian labor laws, with their timetables and deadlines for collective bargaining, create a "crisis atmosphere."

Most of those who have not been directly concerned with collective bargaining will be surprised at this charge.

To the average consumer, it seems that these laws are frequently used to justify putting off until tomorrow efforts to settle problems which it would be best to initiate today.

But Mr. Deutsch is an expert. The chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, he is recognized as a man with an open mind and a broad outlook on the many and varied problems which modern conditions pose for management and labor.

If he says our labor laws, designed to provide an orderly method for settling disputes, instead create an atmosphere of crisis, we are prepared to accept his word for it.

Could it be this is just another field in which, despite all the apparent disadvantages, freedom works best?

Our labor laws limit the permissible actions of both management and labor. Is Mr. Deutsch trying to tell us there would be fewer strikes if both sides were free to take whatever action they deemed advisable, at whatever time they thought opportune?

Until you have become really, in actual fact, a brother to everyone, brotherhood will not come to pass. No sort of scientific teaching, no kind of common interest, will ever teach men to share property and privileges with equal consideration for all. Everyone will think his share too small and they will be always envying, complaining and attacking one another.—Fyodor Dostoyevsky.

Intellect is invisible to the man who has none.—Arthur Schopenhauer.

To Your Good Health
Unbalanced Muscles Main Cause of Crossed Eyes

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 15 years old and have been crosseyed since birth.

Can I be helped? My parents will not consent to an operation. Is there any other way?

I have heard of eye transplants. Would that be possible? I have one good eye and the school says my vision is 40-20. I can only read big letters with my bad eye. — J. D.

Your problem is one which usually can be resolved — in some cases eye exercises help. If the condition is not too severe. Most cases can be corrected by surgery.

An "eye transplant" does not apply in your case. Actually all that is used in such operations is a small piece of the cornea, or outer covering of the eyeball, when the old cornea has become scarred or too thick for light to pass through.)

The cause of crossed eyes is that the muscles are not balanced. Therefore surgery involves only readjustment of the muscles; it does not involve the inside of the eye itself, and will not endanger your vision.

I'm pointing this out particularly because that may be what has been worrying your parents. With all the modern knowledge of eye surgery, they should not be alarmed at this operation.

Or, if the objection is because of the cost, that too, can be resolved. They should make inquiries at the nearest medical centre, or ask your family doctor, or inquire through the County Medical Society, explaining just what the problem is. Finally, that is. Most states and some other units make provision for correcting defects of children of young people, so they can grow up without needless handicaps.

Anyway, once the muscles have been adjusted sagically, the "bad" eye very likely can be brought up to normal or near normal vision with suitable glasses.

It may be that the pastor of your church might discuss this problem with your parents and perhaps change their minds.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have hypoglycemia, spastic colon and diverticulosis. I am on a high-protein diet without sugar or starch. I can't seem to eat enough to keep my weight up. The doctor says to eat more calories. I try but it seems I can't get enough. — Mrs. F.

Yes, you have a problem but I think there is a good way to solve it. Increase your fat intake, which can be done without disturbing the amount of protein or carbohydrates in your hypoglycemia, and without conflicting with the spastic colon or diverticulosis.

Use extra cream; drink half milk and half cream; use more butter or margarine; make a habit of extra snacks between meals. These can be dairy products, whether cheese or others; malted milk, egg nog, etc. Thus you can raise the total of calories without increasing sugar or starch intake.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has Bell's palsy and doesn't seem to have control of one eyelid. His eye waters and burns a lot. He has had the problem about eight weeks now. All he is taking is vitamin shots. Should he have other therapy? — Mrs. R. W.

Bell's palsy is a form of neuritis affecting areas of the face, especially around the eyes. Besides vitamins, one standard measure is protection of the eyeball — mineral oil or drops called "artificial tears." Eight weeks is not a long time for this sort of condition. You can look forward to further improvement. Physiotherapy (in the form of electrotherapy or massage) may hasten recovery.

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung disease, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., requesting a copy of the booklet, "How To Control Emphysema," enclosing a long, self-addressed envelope with 10c to cover cost of printing and handling.

Today in History

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nov. 13, 1964 . . .

The world was coming to an end, many people predicted 131 years ago today — in 1833 — after a shower of meteors invaded the earth's atmosphere. The spectacle of more than 200,000 shooting stars, sighted over the eastern areas of North America, led to the first full-scale scientific investigations of the meteoric-celestial phenomenon. A number of religious groups predicted that the meteoritic shower was the first effect of Armageddon.

1942—General Charles de Gaulle was elected interim president of the French government.

1959 — A Canadian chartered airliner crashed in the French Alps, killing all 39 aboard.

First World War

Fifty years ago today-in 1914 — Allied armies relieved Dixmude in Belgium from German invaders; Russians made progress in East Prussia; Austrians evacuated East Galicia in the face of a Russian drive; German armies advanced in Poland.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1939—German raids on the Shetland Islands and the east coast of England were repulsed; Finnish delegation left Russia when talks with the Soviets broke down; three Parisians were injured from shrapnel from exploding shells when Germ-an planes were beaten off.

Strictly Personal
Children Dream of Eternal Life

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

What is this desire to "look young" that so permeates our society today? It is too easy to explain it away as "vanity," or "sexual desirability." People, after all, have always been just as vain and just as desirous of attracting the opposite sex.

But might also say that the first half of our life is spent in trying to look older, and the second half in trying to look younger. The first tendency is more readily understandable than the second — for the child feels that the older he gets, the more things he can do and be and acquire.

Then, in the mid-30's, a curious reversal begins to set in. Both men and women suddenly feel themselves approaching that psychic precipice of 40. It is no mere joke, or accident, that Jack Benny suired on 39 as the age to remain professionally.

Other cultures, both East and West, have not felt this way in the past — so we are not dealing with an invariable human trait. This is something distinctively modern — and peculiarly American — in our aversion to looking older, in our fear of age.

There may be a clue in the fact that persons who look much younger than their years tend to be immature personalities. Boyish - looking men and girlish - looking women have failed to grow up in some areas.

We might also, by way of getting to the heart of this question, humble ourselves by asking why Europeans, in the main consider Americans as an "immature people" generally. Even those who like us and admire our singular achievements, feel that our approach to life is childish.

May this not be tied in with our frantic efforts to keep "young-looking"? Is it conceivable that our national fetish for youthfulness is somehow an unwillingness to accept life as a tragedy, and our insistence on viewing it as a musical comedy with an inevitable happy ending?

By calling life a "tragedy," I am speaking in the classic sense, not in terms of sorrow and gloom. Indeed, it is peculiarly Americans who equate "tragedy" with sorrow and gloom, who somehow think that talking about disease and decay and death is "morbid." What is morbid is the hysterical avoidance of these topics, for death and decay are as "natural" as birth and life.

Our relentless quest for youthfulness, for health, for anything other than vanity or sex; it could be our way of trying to evade any existential confrontation with ourselves and our necessary fate. Some day, we hope, "they" will find a pill that enables us to remain 30 until we die; or perhaps a pill to keep us alive forever. This is the way children think, and feel, and hope.

Letters to the Editor

Be Good Neighbor And Promote Peace

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Peace, a project for 1967.

So you desire world peace? Well why don't you do something about it. Why? Me? What can I do about it?

Well, a house painter by name of Hitler caused a terrible war. That may not have been his purpose but it was the result with the help of the devil's agents.

There have been minorities of people advocating peace and hatred, ignorance and selfishness were born.

If no one desires wars who starts them? It is the responsibility of all.

Whatever each one of us does or says or owns, thinks, or fails to do or say or think affects many others. So we may not desire war but the result can be just that.

So obviously we must strengthen the cause of peace by caring about others and being good neighbors. Your nearest neighbor is your own family.

Obviously too we must learn how to be good neighbors.

Think about it, reason it out and don't be afraid to ask somebody. Others will have the same problem.

Did you ever stop to consider how much you are in debt to others in the past and the present? In return you could try to see how much you can make the world in debt to you. I am not talking about money but about what means most to you, love, beauty, satisfaction, joy and such wonderful things!

I could tell you how to be a good neighbor but you can find out. You have to learn from God and Christ and you really ready to be a good neighbor. Make it a project for the year 1967 in your community or City Council but for every individual. Please make your home your community — that is what can be proud of, each one adding his little bit.

The cubs promise, "Do your best, do your duty to God and the Queen, and do at least one good turn to someone every day."

Here in Belleville, a beautiful city, a city of friends where all are concerned about each other the good will is there.

So we will have peace some day. There is no other way.

Avondale Bus Driver Praised by Customer

(Editor's Note: The letter which follows was sent to the Belleville Transit Commission which has forwarded it to the editor for publication).

Belleville Transit Commission.
140 Bleecker Avenue.

I have been using your bus line for almost a year now that I boarded the Avondale bus at Sidney Street and Dundas St., Thursday, October 22, 1964.

Although I am unable to give you the name of the driver or his number I can state that this is the third time I have been on the bus this week and have seen enough to satisfy me he is one in a hundred. It seems this gentleman enjoys his position not only to drive the bus but to help the passengers in every possible way, such as helping the aged, assisting women and young children on and off the bus and even carrying parcels and "go cart" and unfolding it on the sidewalk, helping with parcels and saving time on the bus schedule. I could see all this in just three trips with this driver.

What is he doing the rest of the trips? I would say giving the same service to all the employers and his passengers.

It is a pleasure and a duty to write to you.

Quebec's nationalism is more emotional than logical. Canada stands to lose a hard time to keep from being dominated economically and in international affairs by its next door neighbor, the United States. Division would only make matters worse.

United States citizens should not intervene in this internal Canadian dispute. Yet we cannot help being seriously concerned. We must hope that the Canadians will be able to settle this emotional issue and preserve their country individed.

80th Battalion Man Would Like Reunion

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

It is now the 80th anniversary of the 1st world war. Being one of the first boys to enlist in the 80th Battalion C.E.F. and to go overseas with Col. Ketcheson I write to ask, when is the next re-union and where will it be held.

I am of Company A, fourth platoon, under the command of Captain Harper also of Belleville. We wintered in the old camping factory 1915.

My address before enlistment was 71 Cedar St. I was only 16 then. I sure would like to hear from any of the old members of the Battalion. I will answer all. If any old members wish to visit me, they are more than welcome.

I would like to know as to where the Colors of this Regiment are being kept and could I have a photo of them please, a colored photo if at all possible. I am trying to write a family history and I am sure that a picture of the Colors would be an asset. Being a semi-shut-in, I do not get much of a chance to travel, unless some one takes me.

How to Get New Potato

Wall Street Journal

We aren't yet sure of the total impact of Khrushchev's ouster, but we have it on authority of the newspaper Kazsomolskaya Pravda that it will have at least one definite effect: Russian farmers will get some new potato varieties.

This amusing trifle is not without a lesson. It seems that new disease resistant potatoes were developed by an enterprising woman scientist who had the misfortune to use "bourgeois," i.e. Western, genetic theories. Her boss suppressed the findings, and now this is used as evidence that Khrubchev's regime ignored scientific advance.

Russia's peculiar notions about genetics facilitate this kind of thing, but it could easily happen in any bureaucracy. If one man, such as the scientist's superior, has control over what's done in a particular field his mistakes become official policy.

In a relatively free economy such as the U.S., on the other hand, the scientist could certainly find some entrepreneur to back her findings. If they prove right, his competitors would have to go along, and farmers and the public would soon benefit from the discoveries.

It's a small thing, of course, but worth remembering when there are those who insist the U.S. should rely more on central planning. Up to now, anyway, we don't have to overthrow the government to produce a better potato.

Centennial Drag

Ontario municipalities don't show much interest in centennial projects. Although some $13,000,000 in federal provincial grants is there almost for the asking, the majority hasn't even bothered to ask.

So far less than 200 municipalities — about one-third of the total — have submitted plans and applied for grants.

Hasty Pees Officers Meet On New Policy

Results of the militia outlook now are common knowledge to those involved.

Officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment recently held a meeting to discuss the effects of the new policy. The following is part of a statement from the regiment on what transpired at that meeting:

"With regard to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Col. Joe Black stated that its future it would be considered a major unit with a maximum strength of 300 all ranks. To achieve this and to reduce the costs of additional armouries and administration, the outlying armouries in Trenton, Madoc, Millbrook, Port Hope, Norwood and Picton will be closed. Those sub-units will all be re-located in Belleville.

"Col. Black's somewhat discouraging information confirmed what members of the Regiment had learned from the local news media. However, the next speaker, Col. Hastings, fully alluded to it as being unimportant as a fly speck on the whole history and tradition of the Regiment. He felt that this was just another of the annoyances that have been part and parcel to come by the men of the countries and that what was all important was the Regiment itself. Joe Black showed how in his own life he had more than once become a gunner and an infantryman in his career. This state of change had to be expected and adapted to.

"To indicate Regimental policy the present Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. D. H. Willcocks echoed Col. Black's words regarding change. Whether it was this year or five years from now a change of this type would certainly occur. It was necessary to strengthen the Militia and one had to look beyond the personal disappointment. As far as the Regiment was concerned training would continue exactly as planned. There will be no halt in the momentum of training. All weekend and promotional courses will continue. When armouries are closed down the Regiment will use every means to bring personnel into the remaining armoury in Belleville if all else fails. Not one man must be allowed to feel he is not needed in our Regiment, although we are 450 strong on paper it is seldom we can parade at one time more than 200; now we have to parade 300 out of a total of 300. This will require an even higher spirit of service and there will be no place for the Hasty Pee who will not pull his full weight. Our heritage and history paints a colorful picture of patriotism for the past 164 years and the present members of the Regiment will have to be even more dedicated to perpetuate these ideals.

"Administrative arrangements necessary for making the changes required by the Minister of Defence have not yet been finalized. In the interim period Col. Willcocks appointed a committee of senior officers and requested them to look into all means of continuing the unit. Specifically methods of transporting outlying personnel, to Belleville using existing and other vehicles for weekend training were to be thoroughly investigated. Possibly some subunits close to Belleville might like to parade on weekend nights in Belleville. Officers are to meet in Belleville on Nov. 25 at which time a firm policy will be announced."

20,000 Hunters Bag 5,000 Deer in Tweed Forest Area

About 20,000 hunters will have buzzed the Tweed forest area by the end of deer season Saturday, and they will have shot about 5,000 deer, Department of Lands and Forests officials estimate. Nearly 97 percent of the hunters who hunted during the first week of the season shot deer, but hunter success during the second week of the season is normally lower, according to Lands and Forests biologist Frank Cheshire. Estimated average success over the whole season is about 24 percent. Success last year was about 18 percent.

Nearly one-third of the deer shot so far this year were first-year fawns—an indication of a good fawn crop this year and of probable good hunting next year.

The information comes from deer checking stations, two in the Tweed district and one each in Lindsay and Pembroke districts, checking hunters who leave the Tweed district forests. Only a small percentage of hunters are checked, but the numbers can be used to indicate success of all the hunters, as a group. The 1,646 hunters checked in the Tweed area last week had shot 907 deer, 64 bear and two moose.

BEST AREAS

Best hunting in the area this year, and the most deer reported, has been around Weslemkoon and Lingham Lakes. A fast improving area, one which may be the best in the district within a few years, is around Watt Lake, northwest of Tweed. Working with timber specialists James Keenan and Bill Hiscock of the Department of Lands and Forests Department biologists believe they are able now to predict the best hunting areas of the district for the next twenty years. They are also able to ensure that the hunting remains good.

Good deer hunting depends on good living conditions for deer. Good living conditions for deer means two things — enough food and enough shelter. If these are destroyed, the deer must move or risk death during the winter.

Shelter for a deer usually means cedar or hemlock trees. Ideal wind breaks, these trees also provide, especially when weighted with snow, an insulated "roof" over an animal lying under them. Food for deer means hardwood shoots, which can be found around the edges of clearings. If the cedar and hemlock were completely cleared from an area, or if hardwoods were allowed to live beyond maturity and to choke out seedlings, deer hunters would suffer.

FIRES AID DEER

If, on the other hand, hardwood trees are cleared from an area, deer hunting improves. With no large hardwoods around, the seedlings would grow virtually without competition, attracting deer as an open refrigerator attracts teenagers. Hunting around Weslemkoon Lake now, for instance, is due to woodcutting operations and the good hunting around Lingham Lake is due to fires in the area a few years ago. Good hunting around Watt Lake in future years will come from cutting operations starting now.

But if hardwood trees are stripped from an area all in one year, all the saplings will be about the same age. Deer hunting will be excellent for the first ten or twelve years after the cut, but when the hardwood trees mature, however, to the stage when they no longer offer forage for deer, the deer will disappear almost overnight.

PLAN CUTTING

Responsible for the management of crown lands, (which includes most of the bush north of Highway Seven) and conservation authority lands, (totalling about 18,000 acres in the Tweed district), timber experts Hiscock and Keenan plan cutting to provide an adequate and continuing supply of forage for all game. As far as the deer are concerned, this means cutting in scattered small areas.

The ideal forest, Keenan explains, would be a hundred acre lot of which one acre per year is cut. Trees in the Tweed area, however, are usually cut out on a twenty to thirty year cycle.

Areas in which wood cutting is planned are charted on large scale maps, and these maps are compared with others which show deer yarding areas. Cutting on crown and conservation authority lands is controlled to make sure no deer yard area is drastically altered in any one year. There is no legal control over cutting on private land, but where a deer yard or other important game area is liable to be affected, advice may be offered. The Department offers management advice and service to all land owners who ask for it.

CHAMPLAIN HUNTED HERE

Deer hunting has always been good in the Quinte area and Champlain, a keen deer hunter, visited the area in 1615, in which he and a group of Huron Indians camped at the mouth of the Moira River and, in 36 days of hunting, killed 120 deer. The Indians built a log stockade about 12 feet high with arms, 1,800 feet long, converging in a vee shape. At the narrow end, the vee led to the corral. Every day as dusk the Indians formed a line through the bush and drove all the deer ahead of them into the corral, where they were slaughtered.

Conservation officers would probably not approve Champlain's methods for today's hunters, but they recognize the need for hunters, to keep the deer herd down to a reasonable size. Through the biologists and the timber men, the Department is also working to make sure the forests can support hards large enough to satisfy the hunters.

Negro Parents Demand Better Deal for Pupils

HARROW, Ont (CP) — Education Minister William Davis of Ontario spent two hours here Thursday, apparently exploring the situation in Colchester South Township where Negro parents are demanding a better deal for children attending an all-Negro school in School Section 11.

After a one-hour meeting with officials of the Harrow and Colchester South Township school board, Mr. Davis declined comment on the issue. The parents of the school children and the board plan a meeting next week.

Mr. Davis decided to visit Harrow after an aide brought him press clippings of the controversy as he stopped in Detroit en route home from a 10-day tour of California junior colleges.

Last week the South Essex Citizens Advancement Association, a Negro group headed by George McCurdy Jr., of Amherstburg, charged segregation and arbitrary conditions exist at a one-room school in School Section 11.

The association stated in a petition last week that the Colchester board is discriminating against the school because only Negro children attend and white children have been moved to other schools.

DEMANDS CLOSING

The brief demanded the school be closed by next Jan. 1 and that the 50 Negro children be integrated into the school system.

Mr. Davis declined comment on the charges, but he said that "as far as my department is concerned, no one believes in segregation."

The school had been operated by an all-Negro board until last Jan. 1 when it came under the jurisdiction of the township board. The township and Harrow board are to become one body as the result of legislation passed earlier this year.

A site has been purchased in Harrow for a 12-room school which will be ready for the opening in the fall of 1965. 85 11 will then be closed.

Readers' Friday Column

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION:

The other night Puffy Croissants were mentioned in your column. Evidently I have missed this recipe and would love to have it. . . . May I tell you how much I have enjoyed your column. It will be eleven years next month that I moved here and for quite a few months I didn't know anyone and was terribly homesick. I was a widow with a four-year-old son. Your column with all the news of your family helped immeasurably and I looked forward to it each evening. I still am one of your faithful readers.

My sister (in Cleveland) sent me two recipes that were quite popular with her groups for luncheons last year. They are delicious and I have never seen a recipe exactly like them in Canada . . . Ethel M.H.

ST. JOSEPH'S C.W.L.

St. Joseph's C.W.L. held their monthly meeting in the parish hall with the final arrangements for the parish bazaar and tea to be held in the parish hall in November completed.

Mrs. M. Duminie reported on the bazaar and asked that donations be sent to the hall the morning of the bazaar. In case some are unable to get their articles to the hall, there will be two ladies on hand to pick them up from the councillors.

A number of ladies offered to donate their time for the Cancer Clinic for November 16th. It was decided that Christmas gifts be sent to the orphans at Heathfield as has been the custom the last few years.

First vice-president Mrs. M. Duminie introduced two new members and gave an interesting discourse on the significance of the design of the CWL pin and that in wearing the pin all are proclaiming membership in a national organization, the chief aim of which is service.

Mrs. M. Duminie presented to the league a lovely engraved painting of the CWL emblem, in the colors of gold, white and blue, which she designed and painted.

Reverend Father J. Hanley spoke to the ladies broaching the subject of a memoriam to a former Spiritual Director, Reverend Father Buckley. Father Hanley gave an interesting and enlightening explanation of the priest's vestments worn now during the sacrifice of the Mass and the symbolic use of them down through the years of the church.

Swingy Fringe Theme in Sportswear

NEW YORK (AP)—Designer Bonnie Cashin traces the genealogy of her spring sportswear collection back to the first families of America—the Indians.

There were no war whoops but there was plenty of applause as pretty Pocahontases flounced down the aisle at the Philip Sills showroom thursday in buckskin - looking costumes tiered with fringe.

The swingy fringe theme in luscious suede skins the color of wheat appeared both as a shirt-waist style sheath and a tunic dress easy enough for an dancing at the discotheque. The models then showed up in fringed pullovers worn with slick leather trousers and shorts shorter that a tribal chief might approve.

Beadwork were the original sportsmen," noted Miss Cashin, who introduced her Indian inspired fashions in England recently while receiving an international design award there.

Herself fanned for cause, Miss Cashin added that the Redman's superb style cause is flinging a blanket over his shoulders is "right up my fashion alley."

However, the Indian blankets the Cashin models slung casually over high belted dresses as well as other woolen textiles throughout the show were woven by a well-known non-Indian Dorothy Liebes.

W. I. Sponsors Short Course

RYLSTONE — The Rylstone Women's Institute held a successful one-day short course based on "Choosing and Using Materials" at the Sentinel Organ hall, Petherick's Corners, on Friday with an attendance of approximately 40 ladies. Several attended from Glenwood U.C.W., Seymour West and Wellman's Corners Women's Institute.

Miss Dora Burke of the Home Economics Service of Ontario, gave a most interesting talk on choosing materials as to their wearability and washability. She emphasized the fact that everyone should read the labels on all garments and synthetic fabrics. She stressed also the care in using bleaches and the proper soaps and detergents for the new materials; also the proper temperature of water in laundering.

At noon the hostess branch served a lovely potluck dinner which everyone enjoyed along with a social hour together.

Mrs. Gerald Clancy thanked the Rylstone W.I. for their kind invitation and for the dinner, on behalf of the guests.

AFTERNOON SESSION

In the afternoon Miss Burke showed swatches of many different synthetics which were passed among the ladies for closer inspection. Later dis cussion groups were formed and a profitable time was spent in talking over the use of each fabric and how to clean it. There was also a discussion and literature distributed on "spot and stain removal" as well as other information about new miracle fabrics.

Hallowe'en atmosphere was also carried out in the decorations of the Rylstone W.I. hall in the home of Mrs. Stanley Kerr, Petherick's Corners on the evening of November 18.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

Are you a one - date girl? Do men resist your fatal charms and fail to call again after one or two dates? Maybe your manners aren't as charming as they should be. For instance, do you:

1. Keep a date waiting an hour while you finish primping?
2. Insist on living up the evening's activities, even though they might be too rich for his pocketbook?
3. Gush over him and act possessive?
4. Talk endlessly about yourself and your own interests?
5. Tell him all about your other dates?
6. Continually fuss with your make-up and hairdo?
7. Dress inappropriately, like wearing a cocktail dress to go bowling?
8. Attract undue attention by squealing at everything he says and laughing and talking too loudly?
9. Yoo - hoo at friends across the room, then leave him to fume while you go around table-hopping?
10. Counter-suggest you go to one more place for dancing or a late snack after he already suggested it's time to take you home?

Special Needs Of the Aging To Be Studied

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Provincial Council of Women decided Thursday to ask the provincial government to prepare an index of pamphlets on opportunities for elderly persons available from various government departments.

The council's semi - annual meeting approved the inclusion of the request in a brief on special needs of the aging to be presented to the government.

The brief suggests that the elderly be given a concise index of sources of information on such topics as housing, leisure time opportunities, taxation and inheritance, insurance and pensions, and health and welfare.

The brief also recommends that workers in the 40-50 age group be advised to take courses to prepare themselves for changing areas of employment. It also asks employers to hire persons in that age-category if they have taken advantage of retraining programmes.

Mrs. W. P. Augustine of Windsor, Ont., provincial chairman, presided over the two-day session, which dealt mainly with constitutional amendments.

Susanna's Family Fare

HANGERS ON

Dear Susanna: I have a great many ideas for good housemakers which I believe are excellent — and of course I would like to share them.

For instance, have you ever sealed and stamped a letter, only to find, for some reason, that it must be opened up again? Here are the usual ingredients for this disturbing situation. One urgent letter, one unstuck stamp (the only one for miles) and one hard - as - a - rock glue pot. However, the solution is simple. Apply a dab of unbeaten egg white to the stamp — it sticks even better than glue and isn't nearly as messy!

* * *

Here is another. High up on the inside of the linen closet door I use a shirt hanger (one that holds about four skirts). I use this to clip my linen table cloths on, by the bottom ends, and to hang up my place mats, thus saving all that doubling up and wrinkling in a drawer. — Mrs. Brian Marshall

Let this be a lesson. We homemaker types must stick together if we have to use every white! — SUSANNA

FROZEN FUN

Dear Susanna: When my little grandchildren are visiting with me I've discovered that if I pop an ice cube into their soup at mealtime it saves both time and confusion.

It not only cools their soup down so that they can eat at the same time as the adults, but this little piece of ice floating about keeps them fascinated while the meal is getting underway.

They also like partly frozen jelly made in the ice cube trays. It is fun for them and less untidy as a dessert. — Mrs. H. Smith

Ideas like this are worth their weight in GOLD! — SUSANNA

(If you have any hints for running a successful household — or any problems — write to Susanna, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope when requesting pamphlets.)

Home and School Association News

GLEN MILLER

The general meeting of the Glen Miller Home and School Association was held November 4 with Mr. R. A. Dunsmore, inspector of public schools as guest speaker.

He read Bill 54, adopted May 9, 1964 which stated that the local school boards in the Stirling township area would be terminated in Dec. 1964 in favor of one board for the whole of Sidney which involves 23 schools and 1200 pupils. The two largest of these schools are Glen Miller and Bayside.

The nominations for these new trustees for the area board will take place at Wallbridge in the Orange Hall Nov. 27. Although the position of trustee will only pay a nominal sum of $40 per month it is an important position and it is hoped that all interested people from the Glen Miller and Johnstown area will attend this meeting and consider this position as there is a fairly large sum of money $6000 which is now in the hands of the local board and this sum will go into the total consideration of the whole area. The election, after the nomination of trustees will take place Dec. 7 at designated polls.

REMEDIAL READING

Questions from the floor included the possibility of kindergarten, however this seems to be far in the future for the rural areas but there may be a possibility of specialist teachers who could visit each school in turn for remedial reading, to help those who have problems stemming from the lack of kindergarten training. At the present time a specialist teacher for music is employed in the area.

Many questions could not be answered in regard to the possibility than many of the schools might be made into one grade and children taken by bus to the

Mr. Vincent Farrell expressed thanks of the group to the speaker for his informative talk.

Rev. J. Carty reminded the parents that the teachers acted only as an extension of their parental responsibility and congratulated them on their splendid attendance.

Rev. D. Sinclair spoke briefly expressing his concern about the lack of Christian training in the youth of the day.

Sister Mary Timothy, principal, introduced Sister Mary Francesa the new Superior at the convent and Sisters Mary Philomena and Hubert who are new on the staff. Mr. Meraw then introduced the members of the school board.

schools. All these problems will be facing the new area board to decide what system will prove the most desirable for the children and economical for the taxpayer.

Final plans were made for the Family Fun night to be held in the school Friday, Nov. 20. The safety petition is nearly completed thanks to those who have canvassed and those who have signed.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

In the course of his remarks the valedictorian, Rodney Jones now registered in the faculty of Applied Science at Queen's University, said:

"This is the last time we meet as a class; this evening marks the climax of our education at Marmora High School.

The word 'educate' originally meant 'to lead out,' and we truly in the course of our high school days have been led out of the realm of childhood to a stage approaching maturity. Our experiences, have been varied—some pleasurable, some painful—but to quote the poet, 'The bruised reed shall not be broken and the smoking flax shall not be put out.' If we removed the rocks.' The obstacles we have encountered and overcome but to heighten our appreciation.

"Tonight is the appropriate time to express our gratitude to parents, teachers, and interested friends, for the guidance they gave us in the difficult and serious times, and for their unfailing encouragement.

"To our parents no more verbal thank-you can be truly meaningful. Our gratitude to them must be our pledge to strive to fulfil our potential for service to the society of which we are a part.

"The citizens of Marmora, whose gifts provided an incentive on every level of high school life, have provided us also a pattern of loyalty and generosity which we would do well to emulate in our own future dealings.

"Our teachers, persistent in their efforts to instil a thirst for knowledge, can be assured that we will recall their words and remember their advice for many years.

"When we look back at our high school days, we will remember them with fondness and with respect. It was here we were led to understand ourselves, to cast away the ways of childhood, to realize that each one is master of his own fate, to fashion for ourselves our own personal goals.

"In closing may I say thank you once more to all those who have helped to lead our way to graduation, and for those who follow us may I leave a quotation from H. G. Wells, 'human history becomes more and more a race between education and catastrophe.'" believed in the tens of thousands of dollars.

Vatican sources said the Pope's gift was largely symbolic and that they did not know exactly how it would be used to help the poor.

Pope Paul has used it frequently since his coronation that he is expected to use one of the Vatican's other crowns which are at least five times as heavy. He wears a crown only on ceremonial occasions.

WON'T BREAK UP

Vatican officials said that the crown was a consecrated object, and therefore would not be broken up. They said they assumed it would eventually be given to a church by a purchaser whose payment would be sent to the Pope for charity.

No Intention Of Reviewing Pension Hikes

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday the government has no intention of reviewing Tuesday's 10-per-cent veterans pension increase as it was requested to do by the Royal Canadian Legion.

However, he told the Commons in reply to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker that he had agreed with the legion that there should be periodic reviews of pensions.

Such a review would be every two years, he said.

Mr. Pearson said the government's agreed to it to make cyclical reviews of pensions had been misunderstood as in some quarters as agreement by the government to review the increases announced Tuesday.

The increase was criticized by the legion in a meeting with the cabinet Wednesday as "grossly inadequate."

After the meeting, President Fred T. O'Reilly of the Legion said Mr. Pearson had agreed to review the increase announced Tuesday by Veterans Minister Teillet.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked in the Commons whether the government intends, as reported, to review the increase to provide one which is fair and reasonable.

Mr. Pearson replied that the government considers the increase to be fair and reasonable, arrived at a conclusion different from that of the Legion on the basis of the same facts.

EMIGRANTS INCREASING

LONDON (Reuters) — The number of Commonwealth citizens emigrating to Britain increased during the first nine months of this year, Sir Frank Soskice, home secretary, said Thursday. They numbered 69,807 compared with 56,177 for the comparable period in 1963, he told the House of Commons.

Uranium

can be reduced by a rational program of pollution abatement.

"As an indication of the extent to which contamination has spread, however, dissolved radium has been detected at low concentrations as far as the mouth of the Serpent River."

The Serpent River winds through a series of lakes in the area to emerge 20 miles south of Elliot Lake near Spragge, on the North Channel of Lake Huron.

The commission said it and the health department will conduct a further survey of radioactivity in the coming year, with regular checks after that "so long as this proves necessary."

ASK FOR PLANS

The statement said three operating uranium companies at Elliot Lake—not identified by the commission — were asked "to submit proposals regarding their plans for the improvement of this situation." Proposals received from two of these "indicate that the co-operation of these companies has been assured."

The commission's report said four conclusions have been reached about the situation:

1. Tailings from the uranium mills "must be effectively and permanently confined to their present locations to protect the environment."

2. Waterways that are not yet contaminated "should be diverted away from the tailings" in order that the uncontaminated headwaters may find their way into the Serpent River system without coming into contact with the tailings."

3. All direct discharge of contaminated water from the mills must be kept to the minimum consistent with efficient mill operation," and those that must be retained "should be delivered only to areas prescribed by the commission to receive these waters."

4. In future, any proposals that would increase the discharge of pollution must be submitted to the commission for its approval before they are put into effect.

The commission said the studies so far "have led to the conclusion that existing levels of contamination could become serious if they are allowed to continue, and this carries the implication that existing levels of contamination are not at present regarded as serious so long as they can be reduced by a rational program of pollution abatement and do not become permanent."

BAN ON CUBANS

HAVANA (AP)—Czechoslovak Airlines said Friday it would no longer carry Cuban emigrants to Madrid via Prague because of "mass defections" by Cuban stopovers at Gander, Nfld. Several Cubans have defected at Gander and Cuban sources said, "the government has resented the display given by American news services to such defection."

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"
By BERNARD C. MELTZER

That every property owner wants to get the highest possible price when selling does not automatically mean one should list with the broker who promises the highest price. If the price he suggests is unrealistic the property may not sell. It often is better to get an independent appraisal of value — especially if opinions differ drastically. Here is an example.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We are putting our house up for sale and have talked to several brokers who want to list it. It is hard to believe they could differ so, but they have given us estimates of the sales price from $12,000 to $18,000.

My husband favors a man who gave us a low estimate as he is an old timer and probably knows what he is doing. I favor the man who gave us the high estimate, as he is new to the game, young, energetic and a real "go-getter." We decided to ask your advice first, however, before committing ourselves. — Mrs. E.

ANSWER Obviously all the brokers cannot be right. You may not know current values in your area, or they may (in the case of the high estimate) be encouraging you to give them the listing with the intention of talking you down to a price lower, more realistic, price later. If they do try to get a lower price than is realistic, you may find yourselves committed to a listing at a price too high for the house to be marketable.

Your best bet is to get an appraiser who will give you an independent estimate of your property's value. Contact the bank that holds your mortgage. They may appraise your house for a small fee, or refer you to an appraiser they know and trust.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Just before the World War II, my father and help was getting scarce, I made an arrangement with a local handyman to let him use my tenanat house rent free in exchange for keeping up the grounds and doing a few chores around the place. He wasn't too reliable, but in kindness I let him stay at this rate.

Now part of my property (including the tenant house he occupies) is being considered by the state for a new highway. I have just been informed it's my "Handyman" trailer they settle with him, claiming he has "squatter's rights" grounded by right of "Adverse Possession." Can this be possible? — T. S. B.

ANSWER: On the basis of your letter, I am inclined to doubt that your legal difficulties under this doctrine. He apparently was occupying the property under an agreement, and with your permission — not adversely.

Since the Doctrine of Adverse Possession is complex, however, I suggest you retain an attorney to protect your interests.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have been after my husband for years to have our house air-conditioned. He says it is a waste of money and unnecessary although I notice that on hot nights he always suggests that we visit our neighbors who have air - conditioning.

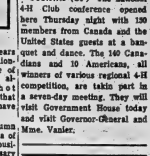
After following your column for some time I get the idea of appealing to his sense of business. I told him it is necessary to have air-conditioning if we want to sell the house (one of his arguments against it is that we might decide to move) because that's what people want these days. He won't pay any attention to me, but he will if you tell him the same thing. Please do me this favor. — F. T. D.

ANSWER: Your concept follows a definition in common usage these days: "A necessity is a luxury you saw in your neighbor's house."

In a way you are both right. Air-conditioning will enhance the marketability of your house — but experience indicates that it will not increase value to the full extent of the cost of installation. Your added comfort, however, may be worth the difference.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Yesterday I got a brochure in the mail with an offer to install a beautiful modern kitchen: new floor, built in cabinets, sink, range, lighting fixtures — even a disposal unit, for only $395.

I have always dreamed of a new kitchen, and we can afford this, but my husband, who was a carpenter's helper when he was younger and usually knows something about these things, says a good job can't be had for this price. Who is right? — (MRS.) P. L. L.



ANSWER: At risk of offending my many (and cherished) lady readers, I must observe that sometimes husbands are right — and yours is.

The brochure you received is what is known as "bait advertising." A new kitchen such as you describe would cost at least $2,500, as much as $5,000 and on the average between $3,000 and $4,000.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Conservative objections halted any progress.

Several months of infrequent inter - party negotiations produced no agreement. But this week the bill's pilot, Transport Minister Pickersgill, came up with two compromise proposals.

One would have left the appointments to the prime minister and Opposition leader but opened commission meetings to observers picked by minority party leaders. The other, the Speaker suggestion which the Conservatives backed, was opposed by the NDP.

The momentary Conservative-Liberal alliance had its humorous points. Ridout Woolliams (PC—Bow River), moving his party was often branded with filibustering, said the onus was on the other foot and tossed the "filibuster" charge at the NDP.

And the NDP, frequently accused by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker of siding with the government on other legislation, accused the Liberals and Conservatives of a behind - the-scenes deal.

DENIES CHARGE

Mr. Pickersgill hotly denied the NDP charge with the claim there had been no more prior consultation with the Conservatives than with the NDP.

Before Mr. Pickersgill's compromise was approved another NDP amendment — to have the Speaker choose the commissioners from certain provincial officers such as chief electoral officers and surveyors-general—was defeated 84 to 30.

On both votes Pauline Jewett (L — Northumberland) opposed her colleagues. Three other Liberals joined her on Mr. Knowles' second amendment.

Mr. Knowles' original amendment moved last spring was defeated 80 to 22, with Miss Jewett and nine fellow Liberals voting for it.

The NDP objected strongly to involving the Speaker in redistribution. Mr. Knowles said it would put a "terrific load" on his shoulders.

Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming) felt the Speaker was being dragged into politics.

Criticism Often Stems From Feeling Inadequate

DEAR DORIS — I have two sisters and a cousin who have for almost a lifetime deprecated me. Mistakes, even though slight, were magnified out of proportion, and every boy friend that I had was an "affair."

Once I tried to be less of a mouse and retaliated by mentioning some slight thing that they had done wrong, and they said "they couldn't remember." I am bringing up a family, and I often wonder if talk like that can hurt one.

I am reserved in nature, while these relatives are blabbers. Also, they don't seem to be suffering because of this. — BOTHERED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR BOTHERED — It bothers me too. The belittlers of the world have much to answer for in the wasted potential of their victims. Few of us are strong-minded enough to resist such discouragement.

Criticism, persistent dispraise, teasing, are likely to spring from the critic's own need to feel big — because he really feels too little underneath!

Nurture your own young hopefuls with the praise and optimism which challenges and cheers.

To UGLY DUCKLING — You're operating with two strikes against you while you are 40 pounds overweight.

I'll send you a simple reducing diet and a pamphlet on hair care if you'll send me your name and address on a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents for each pamphlet.

It'll still take will power, so get set for a long seige of celery and self-denial.

(Longer, fuller replies were sent privately to those correspondents enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

made security measures necessary.

The damage was done to Mr. de LaDurantaye's home after he issued instructions to editorial supervisory staff at Le Soleil and L'Evenement. The instructions were designed to limit the importance given some news dealing with separatism, nationalism and protests from persons or groups without recognized standing against established authority. They proposed a ban on statements preaching violence.

Police said the methods used by the vandals were the kind associated with terrorist movements.

Police are keeping a quiet watch on the two houses.

WHEAT CROP ESTIMATE — The wheat harvest for Canada is estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to reach 600,400,000 bushels for 1964. The estimate, based on yields reported at mid-October, will be short of the 1963 harvest of 723,000,000 bushels. The average yield of wheat per seeded acre is estimated at 20.2 bushels. A period of excellent weather in October speeded harvesting after bad weather brought delays in late August and September.

Lord Caradon's Return Will Be Watched With Interest

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Lord Caradon, the former Sir Hugh Foot, who now heads Britain's United Nations delegation, once said that the greatest threat to the peace of the world is the danger of a war between "the colored people and the rest."

Coming from a man with a remarkable reputation on both sides of the color gulf, the statement carries weight.

His return to the United Nations is being watched with interest as a possible turning point in Britain's attitude on colonial and racial matters.

When he resigned from the British mission two years ago in a policy dispute over Southern Rhodesia, it was widely felt at the UN that the delegation had lost one of its most enlightened and liberal members.

TONE WILL CHANGE

With his return, the British delegation insists that there will be no radical change in the position. But it concedes that the tone will be different.

This is almost certainly an understatement, if Lord Caradon's past record is any clue to his future actions.

As with any UN delegate, he will be obliged to follow the policies of the Labor government. But the fact that he has been given cabinet status, along with his record in colonial affairs, indicates that he will have a main part in shaping these policies as well as carrying them out.

The British attitude towards South Africa is only one of the areas in which Britain is expected to alter its stance.

As recently as last May, as a member of Secretary-General U Thant's advisory panel on South Africa, Lord Caradon said Britain and the U.S. would have to put economic pressure on South Africa to get a fair deal for the Negroes there.

In the past, the Conservative government has taken the view that economic sanctions would only bring hardship to the very people that the UN was trying to help.

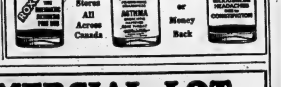
MAY BAR ARMS

There also are rumblings of a possible embargo on shipments of arms to South Africa, although Britain previously has shipped only those arms that it considered would be used for external defence rather than internal repression.

How an arms embargo would affect the Simonstown naval agreements under which the two countries protect the Cape sea-lane lanes is not yet clear.

The British attitude on Southern Rhodesia also is expected to change perceptibly, although the change is expected to be one of emphasis rather than direction.

The same is true on the admission of Communist China. Britain has supported admission of the Peking regime consistently but from now on will probably take a more active part in promoting it.



Perhaps the most fundamental change will be in the atmosphere of relations between Britain and the non-white world.

In the past, his relationship has often been unhappy, the Afro-Asians accused Britain of refusing to consider their proposals seriously while the British in effect charged the Afro-Asians with throwing monkey wrenches into their carefully built decolonization machinery.

In the future, the Afro-Asians can be assured at least of a sympathetic hearing from Britain. And the British can be assured of a greater reservoir of good feeling from the non-white delegates.

Not Suitable For Dwelling Says Jury

PICTON (Staff) — Grand jury members made their required annual inspection of public institutions within the county this week and returned the following report to Hon. Mr. Justice Ferguson.

The Prince Edward County jail building appears adequate for present needs but replacement should be considered for the future. Maintenance satisfactory with the recommendation that the kitchen floor be painted. The Governor's living quarters, located on the main floor are considered unsuitable as a family dwelling.

Recommendation that more space be provided within the next two years for storage of documents in the Registry Office, County Office building and Shire Hall. The building is well kept. Facilities are inadequate in the office of the Sheriff and the County Assessor. County employees are efficient and cooperative. Recommendation that better lighting in the office of the County Welfare Officer be installed.

Prince Edward County Home for the Aged. We find the building in excellent condition with inmates cheerful and happy. We wish to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. McWilliam for their fine management.

Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital. A review of procedures revealed that provision for admittance emergencies is adequate.

Prince Edward Collegiate. The maintenance and cleanliness of this building was satisfactory.

Ontario Minister Of Highways To Be Speaker

PICTON (Staff) — The Hon. C. S. McNaughton, Minister of Highways for Ontario, will be the guest speaker at the annual Prince Edward County Warden's banquet. Warden Kenneth Hicks will be host to Municipal Council members, officials and friends at the event which will take place Wed. Nov. 18 in the parish hall of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene in Picton.

Rather than a lengthy round of toasts, the program this year breaks the tradition of previous banquets and a guest speaker will be heard. In addition to the speaker there will be greetings from Mayor H. J. Bellerby, Warden Tom Burnside of Hastings, Warden D. Brown of Lennox and Addington, and Warden of Northumberland and Durham, D. McMaster.

Judge W. S. Lane of Picton will be toastmaster.

Chamber Wants More Dredging In Harbor

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce is again requesting the Federal Department of Public Works for dredging at the base in Picton harbor. At this week's meeting the thought was expressed that with water levels so low that it might be an opportune time for the dredging to take place.

A team will be selected from each group to attend O.M.H.A. playdowns. Those teams will be coached by Dr. Lionel Dockrill, alone; H. J. Colliver and John Larche, Peewee; Jim McConnell, Bantam; John Ferguson, Midget, and Garrison, juvenile. President of the league is Edgar Keep, vice-pres., George Bawden and John Ferguson secretary.

FAVOR OVER-ALL PLAN

Chamber of Commerce directors went on record as favoring the overall plan for the Quinte Parkway, which was recently discussed by a panel and open meeting of the public in Picton's Royal Hotel. Q.T.T.A. President read the report of the meeting and the directors were in favor of preserving the scenic beauty of the drive along highway 33 to Kingston. Members were called last week for a secodary highway from highway 33 near the Milhaven C.I.L. plant across highway 2 to 401. This will divert industrial traffic from highway 33.

GRANTS APPROVED

Labor grants totaling $37,000 have been approved by the winter works program on renovation of the county buildings. Thomas Walker advised council this week that Confederation Centennial grants which would aid in the renovating program have not been approved as yet but should be coming through soon.

WARN OF HAZARDS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Dentists will be urged "to inform their patients of the health hazards of the use of tobacco and, especially with young people, to warn against acquiring the habit of cigarette smoking." The house of delegates of the American Dental Association approved Thursday a resolution from the Ohio State Dental Association against chewing and smoking tobacco.

Fluoridation Equipment Now in Use

PICTON (Staff)—This week Public Utilities Commission members were told of the addition of fluoridation equipment recently installed in the water purification plant. Manager of the commission H. C. Blakely stated that citizens have been drinking this water for several weeks without probably noticing any difference.

Mr. Blakely's report read that the municipal water supply had been fluoridated for several weeks and the performance of all the equipment has been proving very satisfactory. The average dosage is one part per million with any variations confined to a minimum of 0.8 and a maximum of 1.3 ppm.

Fluoridation is only one of the many changes completed at the purification plant this year. A 36x14 ft. addition was completed at the north side of the plant to house the fluoride tanks and equipment. This provided storage room for activated carbon feeder and carbon as well as enclosing the third pump that was built.

Gore & Storrie, consulting engineer, Mr. M. Yates, Eng., who supervised the Metro Toronto fluoridation system provided valuable assistance in setting up the operation.

The Picton installation is similar to that of Metro Toronto's on a reduced scale. Cost of the addition to the plant and the equipment totals approximately $17,000. The installation is now complete with the exception of the painting of a few minor equipment items scheduled to be available in the next few weeks.

Trenton Edges Merchants 4-3 In Opener

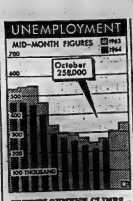
PICTON — Trenton Apple Kings climbed up their second consecutive victory in as many nights and at the same time ruined Picton Merchants' home opener in OHA Eastern Junior play here last night.

The Merchants bowed to Trenton by a 4-3 score.

Trenton followed much the same pattern as in Wednesday's 4-3 win over Belleville. The Apple Kings led 1-0 in the first heat, upped up a 3-0 margin part-way through the second and were in front 4-1 going into the third period.

Merchants, led by scoring ace Harold Hadlock, fought back for a pair of goals to leave the final count at 4-3.

The Trenton goals were scored by Gord Stevenson, Dave Johnson, Ross Quigley and Tom Glover that order. Terry Hutchinson and Bob Brezier each gathered two assists.



Gary Hannell fired the first Picton marker and Haddock struck for both third-period markers.

Good crowd took in the contest and saw 62 minutes in penalties doled out, including one misconduct to each team.

Picton goalie Larry Holmes was cut in the first period and the game was delayed while he received stitches. He returned to finish the game.

The Merchants' next game will be in Gananoque Sunday at 7:00 p.m.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the federal department of labor estimate the jobless total at 3.7 per cent of the labor force, up .5 per cent from September and down from the October 1963, 3.8 per cent.

Graph shows monthly totals, including persons without jobs and looking for work, and those on temporary layoffs.

Law Partners Are Charged In Hunt Case

SUDBURY (CP) — Two Sudbury lawyers, Ronald B. Warren and B. T. Rolston, have been charged by the department of lands and forests with interfering with a conservation officer and are scheduled to appear in magistrate's court at Gore Bay, Nov. 16.

The charge, laid under Section 12 of the Game and Fish Act, carries a maximum fine on conviction of $1,000.

The charges arose out of an incident the department claims took place Nov. 2 at the lands and forests checkpoint at Little Current. Conservation supervisor Charlie Bibby says the incident occurred when conservation officer Don Hughson asked two men who had been stopped at the checkpoint to produce their hunting licences.

Minister Gets Complaints Prisoners at Mercer Are Treated "Too Generously"

TORONTO (CP) — Allan Grossman, minister of Ontario reform institutions, said Thursday his department has received complaints from the public that prisoners at Mercer Reformatory for Women were being treated "too generously."

Mr. Grossman said the complaints were made after newspapers published photographs showing television sets in lounges outside the cells blocks at Mercer. The pictures were taken during a press tour of Mercer.

Because the women prisoners were allowed to watch television, the minister said, some persons had complained "that we were treating our wards too generously." However, he disagreed with this.

Mr. Grossman arranged the press tour after a York County grand jury issued a report condemning conditions at the reformatory and criticizing its superintendent, Jean Burrows as being unqualified for the job.

Newspaper stories written after the press tour of Mercer "gave a very balanced picture," Mr. Grossman told a press conference.

He announced the terms of reference for an inquiry into Mercer to be made by the Minister's Advisory Committee for Treatment of the Offender. The committee is to study all charges made by the grand jury.

The committee would make whatever recommendations it felt would be in the best interests of prisoners at Mercer, Mr. Grossman said.

Foreman Richard Lyall of the grand jury wrote in his report that medical, dental and library facilities at Mercer were inadequate; that lesbianism was tolerated; that Mrs Burrows was unqualified, and that prisoners were kept in dungeon-like "bucket cells."

Mr. Grossman later termed the grand jury's report "inaccurate and uninformed." However, he agreed the 84-year-old building was outdated.

Byelection Win May Be One-Shot Deal but NDP May Have Learned Lesson

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — "They'll never hold it in a general election."

That's getting to be a familiar comment here about New Democrat Max Saltzman's stunning byelection victory Monday in Waterloo South.

And, if a somewhat similar byelection upset about four years ago is any criterion, this assessment could be true.

But the New Democrats say there's a flaw in that kind of thinking. They learned a lesson since the first new party candidate won a byelection in Peterborough Oct. 31, 1960.

The Peterborough victory by a 31 - year - old schoolteacher came about seven months before the formal founding convention of the party. It scared the pants off the Conservatives and, especially, the Liberals who viewed with some anxiety the movement to found a new political party on the basis of the old CCF.

Walter Pitman, the victorious New Democrat, polled a whopping 12,306 votes in a traditionally Conservative riding where the old CCF hadn't got more than 2,000 two years earlier.

Like Waterloo South, the angle of the Pitman victory showed three major developments—an attractive candidate, intensive political organization and concentration on a main issue.

In Peterborough, the issue was a high degree of local unemployment. In Waterloo South, it was what Tory Reform Minister Leader Douglas called public demand "that Parliament quit fooling around and get down to bread and butter matters."

But once elected, Mr. Pitman wasn't able to duplicate performance in either the 1962 or 1963 general elections although he came within 500 and 800 votes of winning on each occasion.

What went wrong? Had the voters simply returned to their traditional Conservative loyalty after using the 1960 byelection as a one-shot protest?

The New Democrats think not. They feel Mr. Pitman was not the victim of his own success. He won just before the party's founding convention so he was swamped with requests for personal appearances.

Not only was he put on display throughout the country, he was heavily engaged in the preliminary work for the provincial founding of the party the following summer.

New Democrats say this meant he wasn't able to devote the time necessary to building a solid constituency organization and to inspire unattached but interested electors to become full-time supporters.

They don't intend to make that mistake with Waterloo South.

Lion's Owner Is Blamed for Death of Child

QUEBEC (CP)—Georges Baker, a 54-year-old pulp company constable whose pet lion cub mauled a three-month old Quebec baby to death last weekend, was found criminally responsible for the child's death Thursday.

A coroner's jury took five minutes to reach its verdict. The victim was Manon Tanguay of suburban Sillery, where Baker is her family's landlord.

The female lion cub Linda, bought by Baker at the beginning of the year from a Montreal animal dealer, attacked the girl in her parents' basement apartment.

Baker is to appear in sessions court today. He put up a $1,000 bond to appear.

He testified at the inquest that he called two suburban police forces the night the lioness killed the baby to ask them to come and kill the animal. He did not, however, tell them the child had been killed. Both left Sillery and the nearby Ste. Foy forces declined the night request.

Baker testified he paid a $20 fine for keeping a public nuisance—the lion—at his home, but said the judge had allowed him until Nov. 30 to get rid of the pet. Municipal Judge Andre Desmeules denied he had granted the delay.

U. S. Drought Proves Costly

CHICAGO (AP) — Communities turned to emergency measures for water over the eastern half of the United States today as one of the most severe droughts in U.S. history continued to take a costly toll.

Forest fires raged, communities sought emergency aid and winter crops wasted away in the warm, sunny autumn. Officials said the drought would cost farmers and others millions of dollars.

Some communities began drawing water from reservoirs of local lakes. Farmers were using tank trucks to haul water to their fields.

INVESTMENTS DROP

Total investments by the Bank of Canada dropped by $10,189,000 to $3,164,548,000 during the week ended Wednesday. The decline was entirely in traditional Conservative loyalty after using the 1960 byelection as a one-shot protest?

The New Democrats think not. They feel Mr. Pitman was not the victim of his own success. He won just before the party's founding convention so he was swamped with requests for personal appearances.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. Gorsline of Demorestville with sample of rye which won world championship at Royal Winter Fair. Trophies held by Mrs. Gorsline are from last year.

Royal Winter Fair Winner, H. Gorsline, Demorestville, Enjoys Exhibiting at Shows

A boyhood love of exhibiting at rural school fairs which continued into adult life, is paying off for Harry N. Gorsline of Demorestville, in Prince Edward County.

An exhibitor at Picton and Belleville fairs for more years than he can remember, Mr. Gorsline has been showing at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto for the past 14 years and usually comes home with his share of top money.

This year at the Royal Mr. Gorsline captured the world's rye championship for the fourth time and on two occasions has been reserve champion in the same class.

He also was top exhibitor in winter apples, repeating an honor achieved last year.

Mr. Gorsline also took a first and a third prize in beans.

He has been a consistent winner in recent years with his tetra petkus variety of rye, taking the Royal Winter Fair championship in 1956, 1961, 1962 and 1964. He won the reserve championship for rye in 1959 and in 1963.

But the factor of being world champion rye exhibitor does not come automatically.

It means countless hours of hand picking every kernel of grain that goes into the 15 pounds forwarded for exhibition purposes.

Several bushels are taken from a choice section of the rye field. This is put through the cleaning mill, then hand screened several times and finally hand picked—with use of a magnifying glass to assure uniform shape and quality.

ASSISTED BY WIFE

Mrs. Gorsline assists in hand picking of the exhibition samples of grain.

"It takes us about three days of hand picking to get the 15 pound sample," Mrs. Gorsline said. "So you know what we do with our evenings."

The tetra petkus variety of rye grown by Gorsline is the best for this climate and will return up to 75 bushels per acre.

The Gorsline name has been prominent in fair prize lists at Belleville and Picton for many decades.

Mr. Gorsline has been a consistent winner in grain, while Mrs. Gorsline is well known for her flower exhibits.

Also honored was Mrs. Mary Finner who has worked with the company for 53 years. Mrs. Finner was presented with an engraved gold watch.

Ten additional employees were presented with gifts of sterling silver bracelets and cuff links in recognition of 25 years of service. The length of service accumulated by the twelve employees so honored was 470 years for an average service of 39 years.

Independent Inquiries Will Be Launched Into Problem Of Hate Literature Mail

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—A post office tribunal, a group of MPs and a committee of experts soon will launch independent inquiries into a problem that has defied solution so far—how to curtail the increasing flow of hate propaganda.

The federal government decided on the three-pronged investigation after the collapse of preliminary efforts to prosecute the "hate-mongers" on the basis of present laws or to draft suitable new legislation to stop them.

The Commons external affairs committee will meet in private shortly to plan a series of public hearings on the thorny problem of legislating against organized bigotry directed at different ethnic, racial and religious groups.

The problem has attracted increasing public attention in the last year with a sharp upsurge in mail distribution of anti-semitic and anti-Negro pamphlets.

Most of the material is believed to originate with extreme right-wing organizations in the United States which use a few anonymous persons as their Canadian agents.

WILL CALL WITNESSES

John R. Matheson, Liberal MP for Leeds and chairman of the 35-member external committee, said in an interview Thursday he hopes to have on call 12 to 15 top-calibre witnesses over the next few weeks.

They will include A. W. Brockington, prominent Toronto lawyer and orator who made a special study of the subject, spokesmen for Jewish groups, outstanding Roman Catholic and Protestant clerics, psychologists, psychiatrists and provincial officials who enforce existing human rights laws.

He said the committee will examine the anti-propaganda legislation of the U.S. and Scandinavian countries and why this legislation has failed to be effective in many instances.

The committee would not restrict itself to anti-semitism but would seek to expose all forms of group hatred as a disease.

The second inquiry into hate literature will be undertaken by a small committee of legal experts appointed by Justice Minister Favreau. The committee is expected to work informally and recommend new legislation to the minister early next year.

CONSIDERS AMENDMENTS

The justice department has been considering amendments to the Criminal Code, but so far no formula has been devised to prohibit the distribution of hate literature and still protect the freedoms of speech and press.

The third attack on hate literature takes the form of a post office board of review, opening quasi - judicial hearings here Nov. 23.

Mr. Justice Dalton Wells of the Ontario Court of Appeals will preside, assisted by Rodrigue Bedard, associate deputy minister of justice, and G. Douglas McIntyre, a lawyer with the revenue department.

The board will hear an appeal from the so-called National States Rights Party, Birmingham, Ala., which was denied the use of Canadian mails in July under an interim order by Transport and Postmaster-General Jack Nicholson.

After hearing legal arguments, the board will decide whether to issue a permanent prohibitive order against the Alabama outfit or lift the original one if it is found that the postmaster - general exceeded his authority.

The board itself will decide whether its hearings will be open to the public and press. Similar reviews of pornography and lottery tickets barred from the mails normally are held in private.

Parliamentary Notebook

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—This national capital has been building trouble again with the words it uses to describe its national institutions.

The word national for instance.

One year ago, Parliament was busy changing the name of the national centennial administration in the centennial of Canada's federation commission, mainly because Premier Lesage of Quebec objected to the word federation commission.

What is happening in 1967, the 100th anniversary of the coming into force of the British North America Act, the real centenary of the Canadian nation, according to Quebec's argument.

There was a national park here before 1867, and if anything, Quebec dates from 1608 when Samuel de Champlain built his habitation.

So now, the planners have been busy working out that dastarted changing the name of federal agencies which for generations had been called "dominion."

And the trouble broke out this week in two of the centennial commission's subsidiary projects.

The commission sponsored a conference of ethnic group leaders, encouraging them to work together in a national—oops, well, a nation wide — body to promote and preserve ethnic cultures. The title given to the meeting was a mouthful to establish a national council for the folk arts."

Things started smoothly enough, but as soon as the first plenary session was opened to discussion from delegates on the floor, Quebec representatives questioned this business of forming a national council before there was such a thing as a Quebec council.

The debate was shunted off into a committee session, and when a solution emerged the next day it was to set up a provisional council for Quebec and form, not a national council, but the folk arts, but the "Canadian folk arts council."

To some extent the chairman of the opening session of the folk arts meeting was himself caught up in the use of the word national. He is Hamilton Southam, co-ordinator of the Canadian Centre for the Performing Arts.

This is the new multi-purpose theatre, concert hall, recital and rehearsal complex to be built west of the Rideau Canal in downtown Ottawa near the National War Memorial.

When the project was first announced earlier this year, and when Mr. Southam was appointed to head the—organizational work, it was known as the National Centre for the Performing Arts. So well-known was it by that title, that among centennial planners and others it was simply identified as the NCPA.

But Mr. Southam's name appeared on the letterhead of conference program as co-ordinator of the Canadian Centre for the Performing Arts, and it was explained that the centre hasn't yet been christened with its f national name.

All of this recalls the controversy about a decade ago over what to call the building that dastarted changing the name of federal agencies which for generations had been called "dominion."

About the only one that remains unchanged is the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The DBS daily bulletin of statistical reports is one of the most frequently consulted documents by politicians and administrators.

Presumably the reason "dominion" hasn't been dropped from the bureau of statistics is that nobody really wants to rename the DBS without its first initial.

German Reds Close Wall

BERLIN (AP)—East German Communists closed the Berlin Wall again Thursday after a 16-day visiting period expired at midnight.

Grave doubts were voiced in West Berlin that the wall would reopen for Christmas to allow West Berliners to visit their relatives in the Communist sector.

The Communists threatened Thursday to keep the wall closed over the Christmas holidays. The threat was to end at the fact that East German mark would be bought up West Berlin at an exchange rate higher than the one set by the East German regime.

Pinch Hitting

By CASEY ALEXANDER

World heavyweight boxing champ Cassius Clay said the other day that he "cranked God in my corner" for Monday's title defence against Sonny Liston.

An office buff was quickly forgiven for quipping: "and he will sure need Him.'

But with only a weekend to go before boxing's kingpin meet for the second time, one can't help but wonder why the change in the "Louisville Lip."

Clay has mouthed that he will knock Liston out in the ninth round. He has, on occasions, been his usual self, telling one and all just what he will do to "that big ugly bear."

However, Cassius has been, for him, much more on the quiet side than might be expected.

Now he seems to have accepted the fact that he just might lose. He is quoted as saying: "If I lose it'll be God's will."

To the best of our memory, this is the first time in Clay's career that he has ever publicly considered that he might be beaten.

He could be just talking for the gate's sake but this hardly seems necessary. Boston Gardens is expected to be sold out long before the bell for round one sounds at 10.00 p.m., Monday. And the big money will come from the theatres and TV coverage of the fight.

You will, by the way, be able to listen to the fight on CBC radio but don't be late tuning in—or you may be just in time to hear the closing commercial.

Liston, realizing he must win this fight to redeem himself for that slick showing when he lost the title, will go for early blood.

He is said to be in the best shape of his life. Sonny has been disposing of sparring mates in quick, brutal style.

Liston's left shoulder, the one which he claims cost him the first fight and his title, has been cleared as A-one by the medics.

In fact, both fighters were classed tip-top at the preliminary medical check on Monday. A repeat diagnosis at the final checkup will dispose of any alibis for either side.

If Sonny is in as good a condition as the reports claim and if Clay has lost his edge of confidence, or if he has changed his fighting style, you may well see Liston regain the crown.

But, if Clay moves as quickly as he did in the first meeting and again succeeds in frustrating the "Bear,' look for the title to stay perched on the Cassius noggin.

In the boxing game, especially in its present, mixed up state, nothing makes much sense.

That is not the point. The idea is to make dollars.

The World Boxing Association, which does not recognize the fight, nor its participants, says that an opponent for Monday's champ has already been chosen and that its (the WBA's) elimination tournament to declare a new champion is being ignored.

The WBA says if Liston wins Monday, he will fight Ernie Terrell but if Clay wins, his next opponent will be Floyd Patterson. Terrell claims he just wants to meet the champ but so do several others, including Canada's George Chuvalo.

No matter which way it goes Monday, there will be yelling from some corners—and the charges won't be pretty ones.

JUNIORS HERE TONIGHT

The junior hockey season gets its official opening here tonight when Wab Gerow's Napanee Legion crew tangles with our Belleville "B's" in a nine o'clock fixture.

The "B's" lost a tough one in their first league action at Trenton Wednesday but hope to even their record tonight. A five-minute letdown permitted Trenton to score all the club's goals in a 4-3 win over Gordie Bell's boys.

Bell said following the game that he was happy with the club's performance, "except for that brief lapse."

A game misconduct cost Belleville the use of Bob Boyle early in the game and the loss hurt the club considerably. However, a Section source said the game was a cleanly-played one except for a couple of brief mixups.

A bright spot from a local viewpoint has been Jim Rutherford's hot scoring eye to date. The husky forward fired five goals in an earlier exhibition and trigered all three in Wednesday's loss.

Napanee clubs of the past have been great diggers. Gerow makes his boys put their heads down and skate, skate, skate, so the "B's" will have to go all out to keep pace tonight.

A good crowd for this opener will boost the locals greatly.

BREAKS OWN RECORD

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP) — Paula Murphy drove a 10,000 horse-power jet car to an average 326.37 miles an hour Thursday to break her own women's land speed record. Mrs. Murphy's former record of 161.20 m.p.h. was set last year in a car driven by an internal combustion engine.

FOUTS CLEARED

'Title Will Change That' ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Liston Builds Fury With Loneliness

BOSTON (AP) — The last 36 weeks have been the loneliest of all in the troubled life of ex-champion Charles (Sonny) Liston. He figures he can change all that by regaining the heavyweight boxing crown from Cassius Clay Monday night.

"I just want that li'-a," said the man Clay calls 'that big, ugly bear. "That's all there is in all this world.

"When you wake up and find you're not the champ any more you're all alone. The guys with the big months are out talking about you, not to you, and what they say ain't what they said the day before. It's a big price to pay.

"Never mind what Clay has to say. I don't want to hear them or read them. Let him talk. A scared man talks like that. I'm going my way this time and I'm working hard.

"I'm going to get that title and keep it a long time. I'm going to like it and with it I won't be lonely."

BUILDS FURY

Liston is building up an infernal fury for the Boston Garden rematch at the Pan Am Pool in Miami, where his injured left shoulder did not permit him to stretch past the eighth round of their first meeting.

"No more press conferences," announced publicist Al Braver here at the Plymouth Mass., training site. "Sonny's been cooperating as fully as possible all along. He's getting very edgy now, and he wants to be alone."

One observer watches Liston pummeling his sparmates and commented:

"He's full up to here with viciousness," pointing to his forehead. "He's got so much viciousness inside him he's just got to let it out."

Stanley Zimmerring, Liston's conditioner, made this observation:

"For the last fight I wanted him to train forever but he went to Las Vegas, then to Miami Beach. It was no good but who was I to say?

"If I had had $1,000 then, I'd have bet it on Clay. I know Sonny wasn't in condition, physically or mentally. The fact he didn't hurt his shoulder in the fight proves it.

"This time we started last May and I tried to convince his mind first, then his legs.

"Sonny's in condition now."

Braves Have Hopes

ATLANTA (AP) — Milwaukee Braves have not given up hopes of moving their National League baseball franchise to Atlanta for the 1965 season.

Tom Reynolds Jr., executive vice-president of the team, told a press conference Thursday there are slim hopes the team will go south before 1966.

"We would like to play in Atlanta in 1965 but we still have to play where our league directs us to," Reynolds said.

"It would be in the best interest of Milwaukee, Atlanta and baseball in general for us to move now," he said

Reynolds, noting that a final decision is not to be made soon, placed a Dec. 15 deadline on working out some arrangement to get the Braves to Atlanta for 1965. If something can't be worked out by that time, he said it will be difficult to move until 1966.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Rose Herbert, a six-year-old mare, hadn't won a race in 35 starts in two years until she captured the fifth event at the Western Fair Raceway here Thursday night.

She took the lead at the start and was never headed as she paced the mile in 2:14. Despite her poor record, Rose Herbert paid only $5.20 to win.

The 10-race card was highlighted by two big payoffs. In the sixth, Ruth Key returned $42.80 for each $2 win ticket and in the seventh, Marsha Hal paid $33.80 and helped manufacture an exacta of $105.30 when coupled with second place Private Lee.

Continue Title Tourney Plans

TORONTO (CP) — Merv McKenzie of Toronto, president of the World Boxing Association, said Thursday night that Frank Tunney of Toronto is one of four promoters who will be asked to stage an elimination scrap for the WBA version of the world heavyweight championship.

In addition to Tunney, who has promoted many major bouts in Toronto, the promoters are Pinkey George of Los Angeles and Harry Markson and A. Bolan, both of New York.

In Providence, R.I., Anthony Macaroni, chairman of the WBA championship committee, said Thursday night that the WBA has verbal assurance from its four top contenders that they would attend a New York meeting Nov. 30 to begin arrangements for a title tournament.

The WBA has declared the world heavyweight championship vacant and is not recognizing Monday night's Boston fight between champion Cassius Clay and Sonny Liston.

Macaroni said the four WBA contenders are Ernie Terrell of Cleveland, Floyd Patterson of New York, Cleveland Williams of Houston and Canadian heavyweight champ George Chuvalo of Toronto.

Pairings for the first two fights in the elimination tourney for the title will be made at the meeting Macaroni said.

Player Sues After Loss Of Eye

HALIFAX (CP) — James (Jim) MacLean, former defenceman with Halifax Tartans of the Nova Scotia Senior Hockey League, Thursday sued former team owner Ignatius Kennedy of Halifax for damages resulting from the loss of MacLean's right eye.

MacLean lost his eye in an accident in a game in Moncton last Dec. 21 against Moncton Hawks. Kennedy later gave up the team, which was taken over by new sponsors and renamed the Halifax Schooners.

Chief Justice J. L. Ilsley adjourned the case for decision.

MacLean, who said he was being paid $150 a week by the Tartans, testified that Kennedy had said a player would be "looked after" in case of injury.

MacLean and Bill Hanson, the team captain, both said that Kennedy told them his lawyer was looking after the players' insurance.

About $1,000 was raised for MacLean by the team in a benefit game.

MacLean said he had received a week's salary from Kennedy the day prior to his injury, but had not seen him since the incident.

Defence lawyer C. R. Matheson said he would present no evidence.

Says Soviet Soccer Fans Lose Interest

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet soccer fans, among the world's most avid, are losing interest in the game, says the newspaper Izvestia.

The reason, it said, is the football heroes' inability to win important matches abroad.

"We'll be frank—interest in the games fell after the defeats which the U.S.S.R. national team suffered in Madrid and the Olympic team in Warsaw" last summer, it said Thursday.

"And this is understandable—the national teams' class of play is determined by the play of the club teams."

Expect Tough Series

Ti-Cats Flirting With Jinx

OTTAWA (CP) —They probably aren't a bit worried, but Hamilton Tiger-Cats are flirting with a jinx situation.

The defending Grey Cup champions fly into Ottawa today —Friday the 13th—to prepare for Saturday's opening of the Eastern Football Conference two-game total-points final.

And when they take to the field at 1 p.m. EST at Lansdowne Park it will end a 13-day layoff.

Judging from the season's record, Ottawa Rough Riders will need to have much more than a touch of jinx for them to get past the powerful TiCats and into the Grey Cup contest at Toronto Nov. 28.

The clubs meet three times in the regular season. Riders edged the TiCats 13-10 here on Aug. 14 but were trounced 23-1 at Hamilton Oct. 12 and 34-16 at home Oct 17.

Total scoring points in the three outings: Hamilton 67, Ottawa 30.

Odds-makers, rating the record higher than any possible jinx, have made TiCats six-point favorites for the opening game of the set which winds up at Hamilton Nov. 21.

EXPECTS TOUGH SERIES

But Hamilton coach Ralph Sazio isn't quite that confident

"We've been working hard," he said. "I'm looking for a tough series and we are preparing for it."

He said he doesn't know what the end result will be, but "I know the layoff has not hurt us."

Sazio has no player problems, with everyone ready for action after the break, while Ottawa will be minus Whit Tucker and halfback Bo Scott in their offensive backfield.

Nobody is more aware of the situation than the Rough Rider players. Coach Frank Clair's big problem this week has been to get his club in a fighting mood and inject some confidence into the atmosphere.

Judging from the vigorous way the Riders have been working out this week he's having more than a little success.

START NEW TRICKS

Some new offensive tricks have been introduced by Clair, who has been prepared for last Saturday's sudden-death semi-final against Montreal Alouettes. Riders rolled to an easy 27-0 victory in that one and didn't have to dip into their bag of new ideas.

But Hamilton's defence is no soft touch, with the likes of Pete Neumann, Angelo Mosca, Bobby Kuntz, John Barrow, Garney Henley and Ron Stewart and the Riders may have to try a different approach if they want to take a lead to Hamilton for the second game.

Saturday's game will be carried by the CTV network.

Resolution Threatens To Split AAU

B.C. Sponsored

By W. R. WHEATLEY

MONTREAL (CP)—A controversial resolution that would split the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada into autonomous groups comes before the general session of the AAU's annual meeting today.

The motion, sponsored by the British Columbia chapter, requests that amateur athletes presenting an individual sport be permitted to withdraw as a constituent body and apply for membership as an autonomous affiliate.

Although not dealt with directly a Thursday's opening of the three-day gathering, the resolution was discussed at the individual committee level. One group opposed it and two others remained uncommitted.

The suggestion, which originated with the B.C. section of the wrestling committee would mean that each sport could set itself up as a self-governing body and deal individually with such things as registration of athletes and participation in international meets.

The committee as a whole decided it would oppose such a move while the track and field and boxing groups didn't take action.

Officials indicated that the resolution as it stands wouldn't be accepted although the door was left open to modification or compromise.

Other items dealt with on the opening day included:

1. A recommendation certain to be passed by the general meeting, that Montrealers Dennis White, Jack Davies and Mrs. Hilda Strike Sisson be elected to the AAU Hall of Fame.

2. A suggestion that a standard medical examination form be established for all AAU track and field athletes. The form would be voluntary and completed at the time of an athlete's registration.

3. A suggestion by Saskatchewan that international game levies assessed against various sports be redistributed on an annual basis as a means of more effectively financing the AAU's national team.

4. A recommendation by the central Ontario branch that insurance be a prerequisite to sanctioning of boxing tournaments where competitors don't wear headgear.

ASK DOUBLE POST

5. A resolution asking the general session to approve appointment of both coach and manager for boxing teams of several competitions in international meets instead of combining the duties upon one person

Davies, immediate past president of the AAU, has long been associated with track and field in Canada. At present he is a member of the technical committee of the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

Mrs. Sisson, as Hilda Strike, won silver medals for Canada in the 100-metre dash at the 1932 in the 100-metre dash at 1937 Olympics and the 100-yard event at the 1934 British Empire Games.

White, a native of Waterloo, Que., was national boxing chairman for 23 years and head of the national boxing committee for 32 years. He coached the Canadian boxing team at the 1932 Olympics and the 1934 Empire Games.

Faces Paralysis

Courage Marks Henry's Play

By TED BLACKMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Courage turns up in the strangest places, even in the National Hockey League where men play seemingly - innocent boys' games for high salaries

It's an enviable vocation: short hours, travel, five-figure pay cheques, recognition and four-month summer holidays But the hidden risks and tribulations are seldom noticed by the fans.

For example, consider the cases of Camille Henry and Lorne (Gump) Worsley, two of the smallest and most courageous performers in the NHL today.

Henry, currently the hottest scorer in the league with five of New York's last eight goals, is battling a severe back injury that could end his 12-year NHL career at any moment.

Since the ailment developed three years ago, the 152-pound centre has tried every remedy known to medicine to sleep at sea

He wears a corset constantly, sleeps on a board and takes medicine to sleep at sea

NEEDS OPERATION

Doctors say only an operation will solve his disc troubles, but to him the fortunes of the Rangers come first

"Sometimes I'm walking down the street and suddenly no legs," he explained recently. "I need an operation, but when we're winning I think I can delay it until the end of the season When we lose, I think maybe now is the time."

Although warned by doctors that he's toying with fate and that further injury could mean paralysis, the Rangers are serious contenders for the first time in several seasons and Henry just won't quit.

Worsley is another man who produces under overwhelming pressure. He proved that again this week.

Relegated to the minors for a year because of Charlie Hodge's outstanding work in Montreal Canadiens nets, Worsley has been aching to get back in the league. Given a chance even his greatest fears wouldn't block his way.

Hodge was injured Tuesday in a workout at Chicago where Montreal was scheduled to meet the Black Hawks Wednesday night. Worsley was summoned from his bed at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday and told to fly to Chicago immediately.

FLYING UPSETS HIM

The Gumper, however would rather walk than fly. Even a short flight jars his nerves.

But Worsley drove from Quebec City, where he toils for the American Hockey League Aces, boarded a plane from Montreal to Chicago at 12:15 p.m. and was in the nets at Chicago Stadium three hours after he checked into the hotel

Most men would be ready to quit after a day like that, but not the Gumper.

It was his exceptional netminding especially in the first period, that led Montreal to a 4-1 victory.

"We should have been ahead 3-0 after that first period," admitted Chicago coach Bill Reay. "Worsley killed us."

Although Gump's nerves appear to be made of steel, he's the first to concede he's a mere mortal.

"Sure I was nervous," he said. "I was thinking of that first shot. You feel like a real dummy if that one goes in and it hurts the team."

It didn't.

There were no games in the NHL Thursday night and only scheduled tonight, but five games are slated for the week end as Detroit Red Wings attempt to protect their two-point first-period lead over Montreal and Toronto.

Detroit visits Montreal and Boston is at Toronto Saturday night. The Bruins play host to Montreal Sunday night while Toronto visits Chicago and Detroit travels to New York.

MUST LOOK CLOSELY

WINNIPEG (CP)—Manitoba's deer hunting season opens Monday, and in part of the province there's a new regulation requiring hunters to examine their target as perhaps they never did before. Roughly, in hunting areas south of an east-west line through Dauphin the legal deer must have forked or branching antlers. A hunter cannot merely assume a deer has horns, but must be able to see the fork's or branches.

Active Week On British Soccer Market

LONDON (Reuters) — It was an active week for buyers in top-flight British soccer.

Sunderland, third-last among the 22 clubs in the English League's top division, has shelled out £62,000 ($186,000) for two players from Scotland.

Glasgow Rangers, languishing in eighth place among the 17 first-division teams in the Scottish League, entered the transfer market to purchase inside-forward Thorolf Beck from St. Mirren's Icelandic.

The Sunderland club paid a Scottish first-division club, Hibernian, £36,000 for Irish full-back John Parke. Then Harry Hood, Clyde's inside - forward, joined Sunderland at a price of £26,000.

Sunderland won promotion back to the first division last season after being relegated in 1957-58.

SOUGHT BY OTHERS

Hood, a promising 20-year-old who is equally effective as centre-forward, had been sought by two other clubs within the last week. First, transfer talks with Scottish club Celtic broke down, and then Stoke City failed to sign him.

Parke is a member of the Northern Ireland team that meets Switzerland in a World Cup qualifying match Saturday, and reports at Sunderland after that game.

Glasgow Rangers, cock of the walk for so many years in Scottish soccer, signed Beck in an attempt to boost the effectiveness of their attack.

Beck, who cost them in the region of £20,000, is the second Icelander to play for Rangers. The other was right-winger Albert Gudmundson, who appeared with Rangers just after the Second World War and then joined Arsenal.

Beck signed for St. Mirren from Reykjavik three years ago and has made several appearances for the Iceland international team.

PAID TOP PRICE

Hull City paid the top price of the week Thursday by going to £40,000, an English third-division record, for Ken Wagstaff, 24-year-old Mansfield town centre-forward. Hull beat a number of English first - division clubs to get Wagstaff, who was the country's leading scorer with 41 goals in the 1962-63 season when Mansfield won promotion to the third division.

Hull, one of the richest clubs in the country, has recently spent £53,000 on a new gymnasium and practice field and £48,000 on floodlighting.

An in-form Wagstaff should help Hull make certain of victory over non-leaguers Kidderminster in Saturday's first round of the Football Association Cup.

In the English first division, interest will be centred on two top-class first-place Manchester United at Blackpool, and second-place Chelsea at home to Everton.

United slammed Borussia Dortmund 6-1 in the Inter-cities Fairs Cup in West Germany Wednesday but is likely to find Blackpool a tougher proposition.

Chelsea, a point behind United in the standings, won through to the quarter-finals of the football league Wednesday by downing Swansea 2-2. It will be hoping to maintain its recently improved form against Everton, which has won four of its nine road games this season.

Quinte Hockey League

SACO whitewashed Rossmore 6-0 while Cherry Dashers and Horlock Electrics fought to a 2-2 deadlock in Quinte Hockey League game last night.

The Electrics and Daubers traded single goals in each of the first two periods in a tight contest.

A. Ruttan and B. Jeffery triggered the Ter-Haar goals, with R. Pointer and B. Smith drawing assists.

Bill Hill and Bob Hurst scored for the Horlocks. B. Seames picked up one assist.

SACO jumped into a 4-0 first period lead against Rossmore, adding two in the second and a final one in the third.

D. Forsythe starred for SACO with a four-goal performance. S. Woodcock fired two goals and K. Forsythe got the other. G. Genereaux had three assists, A. Deline two, Woodcock and D. Day one apiece.

North Shore Hockey League

In the opening games of the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League, at Wellington, last night, Melville Shorelines thumped Demoresville 7-3 and Proctor Silex nipped Cherry Valley 3-2.

Melville broke a 1-1 first-period deadlock to move ahead 4-1 going into the third.

Gary Pyke and Eldon Carson led the winner's attack with two goals and two assists each. Ed Ross, Don Simpson and Dave LaHaie also scored.

The Demoresville goals went to Bongard, Pringle and Mitchell.

There were 14 penalties, including one major, in the game.

Cherry Valley led until Proctor Silex scored two unanswered goals in the third period of the closer second game. It was 1-0 and 2-1 by periods.

Merve Redding scored the winning goal, unassisted, for Proctor Silex. Names of the other scorers were not available.

Reddick and Pendleton were the Cherry Valley marksmen.

Eight penalties were called, one of them a major.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Last Monday marked a significant anniversary in the life of Ted Workman of Montreal Alouettes in the Eastern Football Conference, but it's likely the Als owner would just as soon forget Nov. 9.

On that date in 1960 he announced a player deal that shocked the Canadian football world and eventually shattered his team. That was the day he tried to trade off quarterback Sam Etcheverry and end halfback Patterson to Hamilton Tiger-Cats for quarter Bernie Faloney and defensive end Don Paquette.

Workman had good reason to recall that memorable day if he got around to reading Monday's newspapers which gave the grisly details of the Als' shattering 27-0 loss to Ottawa Rough Riders in the sudden-death Eastern semi - final. Workman has been the loser all around.

Etcheverry, who learned of the trade in a telephone call from the owner, couldn't have any part of it. Faloney went to court about it and Tiger-Cats were the winners.

LOST THE RIFLE

They kept Faloney, got Patterson for Paquette. Etcheverry went to Chicago (now St.. Louis) Cardinals of the National Football League, got splinters from bench - sitting and eventually wound up this year as general manager of Quebec Rifles in the United Football League.

There's no doubt that Workman pulled a rock, although Perry Moss, his coach and general manager at the time, took the blame from irate Montreal fans. But this deal was Workman's brainchild and he admitted it later when he said "I shouldn't all the responsibility personally for the trade."

He insisted, however, that the only mistake he made was in the way he handled the situation. "I should have consulted Sam and Hal before I announced the trade."

Maybe so, especially since Faloney has been a key man in Ticats' march to the Grey Cup final in 1961, 1962 and 1963.

The deal, of course, have been nothing. Workman got rid of Moss, Paquette went to another and Toronto Argonauts and Montreal is still looking for a quarterback, someone who can lead them out of the wilderness.

TRIMBLE IS ASSET

It has cost Workman a pile of money. He tried Sandy Stephens, a $100,000-baby problem in 1962. Sandy didn't last a year. Workman had outbid Cleveland Browns and Detroit Lions of the NFL for Stephens and the scuttlebutt was that he spent $70,000 to sign the University of Minnesota quarter t) a three-year no-cut contract.

Argos got Sandy for the $250 waiver price and they unloaded him this season.

Workman has plenty of troubles.

He hasn't a big-league team, his plans for a 40,000-seat stadium by 1965 are rumored to have blown up and a few thousand seats in the park he now rents will be cut out next year to make room for an enlarged running track. This means a loss in annual revenue of about $150,000.

But he has one big asset, Coach Jim Trimble. Give the Als an Etcheverry-type quarterback and they could be in business.

MAHOVLICH IF HOSPITAL

TORONTO (CP)—Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League was admitted to hospital Thursday for a complete medical checkup. Leaf officials said the big left winger has not been feeling well for a week although he took his regular shifts in a game here Wednesday night against Detroit Red Wings.

High scores: Mary Pajackowski Monday, had Calgary officials worried. He was given Canadian Thruway to help keep weight off his right foot. A similar injury in 1962 all but sidelined him for the entire final series.

Halfback Jim Dillard was reported limping. He returned recently to the lineup after a fractured ankle had kept him out of action for 11 games.

Centre and linebacker Jess Williams was the only reported B.C. player hampered by injuries. A leg ailment, if not healed by game time, will respect his activity to snaps on punts.

The game was expected to be a battle between B.C.'s crack defensive unit, which gave up only 168 points in 16 league starts and never more than two touchdowns a game, and Calgary's high - powered offence which scored a league-leading 352 points.

Three players accounted for half of the 18 goals in two Ontario Hockey Association Junior A games Thursday night.

Paced by Bryan Grant's three goal performance, Peterborough Petes walloped first-place Oshawa Generals 7-1 in Peterborough while Real Lemieux fired three goals for Hamilton Red Wings in their 5-4 victory over last-place Kitchener Rangers. Sandy Fitzpatrick netted three goals for Kitchener.

The win moved Peterborough into fourth place with 11 points, one ahead of St. Catharines Black Hawks but still eight behind Oshawa. Hamilton, with their second win of the season and first on home ice, moved into a sixth place tie with Montreal Junior Canadiens.

George Godson, Don Herman, Mickey Redmond and Leo Thiffault scored the other Peterborough goals in a clean, fast game. Ron Buchanan got the Oshawa tally.

Other Red Wing goals came from Rick Libbett, Peter Mahovlich and captain Jimmy Peters. For some reason he stuck an apostrophe in after the O and added the second L.

"They thought it looked okay and decided not to complain. We've been spelling it that way ever since."

The O'Billovich fam.y later moved to Edmonton and Bob attended Montana State University. He leafned football there, graduated in 1962 and came t.. Ottawa last year. His Rider teammates quickly dubbed him "Obie."

The five-foot-10, 182-pounder was a quarterback at college and now backs up Russ Jackson, at that spot in addition to playing defence.

Bob has had an excellent sophomore year, finishing with the best pass-interception record in the East. He picked off six throws and returned them for 183 yards, including two touchdown runs.

Saturday, is not yet known. However, Jim Trimble, Canada's team captain, said in an interview Thursday:

"I will name Jim to the team. He feels perfect physically and mentally. But the final decision probably rests with Jim's doctor.

"If he doesn't ride this week he may ride in one or two events next week."

The Toronto rider was the individual champion at the Harrisburg, Penn., show with 52 points and was tied for third place in New York with 26 points.

Vocal Support Aid To Stamps

CALGARY (CP) — The success of Calgary Stampeders in their Western Football Conference final series with British Columbia Lions could be measured in the vociferous support the team gets from the fans here Saturday.

The underdog Stamps, host to the Lions in the opening of a best - of - three set, discovered that vocal support may have provided the necessary zeal that enabled the Calgarians to rout Saskatchewan Roughriders 31-6 in the second game of the conference semi-final here Monday night.

And while coach Bobby Dobbs admits he doesn't expect Calgary to duplicate their stunning brand of play against the powerful Lions, he does feel that vocal support from the hometowners will be a deciding factor.

The first game is set for 2 p.m. MST (4 p.m. EST). It will be seen on the CBC national television network.

Of last Monday's game, Dobbs said:

"It showed what enthusiasm among fans can do to the players. I don't care what kind of a pitch would have been, there was nobody who was going to stop us Monday night."

WIN SERIES

The victory gave Calgary the two - game, total - point series 76-40.

The constant cheer set up by fans was a big factor in Calgary's victory.

A similar uproar has been a familiar experience to many citizens. Region fans have lustily many Roughrider teams, including the 1963 club that overhauled Calgary in a similar finish.

Two years ago in the WFC final between Winnipeg and Calgary, Bombers' fans set up such a roar each time Eagle Day led Calgary's offensive team on the field that numerous signals were missed.

After that series league officials decided to allow the referee to stop play once, but after that play had to resume.

Second and, if necessary, third games of the series will be played in Vancouver Wednesday, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m. PST, and Saturday, Nov. 22, at 2 p.m. PST. Both games will be seen on CTV and CBC national network.

END PRACTICE

The two teams completed closed practice sessions Thursday night.

An ankle sprain, suffered by All-star guard Tony Pajackowski Monday, had Calgary officials worried. He was given Canadian Thruway to help keep weight off his right foot. A similar injury in 1962 all but sidelined him for the entire final series.

Halfback Jim Dillard was reported limping. He returned recently to the lineup after a fractured ankle had kept him out of action for 11 games.

Centre and linebacker Jess Williams was the only reported B.C. player hampered by injuries. A leg ailment, if not healed by game time, will respect his activity to snaps on punts.

Bob O'Billovich

So, What's In A Name?

OTTAWA (CP)—People striking up a conversation with Bob O'Billovich have a standard opening:

"What part of Ireland are you from?"

"I guess I've been asked that a thousand times," say the 23 year-old defensive star of Ottawa Rough Riders.

His unusual surname does have a remote Irish connection It was "invented" by an Irish immigration officer who filled out the entry papers after Bob's grandparents arrived in the United States from Yugoslavia

"The family name was Obilo which originally," he said Thursday in an interview just before Riders started a workout for Saturday's opening of the Eastern Football Conference two game total-points final.

Charges Smokescreen

Finley Raps Ford Frick

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Ford Frick's indictment of organized baseball and his warning to the major league club owners that they must arm his successor with more authority to restore public confidence drew a defiant reaction Thursday.

Charles O. Finley, maverick owner of Kansas City Athletics, said: "Here is a man pleading for dictatorial powers when all three years he hasn't even been able to exercise the authority given to him as commissioner of baseball."

Finley, in a long distance telephone interview, added: "By blaming the owners for his failure, Frick is creating a smokescreen to cover up his own unwillingness to exercise the powers he has had for 14 years.

Frick, who will retire next September, told the owners' summit meeting in Phoenix, Ariz., last week that his successor should have the autocratic powers given Kennesaw Mountain Landis, when the Chicago judge became the first commissioner soon after the Black Sox scandal. Such authority was stripped from A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Landis's successor, and Frick as the game's third commissioner.

The owners agreed to recommend the restoration of these powers to the new commissioner. A formal vote will be taken at the annual winter meeting in Houston next month.

"I am opposed to putting the club owners under a dictatorial administration," said Finley, "I believe the commissioner has plenty of authority right now, if he'd only exercise it."

Hold First Juvenile Playoff

MONTREAL (CP)—A Montreal team with the unwieldy name of Point St. Charles Leo's Boys are westward-bound today to take part in Canada's first playoff for national juvenile football honors Sunday at Winnipeg.

They will meet St. Boniface Norwood Bruins, Manitoba champions, in the title game.

Although formed only last year, the "Point," as the team is called, belongs to an association with an intriguing history —Leo's Boys Sports Association Incorporated.

Leo's began in 1948 as a loose, knit group set up to organize kids' sports in Point St. Charles, a teeming, tenement-congested district of mostly working class families, jammed between the Lachine Canal and the CNR's waterfront railway yards.

I was founded by Leo Mell, a teen - ager, whose death in March, 1961, of leukemia gave the group a new impetus. His brother Joe Mell, and a friend, Jules Sarriera, shocked by the death of the boy promoter from the wrong side of the tracks, rallied a larger following, named the organization Leo's Boys, and they never looked back.

Today, Leo's Boys supervise 82 teams in five sports for 1,500 youngsters in the district. Joe Mell is still president and his team of volunteer workers still uses a fund - raising program painstakingly set up by his brother.

HOLD SWIM MEET

TORONTO (CP)—University Settlement Aquatic Club will hold a swimmet Saturday designed to start development of a 1968 Canadian Olympic swim team. Swimming in open events at the age-class meet will be two 1964 Olympians — Dan Sherry and Patty Thompson, both of Hamilton. The emphasis, however, will be on the younger swimmers.

AT THE PARK — Doug McClure (left) and James Darren in a scene from Universal's "The Lively Set," showing tonight and Saturday Evening Only, romantic drama with a racing car background. The pair star in the color film with Pamela Tiffin, Joanne Sommers and Marilyn Maxwell. On the same program "Sing and Swing". Both features are first showings.

More Confident Godfrey Looks Fit for Anything

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It was a mellower, more confident Arthur Godfrey who dropped in town this week to perform his daily radio show and emcee a Hollywood Palace for ABC.

The mellowness comes partly from age and he surprises you when he says: "I am 61 years old—but 62 next August if I live that long." He looks scarcely over 40, his hair still rust-colored and unthinned, his face unlined.

As for confidence? Some of his detractors might argue he never lacked it. But on reflection he disclosed that it is a recent acquisition.

"I never realized the dimensions of what I had acquired over the years," he commented between his radio and television commitments. "I didn't really find out until three years ago, when I started to go out and face the public.

"When you've spent most of your working life in a small studio, sometimes completely alone, you don't develop any understanding of what you are capable of. Besides, there were plenty of people who helped to keep my confidence from growing.

"When I was doing well in television, the old, established entertainers would don't accept me. They told gags like: Arthur Godfrey is a new kind of act in show business—all you have to do is show up.'

"Sure, that hurt me but I knew why they did it. I was something new, something they didn't understand."

Godfrey figures his turning

AT THE PARK — Carroll Baker and Allied Artists "Harlow Sin-Sation," caught in a reflective mood, in one of the scenes from the sizzling and suspenseful comedy opening Monday at the Park Theatre for its first Belleville showing.

point came three years ago when he was recording his radio show in Miami. The hotel management asked if visitors could be admitted to the broadcast in the dining room. Godfrey agreed and was astonished to see that he and his troupe could hold a big audience.

Since then he has played night clubs and theatres elsewhere, including a run in Our Town last summer.

Godfrey looks fit for anything. It is six years since he came through an operation for lung cancer.

'Sophia Loren in Rome' Was Most Attractive Travelogue

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Network television Thursday night was something of a Roman holiday.

First NBC's medical team of Kildare and Gillespie split their time almost equally between romance and a problem of disease in a studio reproduction of the Italian capital.

Later, on ABC, came Sophia Loren in Rome, an hour which had the Italian actress strolling around the more interesting, ancient and spectacular parts of Rome, spouting dates, statistics and figures like the most seasoned tour guide.

Of the two programs, Miss Loren's was infinitely more interesting and also more dramatic even if it did lack a formal plot. It was witty and gay and imaginative from the opening scenes — a camera ballet of Rome in sunshine and rain, of cars and horses, gas pumps and great art, all conducted by the sweeping gestures of a traffic cop—to the final moment when Miss Loren, explaining the "cliche" tossed the inevitable coin into the Trevi Fountain.

What made the program a blessing was the way wit and humor were blended with the skilful photography. It was the most attractive travelogue this viewer has seen.

The Dr. Kildare program, the first of a three-part drama, was a slow moving bore even if our hero did fall madly in love with blonde Daniela Bianchi.

"THE FALL OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE" IS A POWERFUL SCREEN DRAMA

Samuel Bronston's mammoth spectacle, "The Fall of the Roman Empire," in Ultra Panavision and Technicolor is now showing at the Belle Theatre. With a star-studded cast headed by Sophia Loren, Stephen Boyd, Alec Guinness, Anthony Quayle, John Ireland, Mel Ferrer, and Omar Sharif. "The Fall of the Roman Empire" is the story of Rome's historic descent from the height of civilization to the depths of despair.

One hundred and eighty years after the birth of Christ, the Roman Empire was at the height of its power under Emperor Marcus Aurelius (Alec Guinness). However, the Emperor, with his heart failing and aware that his time is short, summons all the rulers of the land, and in a stirring speech urges their support for a united empire whereby all member nations will live under the same law as equals.

Present at this historic gathering is the Emperor's son, Commodus (Christopher Plummer), his daughter Lucilla (Sophia Loren) and as Livius (Stephen Boyd) one of his top generals.

That night, two things occur which ignite the empire's sudden downfall: the Emperor tells his daughter that for the sake of the empire she must marry Xtar Rohinton (Omar Sharif) of Armenia; also, he remarks to Livius that Commodus, his son, is not worthy to become his successor, and instead he wants Livius to become Emperor.

Aurelius suddenly dies, and without proof that he wanted Livius as his successor, there is no choice but to name Commodus as the new Caesar. Commodus finally does take over and with his advent to the throne the Roman Empire starts tumbling downward.

"The Fall of the Roman Empire" has been acclaimed as one of the most spectacular films ever to be put on the screen. The exciting music was scored by Dimitri Tiomkin.

Ann Landers

'Pig Parties' the Result Of Very Sick Minds

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a regular reader of your column and was interested in the collection of letters you published on co-ed pyjama parties. The following week you printed a letter about a yard party (the girl is supposed two make two entries — her own and her boy friend's — out of one yard of material.)

I have a new one for you. At this college in Long Island (I'm a junior) the latest fad is a "Pig Party." All the boys in the fraternity pitch in $1. The boy who shows up with the ugliest girl wins the money.

It sounds sort of mean but honestly, Ann, these parties are a million laughs. There are some unseen advantages which should not be overlooked. It gives the homely dames (who would otherwise never get a date) a chance to go out once in a while. Of course they never think to ask why they are asked, so no harm is done. Don't you agree this is a howl? — FRIED SHOES.

* * *

DEAR FRIED — It's the crummiest stunt I ever heard of. Send me the name of the character who dreamed up this one. I'd like to mail him a get-well card.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband told me yesterday that I am an idiot. Why? Because I can't cook or bake anything unless I have a cook book propped up in front of me.

His mother never owned a cook book. She just kept tasting to see if it needed a little more of this or a little more of that.

The other evening I was fixing a rib roast. When my husband came into the kitchen and saw the meat thermometer stuck into the roast he almost broke up. He had never seen a meat thermometer before and insisted only a screwball would go for such nonsense.

Please print my letter, Ann, and let my husband know that people who follow recipes and cooking instructions are not idiots. It would help if you added a line saying you follow recipes, too. Thanks. — CANADIAN COOK.

* * *

DEAR COOK — Sorry — I'm in your mother-in-law's category and, I'm not bragging, but apologizing. I never feel more like an idiot than when I'm whipping up a batch of instructions, guessing and tasting — then suddenly things don't seem quite right. So I have to rummage through the trash can to find the box and read the instructions.

Some experts claim cooks do not follow recipes, but the vast majority of homemakers get better results when they do.

* * *

Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Data Bait," gives sound and solid rules for teen-age dating. To receive a copy, enclose with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

THURSDAY, Nov. 12, 1964

The Commons resolved out of the main obstacles blocking approval of the government's bill to redraw electoral boundaries.

The House agreed the speaker should appoint two persons in each of the provinces to sit on provincial redistribution commissions.

Approval for the suggestion by Transport Minister Pickersgill came in a standing vote of 92 to 11.

A minor-party amendment that would have limited the category of persons from which the speaker could choose was defeated 84 to 30.

A New Democratic Party amendment that provincial appointees be named by provincial chief justices was defeated 80 to 22.

FRIDAY, Nov. 13

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. EST to continue consideration of redistribution legislation. The Senate stands adjourned until Nov. 24.

Bodies of Three Hunters Found, Boat Overturns

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The bodies of three hunters were recovered Thursday after their boat overturned in Echo Lake, 17 miles east of here, and police fear a fourth man has also drowned.

Dead are Thomas Walsh, 61, of Sault Ste. Marie and Anthony Proffit and his father-in-law, Roy G. Johns, both of Angus.

A search for the fourth member of the party, Calvin Arm strong, 31, of Sault Ste. Marie, was called off Thursday night because of darkness.

Searchers found the men's overturned craft after a woman reported she had seen a body floating in the lake near her farm.

Police said a party will be sent into the bush today in case Armstrong had reached shore. They said it is possible he was not in the boat at the time of the accident.

Workbench and Altar

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

That God is as interested in our work as in our worship is one of the basic teachings of the Bible. The Psalmist could not have written, "Establish thou the work of our hands upon us" (Psalms 90:17), if he had not believed that God is interested in our work. Nor could one pray that prayer if he did not first try to do his best.

A famous surgeon was seen kneeling before an altar shortly before performing a difficult operation. His hands were seen resting for a moment upon the altar. It is not difficult to guess what he was praying. He was asking God's help for the difficult task that lay before him. His prayer would give him confidence in divine help, but it would not take the place of medical training and experience. He was not asking God to do his work for him. He was asking for God's help as he tried to use his own training and skill.

One cannot expect God to do his work for him. A young man had accepted an invitation to speak to a church group. When he was introduced, he shocked the group by saying, "I always depend on the Holy Spirit to tell me what to say. He has not done so this time, so I have no message for you." And he sat down.

The group decided later that it was the young man, not the Holy Spirit, who had failed. God does not promise to do our work for us. He does promise to "quicken" our lives and our efforts. (Romans 8:11 KJV) He can quicken our efforts, but only if we do our part. He can quicken our prayer life, but only if we pray. He can quicken our understanding of the Bible, but only if we read the Bible.

There is no room for shoddy preparation and work in the Christian life. One may be a good workman without being a Christian. He cannot be a good Christian without trying to be a good workman. God wants to look with approval on our work.

Paul testified to this truth when he advised young Timothy, "Do your best to present your self to God as one approved, a workman who does not need to be ashamed." (II Timothy 2:15)

The King James Version begins this verse, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God." Good workmanship begins in good preparation. In the complex living and keen competition of our day have put added importance on education and skilled workmanship. Dr. Halford Luccock once told about preaching in the Methodist Church in New York City. As he stood beside the minister, Dr. Fosdick, waiting for the processional hymn to begin, Dr. Fosdick turned to him and said "God help the man who is not prepared when he reaches this point." God help any person who is not prepared when he tries to put his skill up against the needs and competitions of the present-day world. One owes it to himself and to those who will be dependent upon him to get the best preparation possible for his work that lies ahead.

Good workmanship also calls for concentration. A good soldier says Paul, does not get himself involved in civilian pursuits, an athlete must not ignore the rules of the game, a farmer must not neglect his crops if such wants to succeed. (IITimothy 2:4-6) He must not waste his time in "good - for - nothin'." A work worth doing is worth doing well.

CONSECRATION AT WORKBENCH

Good workmanship also requires consecration. Every worker one is equally gifted. There are ten talent people and one talent people, and the world needs them both. The operator of a machine is as important as the one who invents it. Not every vessel, says Paul, is made of gold or silver. Some are made of wood or clay. Every vessel is set can be put to "noble use." Every vessel, therefore, should be consecrated to God and held to the master of the house, ready for any good work." (IITimothy 2:20, 21 RSV)

Of course, Paul was talking to Timothy about a specific kind of preparation and work — preparation to teach and preach the word of God. In these days when education and scientific knowledge and training are so universal, religious leaders must not be poorly trained. God's truth is too important to be mishandled. It calls for the best training and discipline possible to present religious truth in a helpful and relevant manner. Many of teries ago, Isaiah, the prophet, the spirit, that I may know how to sustain with a word him that is weary." (Isaiah 50:4 RSV) It is not enough to be well versed in science. Along with our knowledge of the physical world, we need those who can speak with knowledge and understanding about the things of God.

Syria Lodges Protest To UN After Battering

Israeli Jets Hit Arab Outposts, Ten Killed

From AP-Reuters

DAMASCUS (CP) — Syria has lodged an urgent complaint with the United Nations after Israeli jets battered Arab outposts in the heaviest border fight between the two countries in recent years that left 10 persons dead on both sides.

Seven Syrians and three Israelis were killed during the fierce 100-minute battle Friday involving aircraft, tanks, artillery and infantry.

Each side blamed the other for starting the clash along the frontier 25 miles north of the Sea of Galilee. UN observers, who supervise a shaky cease-fire in the area, were able to stop the fighting and began an investigation.

Israeli engineers are in the area in preparation for Israel's plan to divert the waters of the River Jordan from the Sea of Galilee to the Negev Desert. The Arab world opposes the plan and some observers fear the issue could spark a new Middle East crisis.

ISRAELIS KILLED

Army sources in Jerusalem called the battle the most serious incident of its six years. An Israeli spokesman said three Israelis were killed and 11 others were injured, five severely. Dead were an army major, a corporal and a private.

A Syrian army communique issued in Damascus, the capital of Syria, said the Syrians suffered seven dead and 28 injured.

The Israeli spokesman charged that Syria started the fight with jets and an Israeli patrol. He said the jets went into action with napalm (jelled gasoline) bombs and guns after the Syrians damaged collective settlements at Dan and Almar Hyrdahm.

Syria protested to the UN Security Council in New York where Ambassador Rafik Asha accused Israel of launching the aerial attack "to poison the atmosphere" of the forthcoming UN General Assembly." It also complained to the UN truce supervision commission in Jerusalem.

Election Talk Gets Workout

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — An election, that favorite old topic among politicians, is getting a new workout as MPs look to next the future and back over the record of the present session.

The latest upsurge of election talk was sparked by the veterans pension increase announced last Tuesday. But if it was intended partly as a pre-election sweetener it didn't work on the Royal Canadian Legion, which condemned it as grossly inadequate.

The early election forecasters have been buoyed up over recent months by hints at tax cut in the next budget by Finance Minister Gordon. In fact, they are so confident of tax cuts that the only real speculation seems to be on how big they'll be.

Other signs of an early election added to the list are the flag and the Canada Pension Plan.

The Opposition has used the argument that the government was so intent on having a new flag approved this year because it wanted to tell the voters in a spring election that it had kept a promise to give Canada a distinctive flag.

The same sort of argument is used about the Canada Pension Plan, especially since a new rash of rumors has broken out to the effect that the government hopes to get the pension plan through all parliamentary stages before winding up the current session.

But there appears to be a division of opinion, on the government side about when to hold an election.

A considerable body of opinion takes the line that the government should wait until 1965 in hopes of having a new lineup of constituency boundaries completed by then.

The new boundaries are to be drawn by redistribution commissions — one for each province—which then will make recommendations to Parliament. The new boundary lines, expected to affect virtually every one of the 265 parliamentary constituencies, will then have to be passed into law by Parliament.

The basis of the wait-for-distribution campaign is the expectation that the redistribution commissions will provide a number of new urban seats. And it is in the urban areas that the Liberals feel most secure.

Birth Control Pioneer Doubts Population Rise Can Be Halted

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Margaret Sanger, founder of the birth control movement, has little hope that the world population explosion will be controlled.

"I just don't see how we can control the birth rate until we

THE WEATHER

Synopsis— Cold artic air now covers Northern Ontario. In the south, the flow of cool air has changed and it is still a bit on the mild side. Little further cooling is expected and Sunday will probably be somewhat milder.

get the government to agree that this is something that should be taken seriously," said Mrs. Sanger.

"Other countries feel that if our country is against it, it must be bad," she added.

What the birth control movement still needs most of all is education, she said.

"Education is needed mainly among the poor and illiterate. The middle class movement really because of them."

When it began her crusade to make birth control a public issue and a private possibility back in 1912, the whole subject was taboo.

She was put in jail eight times for her efforts to spread information.

"The thing that impresses me is that it's talked about everywhere now," she said.

Cultural Life To Be Built

OTTAWA (CP)—In a move to bridge some of Canada's cultural gaps, State Secretary Lamontagne Friday made a sweeping summary of the government's plans and hopes to spread a greater Canadian identity and understanding across the country.

His announcements ranged from preparations for a feature film industry to an expanding book-buying program by the National Library. In between he talked about plans to bring existing cultural agencies, such as the CBC and National Film Board, closer together in their aims and programs, the necessity of helping performers cover the country and the possible formation of a cultural committee in Parliament.

"As long as we will fail to build a stronger cultural life and to develop frequent exchanges between our cultures, I am quite sure that we will continue to be uneasy about our country and worry about its future," Mr. Lamontagne said. He made his half-hour statement to the Commons considered his department's spending estimates.

TRACES DIFFICULTIES

"Many of the difficulties in achieving a truly Canadian culture daily which must be based on moderation, good will and mutual respect, may be traced to a lack of cultural progress and to neglect of our human resources."

The culture he talked about ranged "from ballet to folk dancing, from opera to bookmobiles, from Camus to Leacock."

In line with the "serious reappraisal" now in process, said the minister, two important steps have already been taken. A cabinet committee on cultural matters had been established and all federal cultural agencies brought under one roof. Next step would be to form an inter-agency committee so that representatives of all the bodies will meet regularly to discuss common goals and problems and coordinate their activities.

He suggested it may be time to establish a parliamentary committee on cultural matters so "all agencies responsible to Parliament could be asked in succession to appear before the committee to report on their current activities and on their plans."

He said the National Film Board's growing reputation abroad has convinced many developing countries that one of the best places to send their future filmmakers for training would be in Canada.

ARTS COUNCIL

The minister said the Canada Council has done a "most remarkable job" since it was established in 1957. The government is considering several proposals for increasing this type of assistance to the arts—by increasing the funds available to the council or establishing a national research centre for the humanities and social sciences.

Mr. Lamontagne said there is also a need to look at the broadcasting regulations in Canada.

"... Confusion exists about the aims and purposes of the public and private broadcasting in Canada, about the relationship between the CBC and private broadcasters, about the powers of the CBC and the BBG (Board of Broadcast Governors) and about the extension of television broadcasting."

These questions demanded answers. There must also be a look into the structure, organization of the CBC and the corporation's entire financing picture.

Suggested Plan for Anglican, U. C. Union Is Outlined

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A suggested plan for the eventual organic union of Canada's two largest Protestant denominations—the Anglican and United churches of Canada—was announced here Friday night.

If approved by the Anglican General Synod and the United Church General Council, highest courts of the two churches, the union would create the Church of Canada (United-Anglican) with a membership of more than 3,800,000.

The plan is the result of three years of discussions by 30 lay and clerical members of a joint committee appointed by the London conference of the United Church and the Anglican diocese of Huron.

The committee, however, made it clear that its proposals were not made on behalf of both communions, but rather as aids in "accelerating the conversations towards unity which have been in process . . . for the past 30 years."

Many Cuban Defectors Make Prior Arrangements

OTTAWA (CP) — Ma'ority of Cubans who defect at Gander, Nfld., Internat i o n a l Airport make prior arrangements to leave their homeland and join anti-Castro relatives and friends in the United States.

They also approach Canadian immigration officials in full view of other passengers and crew of the aircraft which bring them to Gander, with no apparent fear that they will fail to be granted temporary asylum in Canada. Only a few try to hide at the airport until their chances are lost.

The Cubans arrive at Gander in Cuban or Czechoslovakian aircraft which are authorized to stop at the Newfoundland airport to refuel. Each stop lasts about 1½ hours.

Since 1961, a total of 405 persons of all nationalities have defected from ships and planes arriving in Canada. Most of these defections have occurred at Gander and more than half of the individuals involved were Cubans.

An immigration department official said 99 per cent of these "men and 200 Cubans" have gone to the U.S. Only three or four had asked permission to enter Canada. He said exact figures and a breakdown of defectors by nationalities are not available.

The few Cubans who are in Canada have been granted the status of landed immigrant or have obtained permits from the ministry of immigration to enter this country. The cases of persons with permits are reviewed every six months to determine whether they should be given the status of landed immigrant.

Immigration department officials said the bulk of Cubans defect from Cubana Airline planes flying to Prague from Havana. They said there is no evidence that there is any organized movement to enable Cubans to use Canada as an escape route to the U.S.

Fight Move To Suspend Skipper

QUEBEC (CP)—Capt. Walter Malcop Bowen, who first went to sea in 1914, sat alone in the corridor Friday night as lawyer Francis Gerity told a formal inquiry in a nearby courtroom:

"Suspension should only follow upon dereliction of duty, an error of judgment shouldn't cause a man to lose his livelihood.

"His (Capt. Bowen) is 66 and has blamelessly navigated his ship . . . for 34 years. No such suspension as has been asked for should be made."

Capt. Bowen, from Trenton, Ont., was master of the 18,000-ton Leecliffe Hall, the pride of the Hall Corporation of Canada's fleet of giant St. Lawrence bulk carriers, when it and the 25,000-ton Greek freighter Apollonia collided in fog Sept. 5 east of Ile-aux-Coudres, 57 miles northeast of Quebec City.

Also on the bridge of the Hall was veteran pilot Joseph-Emile Pouliot, 64, of Beauport, Que.

No one was hurt but Capt. Bowen ordered the 44 persons aboard to abandon ship shortly after the collision — the Trinolca, a similar vessel, sank within five minutes of a similar impact last year. Then he and some of the crew went back to the crippled vessel and tried fruitlessly to ground it.

It sank suddenly, with a loss of three lives, off Father Point, about nine miles down the river.

Earlier Friday the department of transport asked the jury to "deal with" the certificates of Capt. Bowen, his pilot, and pilot Yves Pouliot, 41, of the Apollonia.

The department noted it would also deal with the same recommendation for Capt. Ioannis Andreou, 51, of Athens, the Canadian inquiry holds no power over his Greek certificate.

The department held all four men to blame for the collision, however the inquiry itself does not have to accept the department's conclusions.

Arguments from other counsel, with Mr. Gerity leading off Friday night, were to conclude today.

Highly Polluted With Radioactive Wastes, Report

Faraday and Bancroft Mines Are Blamed

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ontario Water Resources Commission disclosed Friday that water around the province's second uranium mining district, in the Haliburton area of eastern Ontario, has been contaminated by radioactive mine wastes to a level that could form a long-term radiation hazard.

Radioactive pollution in the Elliot Lake area of Northern Ontario was announced by the commission Thursday.

G. M. Galimbert, assistant general manager of the commission, said Friday waters in Bow Lake and in Inlet Bay of Paudash Lake near Bancroft, about 45 miles northeast of Peterborough, were as highly polluted with radioactive wastes as those of the Serpent River system near Elliot Lake.

The commission reported contamination near Elliot Lake last summer had reached a level which, if continued, would make the water unusable for certain purposes.

Only two of the 11 uranium mines are still operating in the Elliot Lake area, 80 miles west of Sudbury and 300 air miles from Bancroft. The last of four mines near Bancroft closed down last summer.

The commission said there was no immediate danger in Elliot Lake residents, but contamination last summer exceeded the level considered safe over a resident's lifetime.

How's That Again?

There are conflicting reports regarding radio active pollution of lakes in the Bancroft area.

A Canadian Press wire story today quoted G. M. Galimbert, assistant general manager of the Ontario Water Resources Commission as saying that Paudash and Bow Lakes northwest of Bancroft are so highly polluted as the Serpent River near Elliot Lake.

Friday the Peterborough Examiner quoted the same OWRC official as saying the radioactive pollution in the Bow Lake-Paudash district lakes was "far less serious" than at Elliot Lake.

And, also on Friday, Mrs. John Hewgood, clerk of Faraday township, said the Ontario Intelligencer, OWRC reports were that the trouble in Bow Lake had subsided after Faraday Mines had stabilized its tailing pond.

All Ford Factories May Close

DETROIT (CP - AP) — The Ford Motor Company's 160,000 hourly workers in the United States face the possibility of a total layoff sometime next week because of a strike in eight key plants and in Canada Ford autoworkers planned a strike vote a week from Sunday in four Ontario plants.

Ford, blaming parts short ages from United Auto Workers union local strikes at eight fac tories, laid off 33,000 men Fri day, in plants around the coun try.

This brought the total idle to 57,000, including the 24,100 on strike. Ford has said its entire 90-plant system may become idle by next week.

Ford of Canada employees a: Oakville, Windsor, Niagara Falls and Fa rmington, near Brampton, will take votes on whether or not to strike at 7 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 22.

The present contract between Ford of Canada and the UAW expires Dec. 6. Company and union demands are currently before an arbitration board.

Ford of Canada announced that layoffs caused by the U.S. walkouts will start hitting Windsor stamping and engine operations next week. The company said some workers will be laid off Tuesday with layoffs continuing progressively through the rest of the week. The U.S. strike is not settled. A total of 1,300 workers in Windsor will be affected.

A total of 3,000 workers at the car assembly plant in Oakville will not report for work Monday because of a shortage of key parts supplied by the American plants.

An additional 125 workers are to be laid off the Ford line Tuesday, and 700 truck workers are to be laid off next week.

Friday night, Chrysler ratified a new contract at Ford's Louisville, Ky., assembly plant. Only two of the Chrysler plants affected, however, assembly operations do not affect the company's parts shortage.

Non-money issues, including seniority and overtime procedures were involved.

Ford and the union agreed on a national contract in the U.S. Sept. 18. It does not become effective, however, until supplemental local agreements are reached at all the plants.

Common Market Tries to Decide On Policy at World Trade Meet

BRUSSELS (AP) — Cabinet ministers of the six European Common Market countries met Friday in what may be a show down over what the union is ready to do in Geneva talks on levelling the world's trade barriers.

Common Market experts Friday night whipped into shape their recommendations for cutting tariffs by about 50 per cent of the area's trade with the industrialized countries of the world.

If the cabinet ministers, from France, West Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, do not approve the experts' list, they will have to ask for a month's delay.

The Geneva talks open Monday. The United States has announced it will have its list ready by the deadline.

French and West German interests conflict sharply, in particular where machinery and automobiles are involved. These two items account for nearly two-thirds of the exchange of goods at present between the United States and the Common Market, the world's two biggest traders.

The French want maximum tariff protection. President de Gaulle's government has made clear it feels French industry is not strong enough to hold its own without high duties on goods made by much larger U.S. companies. West Germany, on the contrary, is willing to match its industry against the competition of all others.

The West Germans wanted a short list of exceptions to the big tariff slash, leaving 90 per cent of the area's trade open to tariff cutting.

84,666 Immigrants Admitted During First Nine Months

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada admitted 84,666 immigrants during the first nine months of 1964, an increase of 15,322 compared with the same period last year, the immigration department said Friday.

A breakdown by country of last permanent residence shows that Britain was the biggest contributor with 22,721, up from 19,232 a year previous. Italy was in second place with 14,195, compared with 10,315 in 1963, and the United States third with 9,646, up from 8,738.

Department officials expect that by the end of the year immigration will exceed 100,000 for the first time since 1960. Arrivals totalled 104,111 in that year and declined to 71,689 in 1961, 74,586 in 1962 and 93,151 in 1963.

Immigrants from France rose to 3,720 from 2,850 in the first nine months of 1963. Those from The Netherlands increased to 1,747 from 1,532, from Poland to 1,377 from 956 and from Portugal to 3,816 from 2,651.

A table listing immigrants by origin shows that the number of Chinese admitted in the period rose to 3,138 from 1,070 a year earlier. Negroes rose to 1,831 from 1,434, and East Indians to 1,469 from 950.

More than half of the immigrants, 45,833, gave Ontario as their province of destination. Quebec was second with 19,757.

Campbellford Man Is Killed Pushing Car

CAMPBELLFORD — William E. Hayes, 78, of Campbellford was killed early Friday when he was dragged by his car over a steep embankment near here.

Police said Mr. Hayes was returning home after picking up his wife in Colborne and his car ran out of gas. They said the man apparently got out of the car to push it off the road and it rolled across the highway and went over a 50-foot bank into a ditch, dragging him with it.

Mrs. Hayes got out of the car in time and was not injured.

Jaycees 'Jail' Their Leader In Store Window

Belleville Jaycee president Don Dafoe was locked in a Front St. second floor display window of a ladies' wear store last night and today, betrayed and imprisoned by his own board of directors. He will be released after the aims of the "putsch" have been achieved - - ten new members for the Belleville Jaycees.

Plotter Dave Leslie this morning outlined the plans and execution of the trap this morning. Dafoe was lured to the store with tales of a directors' meeting about 4.45 p.m. yesterday, then pushed into the room, which was then padlocked. He has a sleeping bag, a portable radio and a telephone, and he was told he would be released when he had rounded up ten new members for the Jaycees. At last report this morning he had five prospective new members.

Mrs. Dafoe was pleased, according to Leslie. She had been told her husband had been imprisoned. He had planned to go deer hunting today, the last day of the season.

Women's Coats Worth $1,500 Are Stolen

PICTON (Staff) — Thieves sometime during the early hours of Friday morning broke into the rear of Lipson's clothing store in Picton and escaped with clothing to the approximate value of $1500. All of the merchandise was two men's coats of fur fabric type. They were imitation Persian lamb and beaver. Some 35 or 40 coats were taken.

The robbery was discovered by store manager Mr. Cliff Minaker when he opened the store for business Friday morning. All of one section and part of a second section were noticed empty.

Police were immediately notified and Sgt. S. Heale of the Picton police force is investigating.

Thieves gained entrance to the building by climbing a shed at the rear of the store to the roof. They then broke in a first floor. This window was barred but one of the bars had been bent enough to permit a small person to climb through into the store.

Police feel that there were two, possibly more, persons involved in the break-in, and that they were experienced. "It looks, definitely, like the work of out-of-town professionals," Sgt. Heale stated.

Quebec Youths Are Arrested In Stolen Car

PICTON (Staff) — Two teenage youths, Alain Thibodeau and Andre Champagne, were arrested in Picton Friday for drinking in other than their residence. The boys both 17 years of age were from St. Georges de Beauce, Que. Upon arresting the young men it was discovered that the car in which they were drinking had been stolen on Monday of this week in Quebec City. Police on questioning the youths obtained their story. According to this, Andre Champagne was serving a two-year sentence in a training school and had broken out. The boys went to Champagne's residence and found the mother absent. Leaving the house they went to a used car lot, broke into the sales building and took the keys for a 1963 Volkswagen. They removed the licence plates from a wrecked car on the lot and attached them to the stolen car. They then headed into a construction equipment site. They loaded the gas tank with fuel oil and ran into trouble and had to siphon this out. They obtained more gas and proceeded on through Belleville to Picton where they slept in the car and ate chocolate and drank some beer they had brought with them from Quebec. They were discovered on Hill Street in Picton sitting in the car late Friday afternoon by K. Rossborough who reported their behavior to police. Since their arrest Picton police have been in touch with Brockville police and the two youths will be returned to that city to face charges for break and entering there.

George Wardrope said the cabinet may hold an emergency session early next week to consider legislation recommended by the water resources commission.

Mr. Wardrope said the cabinet discussed the situation informally Friday. "We've been worried about this all along. Now action will be taken to ensure that there is no more water pollution."

Mr. Gallimbert said the legislation proposed by the commission would require mines to control radioactive wastes. The suggested laws are modelled on regulations of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. A uranium mine in the United States cannot receive a licence to operate until it has proper disposal facilities.

Owners of six Bow Lake resort properties successfully sued Faraday Mines Limited in 1962 for $84,385 for loss of property value as a result of radioactive wastes in the lake.

FARADAY MINES

Mr. Gallimbert said contamination in Bow and Paudash Lakes was left by the Faraday and Madawaska mines.

There is no large community near the polluted water and only a few hundred of summer cottages are on the shores of the contaminated sections.

Mr. Gallimbert said the commission has monitored the Elliot Lake area for some time but no pollution survey was made until 1963.

He said a report made at the commission's request by two U.S. experts was received by the commission in October. Combined with the commission's own findings it was the basis of the commission statement Thursday revealing the Elliot Lake pollution.

He said the report will not be made public until the commission completes its own survey.

In Regina, J. T. Cawley, deputy minister of mineral resources, said radioactive contamination has never been a problem in Canada's third uranium mining area, near Beaverlodge in northern Saskatchewan.

SHOW LITTLE CONCERN

Reaction by residents of the area was apparently ranged from casual unconcern to critical disbelief.

In the Bancroft area Arthur Tompsett, owner of th. White Pine Lodge on Paudash Lake said he was alarmed at the commission statement.

"Why didn't they keep it a secret and clean up the mess instead of ruining the hell heaves on the lake?

"I don't believe it," he said. "I'm the warden of Haliburton County and the reeve of Cardiff Township and no one has ever mentioned to me that it was polluted."

Jack Gauthier, chairman of the Elliot Lake Industrial Advisory Committee, said the failure of the governmen' to inform the people of the radiation situation was just another episode in the history of Elliot Lake residents being pushed around.

He said the government has tried to say as little as possible about Elliot Lake because it is an embarrassment to them.

TOWN BURDENED AGAIN

Police Chief Jack McLaren said "If Elliot Lake was a man his face would be completely bedded from the kicks he has taken. I have never seen such a hard-luck town."

Bank accountant Jack Gal said: "We're way behind in clamping down on three indus tries. This should have been done long ago, but nobody had the position to do it."

But Jake Thompson, editor of the Elliot Lake Standard, a weekly newspaper said: "People here know the conditions and they're not at all concerned.

"It's like starting a fuss about the danger of exhaust fumes from buses and cars in Toronto —everybody knows about it and learns to live with it.

"Nobody ever talks about radiation hazards around here unless somebody says he's going fishing in such-and-such a lake and somebody else says 'don't go there, the fish are all dead.'"

Hope to Hold Music Festival Despite Apathy

BANCROFT — In spite of a seeming apathy on the part of the general public, it is hoped that the annual Music Festival will be held in May, 1965. Originally a biennial event, the Music Festival has been held annually for the past six years, with one exception caused by the enlargement of the gymnasium at the high school in 1963.

The Festival, having grown from a one-day affair to a four-day event and now considered one of the outstanding rural school festivals in Ontario, is very discouraging to the few interested workers to see the lack of support given.

In the past the majority of the organizational work has been accomplished by a group of women whose husbands were employed at the Faraday Mine. With the mine now closed, these workers have left Bancroft and the onus of the project rests squarely on the shoulders of the villagers.

A second meeting is being held on Thursday, November 17 at the public school in an effort to elect an executive to assist Mrs. F. S. Beckley, who has agreed to act as president for the second year, and to appoint a sufficient number of committee chairmen and workers to carry out the arduous job of arranging the festival. Some 400 entries are received annually involving over 1,000 students from close to 20 schools including the high school in Bancroft.

Veterans Hold Service and Enjoy Banquet

BANCROFT — Branch 161, Royal Canadian Legion, Bancroft, joined with Branch 508, Cardiff, and Ladies' Auxiliaries of both branches in commemorating Remembrance Day at the Cenotaph on Wednesday.

The memorial service was held in the Legion hall, led by Rev. H. A. Funge of St. Paul's United Church, and Rev. R. A. Hilsden of Bancroft Pentecostal Church. Due to the inclement weather only a small group was in attendance.

Following the two minutes' silence and the laying of wreaths the parade of Legion members, veterans, Scouts and Cubs, led by the North Hastings High School band marched through part of the village, returning to the cenotaph for the salute taken by Major E. H. Walker.

In the evening Legion members were entertained at a banquet served by members of St. John's Church Helpers. The guest speaker was Mr. Funge, who was introduced by Comrade Ethel Moore and thanked by Comrade John Horsepool. Mrs. James Fletcher replied to the toast to the Auxiliaries, proposed by Comrade Orville Loucks. The toast to the Legion proposed by Comrade Harold Holbrook was replied to by Comrade Russell Hawley, president of Branch 161. Comrade Arnold Goodman proposed the toast to the Queen.

The evening concluded with a social hour and dance.

Trenton Sports

By ELMER BONTER

Trenton RCAF Globetrotters continued their winning ways in exhibition hockey here last night, whipping the Oshawa Kodak from Rockcliffe by an 8-1 score.

Without a league in which to play, the Globetrotters are expected to play all exhibition games this year, then draw a bye into the OHA Intermediate "B" playoffs.

Toronto York Steel will provide the opposition for next Friday's game.

A fair sized crowd saw Trenton go in front 1-0 after just 16 seconds of play last night on a goal by Dixon. Grant tied it for the Ottawa-district team before the winners turned on the power.

It was 5-1 at the end of the first and the Totters completed the scoring in the second frame.

Dixon, Stu Muirhead and Pat Petersen scored two goals apiece to pace the attack. Harold MacDonald and Joe St. Pierre added the others.

Game misconduct penalties were assessed Trenton's St. Pierre and the visitors' Donaldson in the third period. The pair fought while serving minor penalties and the sin-bin battle earned them the extra time.

Trenton High School junior footballers are fighting to retain their COSSA Junior "A" championship this afternoon.

Oshawa and THS are playing a sudden-death game for the title, won by Trenton last year, at the local high school. Game time was 2.00 p.m.

August at Vancouver, but the general council will not meet again until 1966.

"There is no assurance that a proposal for union will be brought before the general synod at the end of next August," said Bishop Lorton.

"Our committee did not try to work out the finer points affecting any union. In fact, we fully expect further discussions at all levels of our churches before any definite plan emerges."

In its draft proposal, the committee noted that both the Anglican and the United Church are already united in Christ. But organic union was necessary so that their spiritual unity might make the two churches more fit and effective as instruments for carrying out Christ's purposes in the world.

"We are confident that the result of union will be greater peace, closer fellowship and fuller life within the church, and also renewed eagerness and power for the proclamation of the gospel of Christ," the proposal said.

The final aim of the new Church of Canada "must be the unity of all mankind in the one universal church."

Bishop Lorton said this would be accomplished by a desire to see one world-wide church embracing all Christian denominations as begun at the church council of Jerusalem.

change in the company-union standoff since Ford Friday consented to meet with the UAW's national bargaining committee. The meeting is set for next Thursday.

But both Ford and the UAW expressed hope there might not be a need for the meeting.

"We are no reason why the current ill - advised strikes should last any longer," said Ford Vice-President Malcolm Denise.

Ken Bannon, director of the UAW's Ford department, said he hoped all issues could be solved before Thursday.

Taxi Rates Change Asked, Single Fares Would Rise

Single fare taxi rates in Belleville would be slightly increased and group fares would be favored if the new rate structure asked by local taxi operators is aproved by the city police commission.

At the present time single fare zone rates range from 55 cents to 75 cents and the two taxi firms, Central and Checker — are asking rate increases of ten cents in each zone.

On the other hand taxi operators want to make group fares cheaper.

The present rate for two passengers to the same address is $1, and four passengers $2. Taxi operators want to reduce the rate 25 cents per passenger after the first two passengers.

In other words they are asking for permission to draw three passengers for $1.25 or four for $1.50.

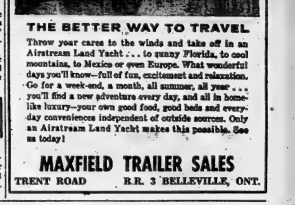
Under the present zone fare structure, taxi operators transport a single fare from Bleecker Ave. to Northern Electric for 75 cents.

In the next zone 63 cents takes a passenger from Herchimer Ave. for example to Bell fair grounds, while in the third zone 75 cents takes one fare from Bonisteel Blvd. to Bell College. The fare increase requested is 10 cents in each of the three zones.

Grant Devolin, manager of Central Taxi, said that if the new group fare rate is approved taxi operators will take four passengers any place in the city for $1.50.

The two taxi firms in Belleville operate a total of 30 cabs which works out at about one cab for every 1,000 population, the generally approved ratio in Ontario centres.

ZONE SYSTEM CHEAPER



Taxi operators say the zone fare system used in the city is considerably cheaper than the cost of fares by metered taxis.

In recent weeks a metered cab was operated on a trial basis in the city. The fare cost from the city hall to Hillcrest was $1.25 and from the east city limit to the west $2.30. The $3.30 "across the city" meter rate fare compares with the present zone fare of 75 cents.

So far the city police commission has received only a few letters concerning the requested taxi fare change.

A police commission hearing on the matter was advertised for early next week, but this date has now been set back with a possible date three weeks hence being set.

The Cost of Armaments

"The cost of a new prototype bomber would pay the salaries of 250,000 school teachers for a year," says an article in UNESCO Courier.

"Or it could be used to build thirty new science faculties, each with places for a thousand students.

"For the price of one large atomic submarine, fifty cities could be provided with modern hospitals.

"And the funds needed to develop a supersonic fighter plane would pay for 600,000 homes to house more than three million people."

This is an excellent way in which to bring home to readers the high cost of armaments in today's world.

Unfortunately, there are some who will think we have to choose between the bomber and the 250,000 school teachers, between one atmoic submarine and fifty hospitals.

If this were ever so, it is becoming less so all the time, at least as far as the industrialized nations are concerned. There is little question but that, with proper organization, we have the capacity to produce much more than we are doing.

It ought not to be necessary to save the money spent on an atomic submarine in order to have enough money to build fifty hospitals. But, by the same token, not building the submarine does not mean that we could automatically build the hospitals. The same materials, the same skills, would not be employed. Money is no use without the required materials and workmen being available. Certainly abandoning the design of a new bomber would not release 250,000 people qualified to be teachers.

UNESCO Courier, however, was using these statistics to show that, if general disarmament should ever be achieved, there would be no lack of projects on which to spend the money saved, or at which persons, once restrained, could labor for this point needs proving, the Courier, we think, has proven it. As it says, "the translation from an arms economy to a peace economy would produce dislocations and would require careful planning on the part of developed and developing nations alike," but it is nonsense to suppose that we have to build arms in order to keep ourselves occupied.

Strange Compromise

As a startling example of how international negotiations should not be conducted, we offer in evidence a reported proposal to settle two disputes between Germany and France.

Germany and France would agree on a common price for grain within the six-nation Common Market. Germany objects, because this would mean her farmers would receive less for their grain than they do today.

Germany likes the U.S. proposal for a multi-nation NATO fleet armed with Polaris missiles with nuclear warheads. France objects because it sees in the proposal an effort to strip her of her own independent nuclear deterrent.

Now, according to Harold Morrison of The Canadian Press, it is proposed that West Germany withdraw her pressure for the multi-nation Polaris fleet in exchange for France ceasing to press for reductions in German grain prices.

Those who regard the multi-nation fleet plan as a grave danger to peace may welcome this proposal. But surely it is clear to all that there is no relationship whatever between the two points at issue between France and Germany and the compromise is really no more than a sawoff. It is not an effort to reconcile opposing views and produce a solution which comes nearest to satisfying everybody. Instead the two questions would be settled without any reference whatever to the merits of the arguments on either side.

The proposed compromise also raises one disquieting question. Why should Germany be so eager for the establishment of the multi-nation fleet? One can understand why the U.S. is pressing for this solution, for it is one way, although perhaps not a wise way, to endeavor to limit the number of members of the "nuclear club." But the German enthusiasm for this measure can only be explained in two possible ways, neither of them re-assuring. Either the Germans are extremely anxious to have France give up her nuclear weapons, which suggests that the Germans may fear an eventual dispute between Germany and France, or else they are, for some reason, very eager to get a finger on the nuclear trigger. The latter attitude, of course, would alarm much of Europe, not only Russia and communist lands like Poland and Czechoslovakia, but also Britain, where the new Labor Government is flatly opposed to any such development.

A Mad Gentle Abroad in The Land

To Your Good Health
Kidney, Bladder Infection Can Be Cured Successfully

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the difference between kidney and bladder infection? I have been troubled with both of them. Is there a cure which will clear up the infection once and for all?

Dear Dr. Molner: Should a doctor be consulted when there is a rectal itch and sometimes a small amount of blood when there is a hard bowel movement? The itch is very irritating. — M. A.

Of course, consult a doctor, not because yours sounds like a dangerous problem, but because it is irritating and can be relieved, it sounds like a fissure, or crack in the skin and surface tissues, which can be treated very successfully.

• • •

Note To Mrs. M. E.: Any radium you might have gotten from the hands of your alarm clock would be far too small to have any effect on your health. Stop worrying and forget it.

• • •

For a comprehensive discussion of how to cope with the change of life, including scores of pertinent questions and their answers, send for my booklet, "Make Menopause Easier," enclosing 30 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self-addressed envelope to cover cost of printing and handling. Address your request to Dr. Molner, in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been told that I have arthritis and that my blood pressure is high. Is there a cure for arthritis? Is there a cure for high blood pressure? — Mrs. J. S.

Dear Doctor: What causes painless hematuria? How is it treated? — Mrs. M. M.

The difference is in the location of the infection. It is not uncommon for both the kidneys and the bladder to be affected, since they are part of the urinary system.

Infection of the kidneys is decidedly likely to involve at least some inflammation of the bladder. And likewise an infection starting in the bladder can gradually extend upward until the kidneys are affected, too.

Urinary tract infections are often present in mild form without the patient even knowing it. Frequent symptoms are a sensation of burning during or after voiding, frequent urination, a feeling of wanting to void yet not being able to do so.

Another important sign is either pus or blood in the urine. Painless hematuria means blood in the urine but without pain. This can result from a number of causes, anywhere from the kidney down in the ureters, which connect to the bladder; the bladder itself, or the urethra (outlet from the bladder).

There may be stones, ulcers, infection (including tuberculosis as well as many other germs), malignant, or (in men) prostate disease.

Any sign of blood in the urine always should be reported at once to a physician; the sooner treatment begins, the better the opportunity to control or cure the trouble. Sometimes the blood is so slight that it is not visible. Calls, however, can be readily detected under a microscope.

"Is there a cure which will clear up the infection once and for all?"

Removal of a stone, polyp or such, if that is the root of the trouble, often accomplishes this. Infection, from those or other causes many times is cleared up by use of the correct drug to suit the type of infection — sulfa sometimes, or penicillin, or one of a number of other antibiotics. But a person who has had such an infection should be on guard against a new one, and start treatment at once. Treatment frequently is a prolonged process.

Any number of urinary infections are cleared up successfully by general physicians, but if the trouble does not respond promptly to such treatment, ask your doctor to refer you to a specialist (urologist) for a complete study, including special X-rays and cystoscopic examination, to pin down the exact trouble and its location, whether in kidney, or bladder, or both, or in one of the ducts. It is quite impossible to say, until such a study has been made, whether surgery or some form of treatment is the solution.

Why Wear Heels at All?

Windsor Star

Women's stiletto heels seem the ultimate of what heels can become. But they have created a neat question by a correspondent to The Times of London, England. He asks why do humans wear heels which ever on their shoes. He points out that when maximum efficiency is required, as in soccer, running or other sports, the shoes are without heels.

Come to think of it, when men had only their feet as methods of transportation, they did not have heeled shoes. They either went barefoot, or used such heelless footwear as sandals, pass or moccasins. And probably, they didn't have the back trouble that moderns with their heeled shoes do have.

When, or where, did heels originate? We don't know. Quite possibly some potentate of short stature contrived them to make him appear taller, and it became a style. We recall one man prominent in Canadian life, somewhat shorter than his wife, who had his heels built up to make him nearer her height. He never quite managed it — partly because she insisted on wearing high rather than low heels.

Ottawa Offbeat
Diefenbaker's Cowboys Like To Call a Spade a Spade

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Amid the continuing rumors and occasional evidence of discontent, if not revolt, rumbling out of the Conservative Commons Caucus these politically unsettled days, you keep hearing about what Parliament Hill has come to call "Dief's Cowboys."

Come certain elements of the Conservative Party against him, as they did in the "Palace Revolution" of his short-lived minority Cabinet, Dief's "Cowboys" stand firm as frontier marshals.

Then come more than half the Canadian electorate against Dief, as it did in the 1963 election, and the "Cowboy Country" holds solid as a rock.

Who, then, are the "Cowboys"?

Essentially, except for a couple of celebrated exceptions, they are the Prairie MPs, a Conservative tribe apart.

But the ones they call "The Cowboys" are the Horner Boys, brothers Jack and Hugh and cousin Albert.

Patriarch of the tribe is the Senator — Ralph S. Horner, famed Prairie horse-breeder — sire of brothers Jack and Hugh, uncle of cousin Al, and at 80, still a hard-fighting man.

GUNNED 'EM DOWN

Range boss of the Horner outfit, though, is Jack, at 35, a plain-spoken, almost cartoon type Westerner from Alberta's short grass country, who calls the Liberals "Gutless Wonders" to their faces, across the Commons corral, and does not bother to exclude Prime Minister Pearson and members of his Cabinet.

Jack, tromping uncaring through the niceties of the Eastern Canadian way of doing and saying things — which he rather contemptuously regards as a little on the softly effete side — makes it plain he likes to eat fertilizer by the range country name, and says he knows when it is being spread across Parliament Hill.

John Henry Horner II was who saved Dief's bacon back in the days of the Cabinet conspiracy when the rebels were fixing to turn him out to pasture.

Jack headed for Prairie Boys. Brother Hugh, Cousin Al and Old Dad Ralph, down the corridors of the Centre Block for the Conservative Caucus, muttering that they were going to get ourselves a couple of them Bay Street Broker Boys.

The Horner Boys, backed up by the other "Cowboys" from the rangelands, looked the rebels in the eye, and gave them what John Henry later described as a "talkin' to" the Big Sky Country way.

Dief was that shook out, and those of the Rebels who did not pack up their gear and as John Henry put it, "quietly go" back into line.

And there, in line, they have stayed — until now, when once again there are ripples of rebellion — and so John Henry Brother Hugh, Cousin Al and Pop Horner again may have to saddle up to cut the rebels off at the pass.

THE "SCRAGGS"

Brother Hugh will be riding with John Henry and together they make a formidable team as strike the panic of silence into the breast of almost any occupant of the Cabinet benches.

The Horner Boys' idea of sport is to take on members of the Cabinet two or three at a time, including the prime minister, who they usually manage to put out of it with the last word.

For what can you say when you know that the Horners would just as soon slang you out, range-style, as look at you.

They have not yet come into the Commons with their lariats and lassoed any of Mike Pearson's men — but they have taken their ropes into Conservative conferences and caucuses, and what is more, used them, on George Hees, for one.

Brother Hugh is riding and roping for Dief, verbally shot up the Party's reactionary proe corps sat so long and with the charge that they were doing his "Chief" in, they are baiting him in the back with their typewriters and microphones simply because he was not pampering them mellow on "booze" anymore.

And "booze" was Brother Hugh's word for it.

True it was that Dief was serving only tea at his stag at-home receptions, and it just might have been the echoes of guilt or resentment over Brother Hugh's "booze" charge that's some members of the press corps retaliated — and in print, too — by calling the Horner Boys the "Scragg Brothers."

Those are the "Cowboys," and say what you will about them, they do make for color in the Commons.

China Rift Tripped K?

Ottawa Journal

The guessing of the reasons for Mr. Khrushchev's fall goes on — a safe enough venture into the occult for we are not likely to know the full story as long as the Kremlin stays the Kremlin. Mr. James Reston of the New York Times offered the best advice when he wrote some days ago that it is "futile" to speculate what is going on in the Communist official world.

But comes the Economist of London this week to offer in its knowing way perhaps the most cogent explanation yet for the deposition of Mr. K. The "really central" reason, the Economist believes, was the fact that the course he was steering between China and the West "was rapidly carrying him to a point that even he had probably not foreseen . . . and which his more temerous colleagues certainly had not."

Here is the way the Economist arrives at its conclusion:

"Having decided, probably some time around 1959, that America was at the heart of everything sary it was worth running a serious risk of nuclear war to defeat, Mr. Khrushchev found it necessary to dissociate himself from China because China's policies involved just such a serious risk of nuclear war. This decision led him, step by step, towards the meeting of Communist parties he had planned to hold in Moscow in December, the upshot of which would certainly have been (Peking said so) the final snapping of Russia's connections with the biggest Communist country in the world for the sake of keeping up its connections with the biggest capitalist one. And on this point, Mr. Adzhubei, his outrider, had been heading in Bonn at a change in Moscow's East German policy. All this would have amounted to a watershed in the history of the Soviet Union. Khrushchev himself was ready to march across it; his colleagues were not. In retrospect it seems to have been as simple as that."

If this argument is right, Russia was in fact changing towards turning its back irrevocably towards China — an act of such magnitude that many in the West have hesitated to believe it possible.

But if that were so and has provoked Mr. Khrushchev's falling from grace, it becomes more dangerous than ever to assume that Russia and China are pulling apart.

Just as we had learned — at long last — to put the h's in Khrushchev in the right place without spending a carefully earned 43 seconds doing it, he's gone. Another obsolete skill.

1882: Aestheticism at 50 Cents a Seat

The Night Oscar Wilde Lectured Belleville

By HARRY MULHALL

Belleville, like so many provincial centres, just grew — and in the growing left a legacy of physical ugliness that became for some a cause of quiet despair.

Like so many centres, it had its lecturers, both transient and resident, professional and amateur, who make community beauty their personal crusade. Some day they will prevail. But a long, uphill battle it will be, its wake strewn with the bones of many an address giving precedence to the beautiful when life becomes bountiful.

Belleville, however, has one distinction over most such graveyards. For among its unheeded literary skeletons is a lecture delivered by none other than the apostle of aestheticism — Oscar Wilde himself.

For one night only — and at 50 cents a seat — the grandest aesthete of them all, became the social sensation of 1882 as he remonstrated with Bellevillians on art and beauty in everyday life.

The net result of his overwhelming presence among the provincials was, no doubt, predictable.

PAPERS HOSTILE

Oscar may have overwhelmed the socialites, but he didn't impress the local public commentators of the day.

The Daily Intelligencer found parts of the new aesthetic testament as expounded by Wilde "puerile and foolish." Its arch politicos, the Daily Ontario for once agreed in discovering the lecture as "all very puerile and foolish."

In short time, the suspicious occasion was recalled only as an entertaining curiosity. The fact that Bellevillians brushed shoulders with one of the most notable — and tragic — figures of English letters is not even remembered today.

However, this probably holds true for most of Wilde's whole flamboyant tour of the North American continent.

No lecture series before — or since — caused such anticipation. And Oscar probably the greatest self-publicist of his or any age, lived up to expectations.

WILDE TOOK CHARGE

The aesthetic reaction to much of the tasteless rubbish of Victorian artistry was already established when Wilde, a young Dubliner graduated from Oxford, began casting about for ways of crashing British society in the 1880's. In architecture, furniture, painting and poetry, many artists were endeavoring to restore their ideals of beauty to the public scene. One branch of aesthetic endeavor had been overlooked. Somewhere along the line someone had overlooked the aesthetic in clothes. Oscar shrewdly saw his advantage and seized it, parading among the sombrely clad Victorians in outrageous velvet costumes.

He matched actions to dress, remonstrating publicly on such delicate matters as the treatment of paintings in a florist's window.

However, he was no dressed-up shell. Finely sensitive, his sincere charm became a byword; his wit, later to so richly endow English literature, at soon a social phenomenon.

The total result exceeded expectations. Oscar not only attracted attention; he was heralded in the public mind as leader of the aesthetic movement.

"There goes that bloody fool Oscar Wilde," snapped an angry passerby one day.

"You see," retorted Oscar to a friend, "how easy it is become known in London."

TARGET OF PLAY

Then Gilbert and Sullivan, the reigning musical monarchs of British theatre, wrote "Patience" — poking fun at the aesthetic and Oscar in particular. The comic opera was sensationally successful and introduced Wilde on the international stage.

In it, Wilde was satirized as limpid, long-haired, sunflower-sniffing poseur. It is a proper measure of him, that he is reported to have hugely enjoyed the presentation.

So did the rest of the English-speaking world.

In America it drew raves — and attention to Oscar Wilde. The theatrical agency directing Gilbert and Sullivan affairs on the western side of the Atlantic had inspiration. Why not capitalize on the publicity and invite Oscar himself to lecture America on the life beautiful?

Oscar Wilde among the American philistines? The inspiration had boundless possibilities, not the least of them box office.

After all, it had not been so long since a nouveau-riche mid-Westerner sued a railroad company because his reproduction of the Venus de Mile was delivered minus its arms. And he won the case!

WILDE ARRIVES

The upshot was that, early in 1882, Wilde, shoulder-length hair and all, stepped ashore at New York — and immediately lived up to expectations.

Surrounded by delighted newspapermen he blithely informed a customs officer: "I have nothing to declare — save my genius."

He did not disappoint in keeping up the pace. Of New York he commented: "There are no pageants; trappings; no gorgeous ceremonies. I saw only two processions: one was the fire brigade preceded by the police; the other was the police — preceded by the fire-brigade."

Again: "I wonder your criminals do not plead the ugliness of your city as an excuse for their crimes." he recorded one New Yorker.

At Washington he disparagingly eyed the local memorial stairway and essayed: "To see the frockcoat of the drawing-room done in bronze or the double waistcoat perpetuated in marble adds a new horror to death."

Of Niagara Falls he commented: "Every American bride is taken there, and the sight of that stupendous waterfall must be one of the earliest, if not the keenest, disappointments in American married life."

YANKEES LOVE IT

The Yankees loved it — and Oscar. They promptly realized he was partly putting on a show for their benefit — and had good reason to realize he was not just a condescending English fool.

His fashion he got wind that Harvard students planned to attend his lecture en masse, caricaturing his costume of velvet knee breeches and ruffs. They turned up as scheduled and in impeccable evening dress.

"Caricature," he told the students while the audience applauded, "is the tribute mediocrity pays to genius."

There was another sound justification for robust America

OSCAR WILDE is shown in the "walking-out" clothes he wore on 1883 tour which took him to Belleville. His stage costume made this seem plain.

taking him to its heart. He had a prodigious appetite that readily embraced every form of liquid refreshment.

In New York, two of the hardiest social drinkers decided to put his gallicisms to the test and invited him to a local chop house. The evening ended with the defender of primness still chattering unconcernedly as his bodily hosteler lay unconscious companion-in-sake.

Entraining for the rip-roaring West he lectured the Leadville miners on Botticelli and Ceilings — then drank as much of their whiskey they rose as a man he cheer him down.

BEAT COWBOYS

At San Francisco he imbibed an amire saloon onto its beam than beat them at poker.

"Some art guy, sure," one craggy-faced cowhand is on record as commenting. "But he can drink any of us under the table — and carry us home two at a time."

Finally, with his reputation apparently running parallel to Bacchus as well as Botticelli, Wilde boarded the train and headed east - - and eventually to Canada.

Brief remarks on his appearances at Ottawa and Montreal were reported in the Belleville journals and, finally, on May 17th, the notice appeared in both papers: Oscar Wilde would lecture in city hall.

Topic: "The practical application of the principles of the aesthetic theory to exterior surroundings, the value of art in education and the application of art to morals."

The event, while provoking social excitement, also promoted (naturally) a miniscule feud between the town's two papers.

The Ontario jibed: "Mr. Oscar Wilde, who is to tickle our aesthetic tastes (thinks) . . . we Canadians are not artistic."

Later it flipped such acid drops in its columns as: "Oscar is aestheticizing the people of Canada at 50 cents a head." . . . Oscar Wilde is said to live on glistening dew drops and sunflowers." . . . Seed merchants say here that there never before was such a demand for sunflower seed. It must be the result of Oscar Wilde's visit to this country . . ."

The Intelligencer held aloof until three days before the lecture when it was moved to retort: "There is no doubt now that a large audience will greet the appearance of Mr. Oscar Wilde . . . Whatever the professional humorists and newspaper paragraphers may say to the contrary, the Wilde is a man of great and varied talents, if not of original poetic genius and is not to be described as a lecturer on art subjects."

HOUR LATE FOR SHOW

The stage was set for an expectant evening and Oscar — as usual obliged. He went one better. He arrived an hour late, not only because of a slow train but, (owned up the Intelligencer): "It must be told Mr. Wilde would not stir until he had regaled and strengthened himself with viands much more substantial than cowdrops and the petals of roses and lilies".

However, albeit an hour late, on the night of May 23rd, 1882 the fabulous Oscar Wilde strode onstage at Belleville's city hall, carelessly throw off his cloak and revealed his black silk hose, black silk knee ties and a "court dress of wine-colored velvet".

The Intelligencer particularly noted a "perfect cascade of rich lace ruffles" at his neck and rested on his breast, and his hands were partially hidden by lace ruffles".

Of the lecture itself, no just recounting was given, since neither paper covered it verbatim.

But journalistic reception was mixed.

"There were several thoughts and remarks in it that would not stand the test of commonsense", sniffed the Intelligencer.

"While many fine ideas were scattered through his harangue, on the whole he said was stale and stupid", added the Ontario.

Mr. Wilde in his love and zeal for the beautiful should not ignore altogether the question of utility", admonished the Intelligencer.

WILDE ON CANADA

However, Wilde's brief visit to Canada had left him with some enthusiastic impressions —and criticisms—which were worth setting.

Apparently, while praising the beauties of the forest-flanked Ottawa River he also deplored its sawmills.

Noted The Intelligencer: "Mr. Wilde spoke enthusiastically of our noble forests and said, that with such an abundance of wood we should build our houses entirely of that material—for more beautiful houses could be built of wood than of stone or brick, at the same expense. If he will not allow us to saw our logs into lumber how does he expect us to get the wood in such a shape as to build wooden houses. It would take too long a time to file and sandpaper a tree into a board!"

But such practicalities were saved for the morrow's editions. In the meantime, Oscar concluded his lecture with the expected dash of social brilliance sending many a female heart into its seventh heaven —one sanctum the gallant Wilde would never dream of criticizing for interior decoration.

LADIES IMPRESSED

"Many of the ladies lingered behind to catch a word or smile from Mr. Wilde—or failing this perhaps they might be fortunate enough to touch the hem of his garment," noted The Intelligencer. "It met with some difficulty that he made his way through the lines of female admirers who would fain have delayed him. He was driven back to the Dafoe House where he divested himself of his "good clothes" and was soon discussing the elements of beauty which are found in chops and Rasm's ale."

The next day he was heading out for Toronto.

It is remotely possible that some would-be housebuilder or local artisan heard the lecture that night at the city hall and took Wilde's urgings to heart. If so, somewhere in Belleville may be a relic of the aesthetic movement he made his own.

However, his name at least was not to appear again for many years in the local press, not until May 27th, 1892. In fact, when The Ontario reported his sentence to two years for homosexuality in a case that still haunts British public conscience.

"When the sentence was pronounced Wilde appeared to be stunned," recorded the paper. "When the last words of the sentence were uttered the aesthetician was hurried to his cell as a felon."

It was The Intelligencer which had the last word on December 1st, 1900, when it briefly noted Wilde's lonely death as a social outcast in Paris. It concluded:

"He was convicted of a nameless crime and all those who had known him tried to blot his memory from their minds forever."

AN AUTUMN LEAVES ADVENTURE

"Open the gates of living wide so you can see the country side." — Wayfarer.

Do you take places for granted as we do in Belleville? Such as the Bakelite Company just east of the city? What fascinating stories lie behind the facade of an industry whose materials form the plastic age we live in?

An autumn jaunt led us to discover that Dr. Leo Baekeland was a pioneer of the industry and founder of the Bakelite Company.

Though it is now owned by the Union Carbide Company, Mr. W. L. Canniff of the local branch informed us later, "it wished to keep the well-known and highly respected name of Bakelite as a tribute to Dr. Baekeland. By the way, there's a man in the city who once knew him...

But, first, may we interrupt to explain, it all came about due to a happy suggestion by my husband that we take a week-end drive through the October countryside on the other side of the St. Lawrence river.

We crossed the Ivy-Lea bridge to New York State, skirting the Adirondacks as we headed southward. We continued easterly along the Mohawk Valley, once fished, hunted and roamed, for centuries of autumns. We crossed over the Birkshire Hills to Williamstown, Mass., before turning northward on Highway 7 where, homeward bound, we drove the entire length of Vermont beside the Green Mountains.

To divide the total mileage of some 800 miles, we spent the night at a motel that overlooked the timeless serenity of a tapestried length of the Green Mountains at Brandon, Vermont which has a population of 3,000.

It was most enjoyable, this autumn leaves adventure, making discovery after discovery of lovely scenery, historical sites, interesting people and places.

But the flat-roofed, two-story Sky Line Inn (built inside and out of plastic in 1948, when the industry was very young) at the summit of the 4,816 Mount Equinox, near Manchester, Vermont impressed us deeply.

FATHER OF PLASTICS

The mountain (it has two peaks) the 6-mile paved driveway from the highway, the inn, a private barn, saw-mill, work-shop and garages all belong to one man: Dr. Joseph George Davidson, father of the vinyl plastics. An international-ly famous organic chemist, he is the president of the Carbide and Carbon Chemical corporation which is important di-vision of the Unio. Carbide family. He also conducts the operations of the Oak Ridge atomic-energy plant.

One day back in 1939 while touring Vermont in search of a site for a summer home, Dr. Davidson fell in love with Mt. Equinox and bought it along with several thousand acres of its slopes. This was a transaction considered by a few local Vermonters as a queer, if not a downright "foolish" act, especially when such an eccentric offered no milk, syrup nor antiques for sale. Instead he built everything of something called plastic. Even the floors of the barn's new stalls were covered with bright green plastic sheeting cemented to the concrete! (It has shown no signs of wear over the years of abusive treatment.)

Today, however, the Vermonters consider this ruler of the synthetic world a fine fellow, who has adopted the California trick of letting a little water drop a long way (in this case 740 feet)to generate electricity and so make the forces of nature help him produce food, heat, power and independence, on this mountain retreat, the centre of his family life.

The plastic materials from the Bakelite Company are considered superior to natural materials and were used by Dr. Davidson to build and furnish his dwellings, Dr. Davidson's loyalty to Bakelite stems back to 1917, when, as a harried, tense young student with much at stake, he sought his doctorate. The kindness of one of the examiners during his oral examination enabled the anxious Davidson to relax and win his degree.

His benefactor was the greatest name then (and even today) in plastics; the wise Leo Baekeland (1863-1944).

Back in Belleville, Mr. Cannliff said, "There's a man in the city who once knew Dr. Baekland. If you care to speak with him, do call Mr. George Zimmerle, Trent Road."

We gladly did so. Mr. Zimmerle is the husband of the former Mrs. W. N. Ponton. Both Mr. and Mrs. Zimmele as children once lived in Yonkers, N.Y., where Dr. Backeland, his wife, a son and daughter, made their home.

Mrs. Zimmele recalls having once seen Mrs. Baekeland, for she was "one of my mother's dear friends. I thought Mrs. Baekeland one of the most beautiful women I'd ever seen in my life."

Mr. Zimmele told us: "As a lad in Yonkers, along with others my age, I delivered the Saturday Evening, Post. We were known as "Post" boys. Dr. Baekeland was one of my customers.

"At that time I was too young to know that he was a chemist and inventor. Where he had taught chemistry in the university and had come to the United States on a fellowship for further study. He subsequently became an American citizen and settled with his Belgian wife in Yonkers, where he founded in 1893 a chemical company to manufacture Velox, a photographic paper of his invention which revolutionized the making of photographic prints. This fact I was aware of, since I was at the age when photography interested me.

INVENTED BAKELITE

"I was to learn much later that the Eastman Kodak Company acquired his holdings in 1899. Dr. Baekeland however, remained at his Yonkers laboratory where he engaged in research engineering, and invented a chemical synthesis as a substitute for hard rubber which he named bakelite. It became vital to the development of the plastic industry. He formed the Bakelite Company in 1909 and was president until his retirement in 1939, and the Union Carbide Company became the new owners.

"As I say, I only knew him when I was a Post boy, but I do remember how kind he was, a most gentle man, and I considered him one of my very best customers.

His son and daughter attended the same high school as I, but I only knew them slightly, for they were younger than I; a most decided factor when you are in your teens"

Thus, our autumn leaves adventure reminds us of the remarkable service which the Bakelite Company conveys to mankind's plastic world as well as the lines

"Open the gates of living wide so you can see the countryside.

Swing out the bars of circumstance and give yourself a sporting chance.

Or at the end of all you'll find You've walked through life both deaf and blind."

15-Year-Old Girl Possesses Physic Power

LOWELL, Mass. (AP)—Fifteen-year-old Linda Anderson is a teen-ager—except in one way.

She claims to have that mysterious psychic po-wer, extrasensory perception.

Her father, Arthur Anderson, took his daughter to the Lowell General, who has long have been stumped in their search for Kenneth Mason, a fire - ra- old boy missing from his home since Tuesday.

Police took her to the area where the boy was seen playing near the Concord River.

Anderson put Linda into "deep hypnosis" and instructed her to say where the boy was when he awakened.

"The boy is not in the river, he is in a house," she said.

Teams of police divers have found so trace of the boy in the river. They now are concentrating their search among houses in the area.

In an interview Friday, Linda described an even more esoteric ESP feat, "dermal Optical Perception," which is reading through the skin.

ON THE NOSE

Wearing a thick, black mask which covered most of her face, she easily caught a basketball tossed slenlly by her, father 10 feet away.

Anderson says Linda "has been able to predict the weather correctly on 22 of 23 consecutive days. Another time she lost a comb, and under hypnosis could see it on a shelf in school."

How does she do it?

"Well I put on the mask, concentrate, and then I see red light. After a little it changes to a white light, but sort of like fog, then I can see through it," explained Linda.

One eye test she took baffled an oculist who prescribed glasses to correct her nearsightedness.

She says she showed him she could read his entire chart — But only while masked.

Church Groups

ALLIANCE CHURCH

The highest foreign missionary pledge made in the history of the Belleville Alliance Church was made on Sunday night at the close of the 43rd annual missionary convention. The amount pledged was $8,250.70. Last year the church pledged $7,116 and this pledge was overpaid by $550.

The missionary speakers for the convention were Rev. Roger Lewis of Indonesia; Rev. Harold Cain of West Iran and Miss Nancy Mack of Viet Nam. Miss Tran Louang, a Vietnamese student from Saigon, was present in the Sunday evening service to give her testimony and sing in Vietnamese.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance is the sixth largest missionary organization in the world and has nearly 900 missionaries on 24 mission fields.

Ecuador Does Excellent Job Of Combining Old and New

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

QUITO, Ecuador — Deffly the captain wove the big Panagra jet among the frosted 19,000-foot peaks and banked around the steep slopes. We gazed at the level upon slanting patchwork fields worked by farmers since long before Conquistador days.

Finally the airport was found and conquistadored. At touchdown, we were higher above sea level — 9,000 feet — than the pressurized jet was at 30,000 feet.

The capital of Ecuador sits virtually on the Equator (though thanks to its altitude the climate is more like San Francisco than Sumatra). Every day of the week, the sun rises at six and sets at six. At noon it is so directly overhead there are virtually no shadows. At night you can see the Southern Cross and Big Dipper at the same time.

But having your picture taken at the Equator monument is scarcely the most valid reason we can think of for making third of a day from New York. A much better one is that Ecuador is possibly the most typical — and one of the least touristed — of South American countries.

DONKEYS AND DOLLARS

Spectacularly situated Quito has some of the Paris-pretensions of Buenos Aires or New York-bumptiousness of Old Spain. Its streets are piled by donkeys and llamas led by barefoot Indians with the same mien as their stone-carvings, infants shawled to their backs and golden necklaces about their throats.

"Downtown" is an incongruous conglomeration of ancient churches and lavishly-looking skyscrapers, narrow cobbled alleys with the kissing-distance balconies of Old Spain, imposing modern government and university buildings, many sidewalk bodegas and discreet patios and courtyards.

An Indian sidewalk market occupies much of the boulevard with the grand name of Twenty-Fourth of May Avenue. The colonnades and porticoes of Independence Square are lined with shops, including one on the doorstep of the Majestic Hotel's cocktail lounge.

For many years, the favorite eccentricities of those who could afford it have been the building of or moving in a town. Among the concepts are medieval castles with moats, Moorish palaces, and Modernistic what-is-its with tile-domed turrets.

CREDIT THE INDIANS

Generally, Ecuadorian art is a lot better than it still that, and most of the credit goes to the Indians. For centuries the Otavalos have brushed, vegetable-dyed and woven their own llama and alpaca cloth on primitive single action looms, and have hand-knotted their own rugs. All the work is based on motifs rather than patterns, and it is among the finest native-type art to be found anywhere in the world, tasteful and highly creative. Most of the world's Panama hats are made in Ecuador — not Panama.

The Spaniards, of course, contributed their share to the distinct colonial flavor of Quito, even their most regal city in South America. The Church of La Compania de Jesus imposed itself on the baroque with an extravagantly carved baroque stone exterior. Inside is a massive gold-encrusted altar and Moorish carved walls and ceilings.

The wilds whence the Indians have wandered into town are not far removed from the capital, and in them lie some of the strangest sights in a strange land.

West from Quito, the paved highway turns off onto a gravel road and through the scraggly highlands that are the face of Ecuador. The lush green gives way to strangely colored stone peaks and precipices. Towering pines, palm-like tree ferns and banana bushes together as the road descends into the sub-tropical lowlands.

COLORFUL PEOPLE

The gravel road becomes a dirt one, then a foot path into jungle country. Bamboo and sugar cane and the achote bean grow in wild profusion. Here dwell some of the last of the Colorado Indians, a nation whose ways are both primitive and incongruous — and as gay as almost as colorful as their present.

There are perhaps 500 Coloradoes left, living in isolated family pockets over an area of about 40 square miles between Santo Domingo and the Pacific. Their colorful origin may have put them in contact with French privateers of an earlier era, and Shipwrecked blonde Coloradoes are common.

They are called Coloradoes because they smear their bodies with a red paste of the achote bean — said to be an insect repellent — and plaster it in their hair like pomade to make a stiff platter-like coiffure. They paint their feet black to look like conquistador boots and chew the fruit of the yute tree which turns their teeth black (but they have no cavities).

Their witch doctors — one of whom commands fees of as high as $150 from a clientele including many white patients — prepare a primitive truth serum from bamboo sap. It has been used in outside psychosomatic ills uncured by psychiatrists.

They weave brilliant striped ponchos which they order prior to charging tourists $3.50 per camera for a posing session. They live in thatched roof bamboo huts, sleep on dirt floors, fish in the Baba River with net and spear, grow rubber and coffee, and generally do very well for themselves. Especially the witch doctors and photographers' models.

WEDDING

SAGER — McARTON

Standards of white 'mums adorned the altar of St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, when Rev. F. F. Downing united in marriage, Joan Elizabeth McArton and David William Sager. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart J. McArton, Stirling, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sager, R. R. 4, Stirling. Miss Helen Morrow played the wedding music and the bride's nine-year-old brother, Bill McArton, played the wedding march and was the soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length white gown of pure silk faille. The bodice had a portrait neckline, appliqued with sprays of Guipure lace and lily point sleeves. The slim skirt was enhanced with lace appliques and a waitcoat panel was attached to the back of the skirt with a tailored bow. She wore a waist length veil, held in place with a band made rose of organza with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of peach rosebuds.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Alex Fleming, sister of the bride, and bridesmaids Mrs. Jack Fraser and Miss Joyce McGhee were gowned alike in midnight blue organza, with three quarter sleeves and full skirts. The back of the dresses held a floating panel of the flat tailored bow. They were matching headdresses and carried a bouquet of white and peach 'mums.

The groom was attended by Wayne Hadley, while the ushers were John Sager, Brampton, and Robert McArton, Marmora.

The reception was held in the Baines Community Centre. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a turquoise silk dress accented with pink, matching accessories and a corsage of white 'mums. The groom's mother chose a navy ensemble with matching accessories and a corsage of white 'mums.

For a wedding trip to Winnipeg and through the United States, the bride wore an emerald green velvet dress, gold accessories and a corsage of bronze and gold roses. For their return the bride and groom will take up residence in Batawa.

Out of town guests were from Belleville, Marmora, Harold, Toronto, Brampton, Barrie, Willowdale, Lindsay, Glen Miller, Carleton Place, Ottawa, Peterborough, Vancouver, New York, Hamilton and Trenton.

Previous to the wedding the bride was honored at a shower held at the home of Mrs. Wayne Hadley.

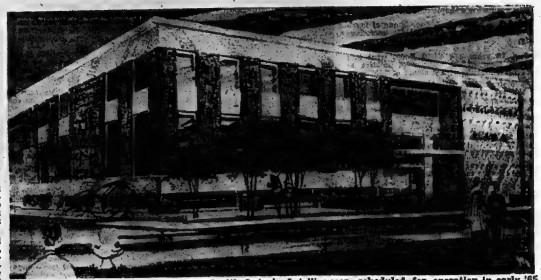
THE SCENE CHANGES

A Switch To Sophisticated New Studios



In 1965 the scene dramatically changes for CJBQ Radio.

It will cross the threshold of the new year with prospects of opening the doors of a sophisticated, new studio location.

Now under construction at the downtown intersection of Bridge and Pinnacle Streets in Belleville, the new building will be completed next year.

Ultra-modern in design and layout, housing the latest equipment, the new broadcast centre was designed by the prominent architectural firm of Barnett and Rieder.

The move, its exact time and date to be announced shortly, will be made without interruption in the 15-year-old broadcasting of the Voice of the Bay of Quinte, now serving 100,000 listeners.

New studios will be in this building shared with Ontario Intelligencer, scheduled for operation in early '65

"Sports as Usual" Means "Hectic as Ever"

ON THE SPOT: Jack Devine (right) interviews Eastern Pro Hockey League President Jack Adams.

THE MAN all the way behind the men flashing across the Quinte sports scene again this season will be veteran CJBQ sportscaster Jack Devine.

Jack has aired every major local sports event in the Quinte district since the station first broadcast. That task has taken him across Canada and Europe to the scene of a contrasting variety of sports challenges.

A SPORTSCASTER with a lively sense of participation in his craft, he is past president of the Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association and currently serving as second vice-president of the OHA.

His hectic schedule of local coverage this season will be reinforced by a sturdy lineup of network reporting including the Grey Cup and the National Hockey League every Saturday night.

The TEENS Have It!

And they also get it from CJBQ — from fun to factual information on what's with the teen scene.

With CJBQ's Dave Charles in charge the focus on the younger set really comes into its own on Saturday Date running full five hours starting at 1 p.m.

A leader in bringing local broadcasting into hometown high schools CJBQ now has inaugurated its own teen network.

Each program, four different high schools from the district break into Saturday Date each week with on-the-scene hometown highlights. Times to listen for the teens behind the mike are 1:30, 2:30, 3:30 and 4:30 p.m.

On CJBQ Saturday brings the liveliest date of the week!

CJBQ: It's Twins!

The voice of the Bay of Quinte is actually twins!

The double-meaning is given CJBQ's call signal by the fact it originates daily from both Belleville and Trenton.

While the main studios were founded in Belleville, the station simultaneously slated separate programming in Trenton—for obvious reasons.

Trenton, now a town of 13,800, shares the spotlight as the commercial and cultural magnet of the Quinte district.

Also, it is strategically significant for three other reasons. It is:

The hometown of the RCAF's huge Transport Command complex;

The gateway to the Trent River system.

One of the most progressive Ontario communities.

Its significance, and the need for its own separate radio service was recognized immediately by CJBQ.

Through the day, the Voice of the Bay of Quinte divides its time between both studios, giving its broadcast kin full rein in programming with a strictly local flavor.

Conduct and broadcast health of the twin is the responsibility of CJBQ Trenton manager Ted Snider.

In the new season, the emphasis will again be live local broadcasting from Trenton — a town which offers wide scope with its community endeavors ranging from sports to citizen groups, to brass bands and a symphony orchestra.

TED SNIDER . . . CJBQ Trenton manager, plus one of its most popular air personalities.

The SCENE in SOUND on CJBQ

Ringing the Changes On Program Schedule

Ending its second decade and as familiar a mark of the Quinte scene as Belleville's historic clock tower) CJBQ Radio today announces its new annual schedule of programs.

Before that schedule signs off CJBQ will have broadcast one more year of lively, local radio. Since that day in 1946 when it introduced its service in sound to the Quinte district, its listening community has now grown to 100,000 listeners.

Its communication with this network of homes has never been one-way. It has fully shared in the life of its region, promoting its local endeavors, acting as a live contact for all aspects of individual and community enterprise.

From a novelty at its debut it is now a community necessity in its second decade.

This intimate knowlege of its territory has been a keynote in shaping CJBQ's new schedule.

And variety is the spice of the new programs on CJBQ's sound calendar.

With the familiar, favorite voices of its broadcasters at its microphones and a new emphasis on music, network and live local presentations, CJBQ now signals the approach of '65 in sound.

CJBQ NEWS

NEWS?

Wherever its breaking CJBQ Radio has it.

Global, national or local, CJBQ Radio has it on the air as soon as it breaks.

Fast news coverage on all fronts always has been a specialty of the Voice of the Bay of Quinte.

And as a local radio service it always has put the emphasis first on the home-town scene.

CJBQ NEWS guarantees fast, to-the-minute coverage for a home region extended through four East-Central Ontario counties.

Mobility is the key. It can have a reporter on the scene within minutes.

Its central newsroom in Belleville draws on correspondents in key communities, selected for experience and impartiality.

Its ethical, professional touch has won it the confidence of the entire region and it can also rely on a host of personal, reliable news links.

The success of the service has been proven with the years.

In this new program season CJBQ NEWS continues its 24-hour watch on current events in its home area, its services linked to national news agency and network facilities to keep the contemporary scene forever current in thousands of Quinte homes.

CJBQ NEWS is where the news is with news director Wayne Rogers (top right) linking evenis.

TOM HOOKINGS

The Man Who Wakes the Rooster Up!

"Up With the Sun" — the show which begins CJBQ's day — is also one of the brightest spots on its broadcast calendar.

So popular is the radio period between 6.15 and 9 a.m. in every Quinte home no day is considered complete unless it begins with "Up With the Sun" — even if it is storming outside.

The fact the show is such a spectacular success is due to the one-man-band personality behind its microphone — Tom Hookings.

Like a rooster's crow he is taken for granted as an inseparable part of the early-morning Quinte scene.

There's one difference.

To meet his switch-on daily deadline of 6 a.m., Tom is usually up before most self-respecting roosters have opened a binary eye and dragged out themselves to herald another dawn.

For the greater part of a decade, CJBQ's listeners have awakened to "Up With the Sun" and the blend of music, news and humor gearing the inimitable Hookings stamp.

In fact, so outrageously inimitable are some of his comments that he brings many a listener awake — bolt upright! His remarks themselves often set up a chain reaction—providing the local burghers with an exchange of chuckling comments throughout the day.

Yet, Tom's broadcast chores range far beyond patrolling the dawn airwaves, and his personality also is channelled into more serious service through the day.

One of the station's most challenging features is "Why Not Call" — a mid-morning spot in which listeners are invited to discuss controversial personal views by telephone. On the receiving end it calls for adroit handling and Tom is the man on the spot.

Yet no matter what posting he is given on CJBQ's program log, the sun never seems likely to set on the popularity of his early morning doings on "Up With the Sun."

SLIGHTLY DROWSY (maybe!) but still master of big audience rating is early-rouser Tom Hookings.

Live Broadcasting: — A New Emphasis

WITH a firm tradition of live community broadcasting already established, CJBQ is raising its sights even higher in this programming phase for '65. Local Sports, public affairs, the form of public debate, music and special events for all ages will receive extra emphasis along with lively new features. These are among the upcoming events to watch on your regular listening schedule:

MUSIC — Increased programming of all phases of music, popular, light and classical by local artists and local groups and orchestras.

CONTROVERSY — More and more participation by local listeners in debate on local current affairs, from the studio, the street and public assemblies.

DRAMA — Increased emphasis on local talent, notably a new series of radio plays now being planned by members of the Belleville Theatre Guild.

These and many more features are part of the new listening pattern designed by CJBQ Radio for '65.

Hear These CJBQ Hilites:

FLANDERS FIELDS (Sundays 1.00 p.m.) — Canadian veterans recall World War I.

WHY NOT CALL? Mon.-Fri. 11.05 a.m.) — Listeners speak their minds.

ETCHINGS IN BLACK AND WHITE (Sundays 3.05 p.m.) — Jimmy Corradi at the keys.

NHL HOCKEY (Saturdays 8.30 p.m.) — Direct from the scene of action.

How to Succeed in Radio by Really Trying!

You succeed in local radio by really trying!

The maxim has a simple sound.

The effort behind its banner is one of maximum complexity — as CJBQ Radio operations testify.

Just 18 years ago CJBQ Radio went into operation from an old commercial building in downtown Belleville with a signal of 250 watts.

"We started out with 12 people on staff — and the job of not only reporting, but in a way creating, a new medium and a new market on a purely local basis", recalls station manager Frank Murray.

"Much of the equipment we now take for granted — automatically-controlled transmitters, transistor portable tape machines — were a remote probability then".

This equipped, however, CJBQ Radio settled down to the task of winning its audience.

Today, the Voice of the Bay of Quinte on 1,000 watts speaks to, and for, 100,000 listeners.

"We succeeded only by really trying to be a true local station, reflecting our community, participating in and encouraging its local endeavors," says Mr. Murray.

Standards were not allowed to flag — though at times the ideal demanded an ultimate of effort. Keeping up with events and personalities with a local flavor, has sent CJBQ Radio broadcasters across Canada, into Europe, even behind the Iron Curtain.

Frank Murray, CJBQ manager

Culturally, the station has aggressively extended itself. It has underwritten live presentations of shows, the public appearances of local artists and orchestras on all levels. Its public productions range from Tennessee hill music to concert presentations by the NORAD band.

"With the start of the new season, we hope to continue this practice, with a new look, new vigor and excitement in our Fall programs", says Mr. Murray.

The new year also brings a physical departure from the past for the Voice of the Bay of Quinte.

New studios are off the drafting boards and are now under construction at a main downtown intersection, a culmination of what is manager calls "not just months, but years of dreaming and planning".

"It will be one of the most modern studios in Canada", he adds.

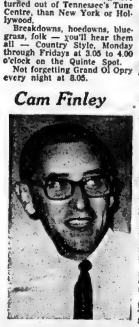
Yet while the old premises are being scrapped, two crucial elements from former days when the station founded its success, will move to the new Broadcast Centre.

In the words of Frank Murray:

"To progress, to be able to take advantage of technical development and move with the times — these are only possible when a radio station has two things working in its favor. First, a loyal enthusiastic staff and, second, support and loyalty of listeners and advertisers".

And Then There's Music With....

Al Hall



Rock 'n Roll? What's That? I play my music COUNTRY STYLE! I'm around every day from 3.05 to 4.00 o'clock, with the best country hits for all C & W fans in the Quinte District. Bobby Bare, Ray Price, Johnny Cash, Homer and Jethro, and many more.

Country Music Today, more than ever, the Nashville Sound fills the airwaves all over North America, and more recordings are turfed out of Tennessee's Tune Centre, than New York or Hollywood.

Not forgetting Grand Ol Opry every night at 8.05.

If you like today's sound, on today's radio, join me, CR, AT THE TOP, Daily, at 4.10, and Saturdays at 8.30.

Keeping up With Listeners Down on Their Farms

Rural Route 800 is probably the largest non-existent acreage in Canada.

Yet its exact location is as well-known as its landlord to thousands of CJBQ's rural listeners in Eastern Ontario.

Each day at 12.30 p.m. — the time to bide awhile from chores — they tune their radio dials to 800 and visit with host Phil Flagler.

As CJBQ's farm director Phil has become as indispensable to the rural countryside as the weather.

His daily half-hour spot is a dispensary of sound farming advice, a market place for opinions and criticisms, designed to keep its listeners current with agricultural trends.

Constant contact with the farm scene is the secret of Phil's popularity.

He is as familiar a visitor among local farmers as he is to agriculturists — travelling through his own region and across Ontario both as reporter and public speaker.

His radio , show, meantime continues in its traditional pattern while Phil sets its style for the new season.

That style, proven by the listenership harvested over the years will remain basically unchanged. But the criticisms, opinions, controversies and trend reports will be right on the button.

The guarantee of that lies with Phil himself and his success as a host ceaselessly seeking out new material and programs for the information of a host of listeners.

Ann Landers

Tickling a Sneaky Way Of Breaking Resistance

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am going steady with a nice young man named Bill. We are both college sophomores. He has a habit which is getting on my nerves and no amount of talking will make him stop.

Whenever we say alone Bill tickles me in the ribs. I'm ticklish by nature and ever since he found this out he has been driving me crazy.

This is no laughing matter, Ann. In fact it's making a nervous wreck out of me. Am I over-reacting, or is Bill just a big tease who has found a way to irritate me? — NOT FUNNY.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR NOT — Tickling equates with "playful" wrestling. It's a sneaky device to wear down the resistance. What may appear to be nice clean fun is neither nice and clean, nor is it fun. Tell Billy Boy to keep his hands to himself or find another girl.

DEAR ANN — John and I were married 10 years ago. I had already graduated from college but the service interrupted John's education so I worked to put him through.

John is now 33, we own an attractive home and have three fine children. We have no heavy financial worries and I thought our marriage was a good one.

This past year John has been talking about a divorce. At first I believed it was only conversation, but now he is insisting. He simply says he no longer wants the responsibilities of marriage and I should get him free to "enjoy life."

Since he has no grounds for divorce John wants me to divorce him for "cruel and inhuman treatment" — although he is making cruel and inhuman. John claims he loves the children but if he saw them on weekends it would be enough.

I am desperately trying to save our marriage but his mind is made up. Is he sick? I need your help. — BEWILDERED.

DEAR B. — If John wants to leave you can't chain him to the bedpost — nor should you want to, but don't divorce him. If there is more to the story than John is telling you, he is indeed sick. Urge him to get help.

Meanwhile tell John he can leave any time he wishes (he will anyway) but don't hand a divorce to a father of three children merely because he wants to be free to "enjoy life."

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our son has been going with a nice young woman for over a year. He told us he plans to give Barbara a ring next month. We've never met her parents.

Saturday I ran into Barbara in the beauty shop. I told her I'd like to have her parents to dinner next week and suggested they pick the night and let us know.

After five days I asked our son if Barbara had delivered the message. He said, "Oh, I forgot to tell you. Barbara said her folks would love to meet you but you don't have to fix a meal. They'd prefer to drop by whenever it's convenient. You are supposed to let them know."

I feel the woman treated my invitation shabbily. Isn't it her turn to invite us now? — SLIGHTED.

DEAR SLIGHTED — If you've never heard of the telephone or the U.S. mails please investigate these remarkable methods of communication and stop sending dinner invitations by the girl messenger.

It's up to the parents of the young man to invite the parents of the prospective bride to their home if they have never met. Don't complicate your son's life by having trouble with his in-laws before he gets into the family.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The monthly meeting of Parkdale Ladies' Missionary Fellowship was held at the home of Mrs. R. Tyrell, recently.

Mrs. Mitchell opened the meeting with prayer, after which Mrs. Mulligan read a letter from the Greenslade family who are missionaries in Peru. A discussion followed and attention was also drawn to the needs of missionaries in Quebec.

The devotional portion of the program was conducted by Mrs. Tyrell.

All enjoyed a time of fellowship and refreshments were served at the close.

Two Women Naval Officers In Expedition

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Canadian women naval officers will be with an international scientific expedition when it sets out Monday from Halifax for faraway Easter Island in the southeastern Pacific.

The two Wrens, Lieut. Mary Olive King of Hampton N.B. and Lieut. Rita Catherine Dwyer of Toronto, will be the first service women to take a cruise of any duration in one of the Canadian navy's ships, defence headquarters said Friday.

They have been appointed to HMCS Cape Scott, the mobile repair ship that will take a team of 33 scientists to Easter Island for a large-scale study of the island's 1,005 inhabitants.

The expedition to the island, a possession of Chile's, will last about five months. The scientists are to return to Halifax March 17.

The project, bringing together scientists from Canada, Chile, Britain, the United States and several Scandinavian countries, is part of the human exhibitility study of the international biological program. It is sponsored by the World Health Organization.

QUESTION: I have been trying for ages to get a recipe for sweet and sour spareribs like they serve at Chinese restaurants. These ribs have a batter and a pinky sauce but none of the recipes I have call for a batter. Would it be possible for you to get one of these genuine recipes? Most of my recipes in my book are yours. I'm so confident with your recipes that I serve them for company with out trying them out first.

—Mrs. Frank D

ANSWER: Your kind words made my day.

SWEET and SOUR SPARERIBS

Cut 2 lbs. spareribs into 2" squares, having meat on both sides of rib. Roughly this means each rib is cut in half crosswise with meat on both sides and every other rib stripped bare and discarded. Dip each piece in Batter: One cup sifted all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 2-3 cup water. Mix all ingredients until smooth. Brown batter-covered ribs on all sides in 2 tbsp. peanut or other cooking oil — about 4 or 7 minutes. Transfer to baking dish and pour over SWEET SOUR SAUCE: One cup sweet pickle vinegar (or ¾ cup vinegar and ¼ cup brown sugar) ¾ cup brown sugar, 1 cup tomato catsup, ½ cup cold water, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ¼ to ½ cup chopped sweet pickles, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ to ½ teaspoon pepper. Pour this over browned ribs and bake at 300 deg. Fahr., covered, for 1 hour.

QUESTION: Could you print the recipe for Nuts and Bolts as I'd like to make some for Christmas . . . Housewife.

ANSWER: Would you please send stamped self-addressed envelope next time? If I had your name I could have mailed you this recipe which we gave on Dec. 20, 1963.

NUTS AND BOLTS

One-half package oat-cereal circles, ½ pkg. very thin pretzel sticks, ½ package shreddies, ½ lb. salted peanuts without skins, 1 cup margarine 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, ½ teaspoon garlic salt. Melt margarine in large roasting pan. Add sauce and garlic salt. Add cereals and pretzel sticks and nuts and stir well. Bake at 200 deg. Fahr. for 2 hours, stirring every half hour. Store in covered container to retain crispness

QUESTION: Would you please publish the method of baking potatoes so they turn brown and crusty? . . . (Unsigned)

ANSWER: Please include stamped self-addressed envelope next time.

BAKED POTATOES

Scrub potatoes until thoroughly clean. For a brown and crusty skin bake medium-large potatoes at 475 or 500 deg. Fahr for 45 to 50 minutes, or until very tender. (For softer skin bake at same high temperature but rub skin with butter or fat before baking).

SATURDAY

Consommé, Chicken Loaf (Hot or Cold) (see Thursday) (if hot) Creamed Green Peas, Buttered Fluffy Rice (if cold) Cranberry Mould, Bakers Potato Salad; Tossed Salad Greens; Oatmeal Apple Crisp; 10% Cream; Tea.

GROUP HOMES WANTED

The Children's Aid Society would be pleased to receive inquiries from married couples in the Belleville area interested in offering group home living to three or four teen-age girls now enrolled in local schools. These are young people who, because of their previous life experience, are unable to accept substitute parents but who can live relatively normal lives in a group setting.

The family or families selected should be between the approximate ages of 35 to 45, in good health and free from more than their rightful share of the pressures and stresses of modern living. Because of the needs of the girls involved, it is essential that the applicants do not have children of their own in the age group likely to be demanding of much of their energy and time. Of course, they must be genuinely fond of young people and able to demonstrate their fondness by acceptance, understanding and warmth of personality.

Since the family will be considered to be an integral part of the Society's child care program, professional counselling and direction will be regularly available. For their efforts they will receive adequate and mutually satisfying compensation.

A Lift for Living

Opportunities to Be Useful Always There for the Taking

By REV. HAROLD E. KOEN

In certain early American Indian tribes, when a princess came of age she was given a basket and instructed to pick the best ears of corn in a given row. There was one condition she must abide by: she must choose the ears as she went along. She could not turn back, retrace her steps, and select ears she had passed by. Many a princes failed this test of judgment. She marveled at the high quality of the corn, and she felt of the firm ears on the stalk and was tempted to pick them. But perhaps there were better ears on the stalks just ahead. She would wait and see. Then suddenly, to her surprise and bitter disappointment, she found herself at the end of the corn row, and her basket was empty. While looking for perfection, she missed gathering any ears at all.

Life is like that. We move through our days constantly looking for the golden opportunity, the big chance, the lucky break, the perfect situation. We wish to improve our minds, enlighten and sharpen them, but perhaps there will be a better opportunity later on. We have the best intentions of becoming better people. We will go to church, become dedicated children of God, give time and money to Christ's Cause, but all of this must come later, when the children are grown, when our job is more secure, or when our spouse develops the same interest.

"WE WILL WAIT"

Or, we want to be useful to the world, but the present chance to do good is not good enough, big enough or ripe enough. We will wait and save our best thoughts and energies for a more worthwhile opportunity. Then suddenly, we are at the end of our row, and our basket is empty.

One of life's most deceptive illusions is that the present moment is unimportant; the present opportunity to perform a kindness and render a service is a negligible one; the present decision is an indifferent one. We should plant deep in our minds the conviction that this day is the one day of which we are certain. Yesterday is but a memory, and tomorrow may never come. Today's energy is all we can count on; it is here. Yesterday's is depleted, and there is no guarantee of tomorrow.

The religious attitude toward life is that every day comes to us from God, that our preparation to serve the world, our talents and skills, are God's gifts, and every opportunity to use these talents and skills for good is also God-given. The person of faith does not claim to know what are the biggest and best opportunities. Such secrets are God's, alone, to keep. The faithful person does not wait for spectacular chances to make his influence felt. Instead, he performs everyday tasks as best he can. He is alert to ordinary human needs and commonplace opportunities to serve his generation.

PLUCK AND CHANCE

He does not let what he cannot do get in the way of what he can do. As the man of faith moves along the rows of moments and days, he plucks every good chance to make his life an effective influence and does not wait for a perfect chance. He believes he is presently surrounded with opportunities to serve and spread joy. He can proclaim his faith and fulfill his highest purposes by doing his best with what lies nearest at hand.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1964

UNDER A PLASTIC TENT Hugh Murray Ltd. employees smooth the concrete apron in front of the new liquor store on Station Street. Standing with the broom is Jack Wickens, who used the broom to give the concrete a fancy brushed surface.

EIGHTY-EIGHT CUBIC YARDS of concrete were poured Wednesday into the foundation walls at the new Amodeo building on North Front Street. Next step is to pour the basement floor, then the precast first floor goes on and the masons start laying brick and block. Front of the building will be mostly glass.

Drought Severe In P. E. County Says Report

TORONTO (CP) — Parts of eastern Ontario are suffering a severe drought, Wendell Sanz, director of the soils and crops branch of the department of agriculture, said Friday.

Prince Edward County, a few miles south of Belleville, is the hardest hit, he said. Lanark County, 35 miles southwest of Ottawa and Renfrew County, 90 miles west have also been hit severely.

Central Ontario is fairly well off, Mr. Snow said, and fall wheat crops in western Ontario are in good shape.

The main worry in the eastern part of the province is water for livestock during the winter. Mr. Snow said reports are received every day of wells there going dry. Some, he added, had not gone dry even in the 1930s.

HUNTINGDON, Que. (CP) — A severe drought has placed at least half of the 1,133 dairy farms in the Huntingdon area in jeopardy.

One of Quebec's richest dairy-producing areas, Huntingdon has had only 12.41 inches of rain between April and October.

The result has been the drying up of century-old surface wells which over the years have never failed to supply an abundance of water.

JOINS CANADA COUNCIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Napoleon LeBlanc of Quebec City has been appointed a member of the Canada Council, it was announced Friday. Appointment of Mr. LeBlanc, 46, dean of the social science faculty at L.val University, is for three years.

Construction Round-Up

By ANDY TURNBULL

NEW JOBS

The Tatham Co. plans to start work Monday on the new Belleville Public Works garage. First week's work on the project at 75 Wallbridge Cres. will probably be excavations for gas and oil tanks, sewers, drains etc. Main building in the project will be the barn, offices and repair shop, 77 feet by 142 feet, built of concrete block with a prestressed concrete roof. A 10 foot by 16 foot building will serve as scale house for Belleville's long stored and nearly forgotten municipal scales and as a gas dispensing office. Plans are to have the building closed about Jan. 15 and the project is to be finished April 30.

Tatham also has the contract for Dr. H. F. Williamson's new clinic on Dundas St. E., opposite Belleville General Hospital. An addition to an existing building, the clinic will occupy the top floor of a two storey structure, with offices and treatment facilities. The ground floor will have two small apartments. The building will be mostly block with the front sheathed in vertical cedar panels. Work is planned to start Monday.

SIX-PLEXES

Leo Buckley put the roof on his fourth six-plex in the Idlewood Manor development on Sidney Street this week. Men in there now are putting on lathe and insulation. Garn Peacock and his men started Wednesday to insulate the third building, will have the job finished in—about three weeks. Then they go on to number four. Martin Geertsma has the bricklaying contract for both buildings and was supposed to start this week. Buckley had hoped to have both buildings finished by Christmas, he's thinking now in terms of the end of January.

AMODEO'S

Cóncrete for the basement walls and foundation was poured Wednesday at the new Amodeo building on North Front Street. Foley's hydro-crane handled the buckets for the 88 yards poured. The job went fast, but there was one slight delay when the batching machine at McFarland's broke down temporarily.

Basement floor is the next concrete to be poured on the job, then precast first floor goes on and the masons start to work.

SMITH TRANSPORT GARAGE

Floor was poured Monday and the grease pit is pretty well finished now at the new garage for Smith Transport. Nothing much to do now but finish some block and bricklaying, and put in the windows. The plumbing and electrical fittings can go in after the building is closed. Superintendent Donald Newton has set no date for completion of the building.

ARGOSY

Block is being laid now to floor level on the new Argosy warehouse and office, across the road from the new Smith Terminal. No start yet on the garage, which will be along the south side of the building. "Tony" Rivers is head bricklayer; Stuart Lessard of Tweed Construction is in charge of the job.

LIQUOR STORE

Parking lot of the new liquor store on Station St. will be paved early next week if the weather holds. Sidewalk in front of the property, and the apron in front of the store, were paved Wednesday. Because the rain hit at the wrong time Wednesday a tent of plastic sheet was erected over the apron to give Jack Wickens a chance to put a fancy brushed finish on the concrete with a broom.

Lath is being put on the ceiling now, and plastering of ceiling and partitions will probably start Monday. Garn Peacock is going to use an acoustic plaster for the job. Spongy in texture, the acoustic plaster never really dries, and it has a rough texture that should not be painted. It can be painted, of course, but if it is the plaster loses its acoustic qualities.) The plaster is used in some schools around town, according to construction superintendent Don Jackson. Plastering will take a few weeks, then Hugh Murray's men will build the bins for the bottles, the tile floors will be laid, and the building will be opened.

ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER BUILDING

Plumbers and tinsmiths arrived in force this week to string pipes and air-ducts through the new Ontario Intelligencer building at Bridge and Pinnacle Streets. Lakeland Natural Gas ran a gas line down the alleyway beside the old liquor store, to feed into the building near the south end.

Front walls were poured on Wednesday. The job called for some delicate work, swinging the bucket full of concrete under and around the precast panels hung on the beams at the second floor level, and it was completed by electric light, after dark.

Monday, superintendent Nathan Carr hopes to pour the second floor. Concrete will be lifted to an outside roof at the back of the building, and moved inside with hand carts.

LAFFERTY-SMITH TERMINAL

Lafferty-Smith Transport officially opened its new terminal, just north of Highway 401 and east of Wallbridge Road Saturday. The firm moved out of a Belleville terminal on Bleecker St. and terminals in Trenton and Wooler earlier this month, to consolidate operations in the new building. The new terminal, housed in a Stran-Steel building made by Central Bridge in Trenton, will serve about 35 tractors, nearly 70 trailers and about 50 smaller trucks owned by the Lafferty-Smith and Haggarty transport firms. Gruesis at the opening included local politicians at provincial, federal and municipal levels and shippers. Special guest and speaker was E. J. Shonker, chairman of the Ontario Highway Transport Board, the body that governs P.C.V. operators in Ontario.

HIGHWAY 401

The north lane of Highway 401 was opened Thursday, from Kingston to Marysville. Department of Highways men just took the barriers off the east end about 2:30 in the afternoon, and let traffic through. A police car was first along the new stretch, followed by the DOH crew taking barriers down as they went. Barrier at Marysville came down about 3 p.m. and the highway was open. There are four lanes now from Kingston to Toronto and the first contract for part of the stretch from Gananoque to Brockville was let last week.

Water-Starved Great Lakes Going to Continue Falling To All-Time Record Low

DETROIT (AP) — The water-starved Great Lakes are going to continue falling — right on down to all-time record low levels on Lakes Michigan, Huron and Ontario—before they start seasonal spring rises five to six months from now.

Watersheds over the Great Lakes basin show precipitation deficiencies of between 8.13 and 13.11 inches since 1963, and currently a drought prevails over much of it.

In Michigan alone, 14 counties have been declared emergency areas because of dry weather, and in Illinois the drought cost to farmers has been estimated at $96,900,000.

Lakes shipping has suffered. For every inch of draft lost, skippers figure they lose 100 tons of cargo they otherwise could load. A Canadian grain ship drawing only 21 feet went aground Tuesday in the St. Lawrence River near Ogdensburg, Ont.

Lakeside cottages, where water was lapping at doorsteps in 1953—the latest high — water year—now are sometimes as much as 100 yards from waterside.

GENERALLY DRY

This has been a generally dry year, with precipitation ranging from 1.82 inches on Huron to 2.92 inches below normal on Ontario. Only Superior's basin, an inch below normal in 1963, is ahead this year. The precipitation there has been six inches above normal.

No quick, back-to-normal rise is anticipated. Experts have recorded levels continuously since 1860. They have detected no set cycle for ups and downs. Years between highs and lows always vary.

Lake survey officials of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers point out that inland lakes, which normally overflow into streams which in turn feed the Great Lakes, are low and that they must be filled anew before returning to a normal flow.

The ground water table, as told by well depths, is low and must be replenished, too, before runoff again hits normal and abnormal soaking ceases.

Even a rainstorm dumping several inches of water would have to be of tremendous proportions to have more than a microscopic effect on lake levels.

The water surface of Lake Superior, for instance, covers 31,800 square miles, Nova Scotia covers 21,428 miles.

RUNOFF IS HIGHER

Heavy spring rains before a thaw have a much higher runoff over the frozen ground than do those coming in the midst or after a thaw.

Likewise, heavy winter snows add more water when they melt quickly than soaking slowly.

Indian summer temperatures that have prevailed this fall caused one lake survey expert to crack: "Most water is going up now, instead of coming down." That was right after a record-breaking Nov. 11 high of 71 in Detroit.

An evaporation study of Lake Erie by U.S. Army engineers disclosed that surface evaporation takes 33¼ inches — nearly three feet—of water out of that lake annually.

On the other hand, Erie gets 23 feet directly from rainfall, another 2.4 feet from runoff and 21.1 feet which flows in from the Detroit River.

FORMS CHAIN

The river forms a chain with Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair River that connects Huron with Erie. The Straits of Mackinac connect Michigan and Huron, the St. Marys River, Superior and Huron; The Niagara, Erie and Ontario, from where the St. Lawrence leads to the Atlantic Ocean.

Superior, the only lake with above normal rainfall this year, can be regulated to large degree by dam gates across the rapids of the St. Marys River.

It currently is spilling through wide-open gates 120,000 cubic feet a second into the lower lakes. This is done under approval of the International (Canadian and U.S.) Great Lakes Commission.

Water is diverted both from and into the lakes.

The Long Lake-Ogoki power project on the Canadian side of Lake Superior reversed a river in 1940 and resulted in a rise of 4¼ inches in the Michigan-Huron level. The Welland Canal lowers Erie about 2¼ inches, but this water never actually leaves the Great Lakes.

REACH AVERAGE

Only Superior and Ontario, also partially controllabr, have in the last 1¼ years gone as high as the average levels prevailing over the last 10 years or for those prevailing from 1960 through 1963.

Ontario skidded below both averages in October a year ago, and Superior, below most of last year, is expected to fall below again by Christmas.

Huron and Michigan, which maintain identical levels because of their joining at the Straits of Mackinac, have been below previous low records every month this year.

The spring rise is expected to bring them up even with the low for that month—next April. Even then it will be two feet below the level at the end of the same month last year.

Erie levels are expected to make an upward spring turn in March, when they will oe within a half foot of the record low for that month.

Ontario, currently in a steep fall, is expected to swing upward in March, but at that time, unless experts miss their guess, will be a foot below the corded before. It isn't expected to get up to April's previous low during that month.

NORTH BAY (CP) — A proposal to raise the water level of the Great Lakes by diverting rivers in the James Bay watershed southward in o Georgian Bay received unanimous support Friday at a meeting of Northern Ontario and northwestern Quebec representatives.

About 100 mayous, reeves, chamber of commerce representatives and interested persons approved a resolution asking the Ontario, Quebec and Canadian governments to ear mark funds for a study of the plan. The proposed scheme is the brainchild of Sudbury mining engineer Thomas Kierans.

A four-man committee under W. A. Young of North Bay is to be formed to promote the plan.

The meeting estimated the project would cost $2,000,000,000 to implement over a period of 15 to 20 years. It would deliver 25,000 cubic feet of water a second.

Mr. Kierans' plan involves reversal of the flow of the Harricanaw River southward to the Ottawa River and west through Lake Nipissing to Georgian Bay.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER

If you were asked out of a clear blue sky what you thought was the most widely-read section, or article appearing in the daily newspaper, what would you say?

The answer would likely depend a great deal on your own personal interests.

If you are a sports fan, you would likely say, "the sports section."

If your interests are for the ladies—and just who's aren't when your own little daily isn't looking—you might say the woman's page.

Do you stay up nights wondering about the world situation? Then your choice could well be the front page or the editorial page.

Perhaps you have a dear little old aunt who does her Christmas shopplifting early. Chances are you would pick the police blotter.

Another popular pick is the "education section," sometimes referred to as the comics.

Or, if your sweet little lifemate has been doing enough nagging, could be the want ads are your favorite after-dinner reading.

Nope, you're wrong. Such minor matters as government changes, world series and A-bomb explosions all run far behind the "advice to the love-lost" columns.

You know the ones we mean. After all, you likely read them first yourself.

So-so, your fearless agent, after discovering such are the facts of life, has brought in one of the "most readable writers" to help us out on the sports page.

He shall be known as "Helpful Herman," or "Just Plain Herm," for short.

"Helpful," (we call him that because he's not very short,) opened his mailbag this a.m., counted out a few letters, poured the rest of his malted milk (ha ha ha) down the sink, stuffed it back in the bag, (he uses a pencil because it gets him closer to readers, he says, than do "those nasty old typewriters,") and went about answering the first batch. (First batch of mail, that is, he drank the other "first batch" before it had even fermented.)

This is what came out:

Dear Helpful Herman:
My girlfriend is a baseball fan. When we watch the games on TV and do a little necking, too, I have difficulties. Every time her favorite team gets a hit or a run, she bites my nose in the excitement. What should I do? Signed Cyrano.

Dear Cyrano:
Make sure she roots for the Mets.

* * *

Dear Herm:
My wife is an ardent sports fan and does nothing on the weekends except watch football, hockey, bowling, baseball or whatever other sport she can find on TV. I do not like sports and we cannot afford two TV sets. Please help me.—Signed, Bedwards Bobby.

Dear Bedwards:
I sure will help you. Trade me wives quickly. P.S. The transaction must be completed before Grey Cup day.

* * *

Dear Mr. Herman, Sir:
I want to be a sports writer when I grow up. I do not understand all those fancy words they use. Can you explain some of them to me?—Signed, Young and Hopeful.

Dear Young and:
Hate to discourage you, dear child, but nine out of ten "fancy words" used by sports writers are typographical errors, thus meaning exactly nothing. The tenth is the writer's way of insulting an athlete without said athlete knowing it."

* * *

Dear Helpful Herman:
I have no problems but just love sports and thought you would like to know it. I still like to play myself when I get the chance.—Signed, 96-year-old Grandmother.

Dear 96:
Thank you, enclosed is a playing certificate. Sign it before next Monday and report to The Ontario Intelligencer hockey club dressing room. Bring your elbow pads and don't be late. And don't forget to bring your pension cheque to pay for your share of the ice."

Editor's note:
Helpful Herman quit after that last letter.
It seems he signed with Boston Bruins—as a scout.

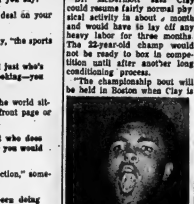
Hernia Operation Knocks Out Clay



By JACK HAND

BOSTON (AP)—Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay underwent a successful operation for a hernia Friday night that forced an indefinite postponement of Monday's scheduled rematch with Sonny Liston. It is unlikely that the bout will be held for six months.

Clay was stricken Friday night after dinner and was taken to Boston City Hospital where Dr. William McDermott of Harvard performed an "easy" one-hour operation that he called common but serious.

Dr. McDermott said Clay could resume fairly normal physical activity in about a month and would have to lay off any heavy labor for three months. The 22-year-old champ would not be ready to box in competition until after another long conditioning process.

"The championship bout will be held in Boston when Clay is fit," said Herman Greenberg, chairman of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission. Representatives of all parties involved indicated they were in agreement.

CASSIUS CLAY

When Liston first heard the news at Plymouth, Mass., training camp, he commented, "No wonder he got a hernia running up and down like a wild man." Later, after the operation, he added: "I could have been worse. It could have been me."

Clay had just finished eating dinner in his hotel suite with Drew (Bundini) Brown, his friend and assistant trainer, when he became ill.

"He got violently sick and started to throw up", said Brown. "His stomach swelled up the size of a football. I wanted to call a doctor but Clay said 'no, get me to a hospital quick. I'm in bad pain.'"

An ambulance took the champion to the hospital while wild rumors began to spread in press headquarters downtown.

Sam Silverman, the local promoter with Inter - Continental Sports, Incorporated, hustled to the hospital. Shortly afterward he announced the fight had been postponed indefinitely.

Garland (Bill) Cherry, attorney and also a stockholder in Inter - Continental, said there was no insurance carried on the fight.

Frederick Brooks, president of Sportsvision, the closed circuit firm that hoped to fill 600,000-000 theatre and arena seats with the fight, refused to attempt to estimate his losses immediately.

The delay was particularly aggravating to Liston who admits to 30 years. The former champion hoped to regain some of the prestige he lost Feb. 25 in Miami when he lost his title to Clay in eight stiffing on a stool when the bell rang for the seventh round. Liston claimed he had injured his left shoulder in the Miami fight.

While Clay was waiting for the surgeons to decide if an operation was necessary, Dr. McDermott said one of the nurses asked the champ, "You the greatest, aren't you?"

"Not tonight," was the answer.

Dr. McDermott said Clay had been suffering from the incarcerated groin hernia with a congenital defect in the abdominal wall.

Dr. Nathan Shapiro, examining physician of the state boxing commission, who examined Clay shortly after the fight was postponed, said there was no sign of a hernia when he examined the champion Monday.

Badminton Banter
New Season Under Way

Although the 1964-65 edition of the Belleville Badminton Club has been operating for only three weeks, club officials report everything going at top speed.

A number of new members are out, learning the sport and getting better acquainted with the club's older, more experienced members.

Last Saturday night, Ted Smith, Fred Wannamaker and Billie Hamilton, in some exciting, round-robin which was enjoyed by old and new members, both men and women. In this case, the fairer sex gave the gentlemen a badminton lesson, according to reports.

Next Saturday, November 21, a social day at Napanee and a number of local players will be taking part.

Team captains Fred Wannamaker and Kelly Bonnell are heading a strong contingent of players from the Belleville club against those from Peterborough, Picton, Oshawa, Napanee, Cobourg, Trenton and Bowmanville. The Napanee club is expected to maintain its record as a successful host body. A popular buffet dinner is scheduled following completion of play.

Meanwhile here at the Armouries plans are being made for the start of inter-club tournaments. They will be starting very soon which means that last years champions will have to keep on their toes to retain their coveted championships. Several new members have already served notice with their play that they will be running for the honors before the season is over.

The club is still able to accomodate a few new members and anyone interested is welcome to drop in at the Armouries on any playing night. The club is active every Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday night. Those who would turn out may be surprised to find that badminton is far from the "soft touch" that it might appear to be.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Ed Arthur, veteran Otterville horseman making his first appearance at the Western Fair Raceway here, guided Ellen Dillon to victory in the third event Friday night as the three year-old filly paced the mile in 2:12 and returned $6.1.o.

A daily double of $42 was posted when Fabway, ridden by Harold Carr, took the first at $15.10 and True Exra captured the second at $3.80 with Peter Miller handling the reins.

Frustrated at the goalmouth for two periods, Belleville "B's" broke open a 1-1 tilt in the final twenty minutes to whip Napanee Legion 5-3 here last night.

A small crowd watched the "B's" even their young record at one and one by winning their first home start in the OHA Eastern Junior League's 1964-65 season.

The win did not come easily. Napanee goalie Wayne Brant stalled the Belleville victory drive time and again as the winners held a 38-14 margin in shots on goal.

The winners never trailed. It was a scoreless tie after one period and Belleville finally broke the ice at 8.58 of the second. Jim Woodcock scored the marksman, batting the disc in from the crease. Boyle had intercepted a Legion clearing attempt to start the play, relaying to Stewart who shoved it out front to Woodcock.

Jim Stinson tied it less than four minutes later, breaking in close to beat Don Boyle on a long side. The "B's" stormed Brant's cage but to no avail in the tempo picked up.

Carl Boomhower shoved Belleville in front to stay early in the third. He collected a side-boards pass from Hagerman, hit a goal post from the doorstep but was there to put the puck into the opposite corner on his second try.

Rookie Pete Fleming made it 3-1 at 8.07, steering Hagerman's goalmouth pass behind a surprised Brant. Earl Smith got that one back to keep Napanee in the game at 9.32, assisted by Larry Cook and Ralph Smith.

The "B's" were playing a man short when Wayne Brant took the count to 4-2 midway through the period, finishing a play with Lessard.

Grant Hagerman completed a good night's work with the prettiest goal of the game at 14.05, while the Legion crew was down a man. Hagerman slid the disc into the far corner after a perfect passing play with Rutherford and Boyle.

While the five goals were shared by as many players, Hagerman was the top point-getter with one marker and two assists. Bob Boyle and Jim Rutherford failed to score with Hagerman's good chances but each earned two assists, Larry Stewart and Bill Lang one each. Boomhower, White, Carl Boomhower, Pete Fleming and Jim Woodcock completed the scoring.

Referee Art Casterton, back in the OHA after two years of officiating, ruled with an iron hand. He dished out 22 penalties and never lost the game out of hand. Belleville drew 12 of the total, including a misconduct to Roy Marcele in the third period.

Both clubs skated well but lacked the finishing touch, at least-until the final period.

The "B's" next start will be at home against Peterborough next Friday.

Misconduct, Goals For Mr. Young

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defenceman Howie Young spent 10 minutes in the penalty box on a major misconduct Friday night, but he was on the scoring end long enough to save Los Angeles' first two goals as the Blades' topped the league-leading Portland Buckaroos 8-3 in Western Hockey League action.

In the other game Friday the cellar-dwelling San Francisco Seals forced Vancouver into overtime before bowing to Canucks 7-6 in Vancouver.

The Blades' win moved them into a second-place tie with Seattle with 27 points each, one back of the WHL-leading Buckaroos and one point up on Canucks.

Young, who leads the league in penalties, scored his first goal 33 seconds after the game began on a screaming shot from the blue line.

Blades took a 3-1 first period lead on Young's second goal and one by Willie O'Ree while Bill Saunders had Buckaroos only score of the opening period.

Portland's Art Jones closed the gap to 3-2 in the second period.

Brian Smith hit the net twice in the third period and Mark Bollard fired the Blades' backfiring with a 55-foot slap shot. Bob Schmautz had Portland's only third-period goal.

In Vancouver, old pro Phil Maloney led Canucks with two goals and a pair of assists. Bob Kabel got Canucks' winning goal in overtime.

WILL PLAY GERMANS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's national hockey team will meet the West German national team here Feb. 8, it was announced Friday. The game will be part of a Canadian tour for the West Germans.

Minor Hockey

All three games played in the B.M.H.A.'s tyke division resulted in one-goal victories last evening.

In a pair of novice contests, Bruins downed the Leafs 4-3 while Generals and Wings fought to a 4-4 deadlock.

Richard Burnett scored the first and fourth goals to pace the Bruin win. Ted Ewes and Allen Wood fired the others. Thomas Rogers was the lone Leaf marksman.

David Smith starred for the Wings. He scored all four of his club's goals. David Taylor netted a pair for the Generals, Bill Leitch and Peter Smrke getting one each.

Rangers nipped the Bruins 4-3. Leafs shaded the Hawks 3-2 and Wings edged Canadiens 4-3 in the tyke games.

John Ross scored all four Wing goals in another sparkling individual effort. Bruce Sutherland a pair for Canadiens, Kevin McCallum notching the other one.

Leafs got their scoring punch from the Crawfords. Michael Crawford fired two goals and Peter Crawford got the other one. Hawk goals went to Richard Sweet and Ronald Graham.

A brace of goals by Barry Marsh sparked the Ranger win. Mark Foster and Larry Watts had a goal apiece. John Ashley scored twice and Ronnie Meloyne once for the Bruins.

Key Men Out

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit's Roger Crozier is the National Hockey League's leading netminder, but Montreal fans may want another look before they're convinced.

The 22-year-old rookie backstop, who has allowed just 22 goals in 12 games this season, played 15 games in the Red Wings nets last season. Two of those contests were horror shows against Montreal Canadiens.

His first meeting with the Habs was a 6-1 trouncing at Detroit and in the next encounter, at Montreal, the Canadiens pounded him for nine goals in a 9-3 runaway. Bobby Rousseau beat him five times that night, including a shot almost from centre ice.

Even coach Sid Abel abandoned at the thought of that 80-footer. Asked to explain, Crozier said he first wanted to play the puck with his stick and then decided to catch it. By that time, it was in the net.

Crozier, however, has since recovered from these miseries and has allowed the Canadiens only two goals in two meetings this season. Detroit earned a 1-1 tie in Montreal and scored a 2-1 victory on home ice.

The teams clash again tonight in Montreal while Boston is at Toronto in the only other game. All teams are in action Sunday night when Montreal visits Boston, Toronto plays at Chicago and Detroit travels to New York.

Both Montreal and Toronto have numerous injuries in their ranks as they try to close the two-point gap between themselves and league-leading Detroit.

Charlie Hodge "likely" will be back in the Montreal nets although Gump Worsley is standing by in case Hodge's back injury recurs. Defenceman Jacques Laperriere is out for the weekend games with a twisted knee and centre Henri Richard, of course, is out.

The situation in Toronto is worse. Both goalies Terry Sawchuk and Johnny Bower are ailing, Frank Mahovlich may have mononucleosis, Dave Keon has a groin injury and both Carl Brewer and Don McKenney are less than 100-per-cent healthy.

Keon and Mahovlich are both out for the weekend.

Bower has influenza and Sawchuk strained leg muscles. If neither is available, the Leafs will call up Jerry Cheevers from Rochester of the American League.

Mahovlich is feared to have a blood disease that sidelined Sawchuk for eight months in 1957. Keon is bothered by a groin injury, Brewer has a face injury and McKenney has trouble shooting because of a bruised wrist.

W. F. C. Will Play Overtime

WINNIPEG (CP) — Overtime will declare a winner if any games of the Western Football Conference final series are tied at the end of regulation time, commissioner Syd Halter of the Canadian Football League announced Friday.

Calgary Stampeders meet British Columbia Lions in the opener of the best-of-three final in Calgary today.

In the event of a tie, the teams will play an overtime period, which consists of two 10-minute halves.

Petes Tie Flyers

Marlboros Move Ahead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Marlboros took advantage of Oshawa Generals' night off Friday to move into first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Marlboros scored five goals in the third period to defeat Hamilton Red Wings 6-3 and move one point ahead of the idle Generals.

In other action, Kitchener Rangers jumped out of the cellar into sixth place with a 10-2 victory over St. Catharines Black Hawks and fourth-place Peterborough Petes tied 3-2 with third-place Niagara Falls Flyers.

Paul Laurent, the league's leading scorer, led Marlboros to victory with two goals. Other Marlboro scorers were Bill Selby, Wayne Mosdell, Wayne Carlton and Gerry Meehan.

SCORES TWICE

Real Lemieux scored twice for Hamilton, with Jim Mair adding the other.

The Rangers' attack was led by Ken Grafton and Tommy Miller, each with three goals. Dave Sheen, John Beechey, Bill Hway and Terry Ball also scored for Kitchener.

Ken Hodge and Ken Laidlaw scored for St. Catharines.

Black Hawks and John Vanderburg scored for Peterborough while Jim Lorentz and Don Marcotte scored for the Flyers.

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I am writing to you in regard to the article appearing in your Nov. 9 issue on the editorial page. The article was penned by Sydney J. Harris under the title "The Loyalty Of Fans Has Been Eroded."

I seriously question Mr. Harris' authority to speak out on such a subject as the U.S. national pastime. It is true that at the present time that there has been a lot of "bad press" circulated on the ever emphasis placed on the business side of baseball, but more of that later, I would rather comment on Mr. Harris' remarks on a line-by-line basis.

The author begins by stating he does not know who played in the 1964 World Series and was indignant that a passerby expected him to be familiar with the proceedings. For Mr. Harris' information, the participants were the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals. Since our friend Sydney apparently goes around with his head in the sand, may I also tell him that Lyndon B. Johnson was recently elected president of the United States defeating a fellow named Goldwater. I do not question the author's right to say that he is sick and tired of being regarded as a second class citizen because he does not go around waving a pennant and pressing his transistor radio to his ear every second week in October. The objection I would like to state is that if he is going to write about something that he should acquaint himself with the facts, something that he neglected to do.

The main point of the article seems to be that baseball is losing its grip on the American public - - and for what he calls good reason. O.k. Mr. Harris, let's consider your "facts."

First, Mr. Harris tells us, "as you know, the game has slowed up. It takes almost twice as long now to complete a major league game as it used to." Really, now, you can do better than this'. According to The Official Baseball Guide, the average major league baseball game played in 1963 took two hours and twenty minutes to play. What source were you referring to when you state that games used to average one hour and ten minutes? Of course I will grant you that in the World Series as there is more at the line, the games will vary in length. Take for example, the 1963 World Series, or is this year regarded by Mr. Harris as "the old days?" The longest game was the second game which consumed some two hours and thirteen minutes (counting the time between innings, etc.) and the shortest was one hour and fifty minutes. By the way, that year the teams were the New York Yankees and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mr. Harris continues, "Secondly . . . the rosters keep changing and . . . the teams keep going to different cities."

This is true only to a certain degree. The major leagues come up with only fifteen percent turnover in player personnel each season. All of the established teams have at least five players on their current rosters who have been there for the five previous seasons. Ten-year veterans are not that rare, if you care to take the time to look.

Mr. Harris (or his sports-writer friend), loves to compare organized baseball with pro football. Let's do that. In 1958 and 1962, the New York Yankees won the American League title. In 1958 and 1963, the New York Giants won the Eastern Division title of the NFL. In both cases the teams of 1963 were regarded by the faiders as "veteran clubs," but the Yankees still had five of the basic regulars left in their midst in 1963 whereas the Giants had ten of twenty-two (if civic interest in baseball is dying because of player changes, then on the same grounds it must hold true for football. Let us turn our attention to franchise switching. Since 1950, there have been five out-and-out switches in baseball franchise locales (I am not counting the unusual circumstances in Washington). This is out of sixteen teams. The Pittsburgh Pirates recently signed a fifty-year lease on the soon to be constructed new ball park, so they would seem a stable bet. Other teams are signing similar leases, although for not as long a term. Since 1950, the NFL has had five franchise moves — out of 13 teams.

As far as keeping fan interest alive, may I quote from the Baseball Guide 1964 edition. "For the second successive season the National League established an all-time attendance record when its gate soared to 11,382,227." The city of Milwaukee is trying to try to keep the Braves from moving to Atlanta, which by the way is clamoring to get them. Each year more and more cities in the U.S. are trying to woo teams from their present sites. Does this indicate a loss of fan interest? Not from my box seat it does not.

I would like to close by commenting on the author's closing paragraph which reads in part, " . . . when (baseball) becomes too slow to watch and when it forfeits the civic loyalty of fans, it is digging its own grave as a national pastime." If Mr. Harris cannot tell the difference between a foundation for the future and a grave, I would leave the subject of baseball to those who follow it.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

A few years ago some goaltenders in the National Hockey League would swing their big sticks on the back of your leg and almost chop it off if you got inside the goal crease, whether accidentally, or by design.

Earl (Dutch) Reibel, a centre with Detroit a few years back, played on a bum leg practically an entire season because a goalie whacked him on the shin. It took a long time to heal because of the constant irritation.

On the other hand, its wonderful the way goaltenders will save players from serious injury when the players get knocked off balance and crash into the net going full tilt.

The goalies will put their big sticks down and guide you on by the post. Or they'll put their big shin pad in the way to stop you.

I can recall many times when I was cutting in off the wing and was upended. I was flying towards the pipe and the goalie would just slide me off to the corner.

Chicago's Glenn Hall has saved me on occasion. So has Johnny Bower of Toronto. I remember one time at Montreal I was headed backwards for the net in an awkward position. Jacques Plante held his blade tight to the ice, I hit the net all right but his stick cushioned the impact.

A lot of times you'll see a goal allowed when an opposing player is in the net with the goalie. It's allowed for one reason.

You're standing just outside the crease. Their defenseman comes cruising along and takes more of you than you end up in the net. Then a teammate gets the puck and dumps it in. You were pushed there by your opponent so the goal is legal.

The other night Roger Crozier "bagged" two players. They were going for the puck, going full tilt. They collided, locked legs. They fell to the ice and slid into the net. Crozier kept them from hitting the post, saved them from possible injury.

Powers Vs. Canadiens

'Red' Storey Subpoenaed

TORONTO (CP)—Red Storey, former National Hockey League referee who quit five years ago, has been subpoenaed to appear as a witness in a libel action against Montreal Canadiens coach Toe Blake brought by Eddie Powers, another former referee who resigned last year.

The suit, scheduled to begin here Monday in Ontario Supreme Court, was initiated by Powers on the basis of remarks attributed to Blake about the officiating in a Montreal hockey game Jan. 31, 1963. Powers refereed the game, in which Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Canadiens 6-5.

Powers, 46, resigned Feb. 14, 1963, in the middle of his seventh season as an NHL referee, after NHL president Clarence Campbell had fined Blake $200. Powers blamed "insufficient support" from Campbell for his resignation.

Storey, identified in the subpoena as Buster Storey of Montreal, resigned in 1959 after a riotous Montreal-Chicago Stanley Cup playoff game after which Campbell was quoted as saying Storey had "choked up." The subpoena was issued at the request of Powers' lawyer, A. McN. Austin.

The suit names Blake, Montreal Canadiens Hockey Club and others.

Browns Lion Hunting

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Browns — both Cleveland and Jimmy — have more than the usual reasons for putting out with an extra effort Sunday when their National Football League game against Detroit Lions will be among those sharing top billing on the pro football program.

The effort of Buffalo Bills to remain undefeated while playing Boston Patriots in an American Football League game also is a feature.

Cleveland, leading the Eastern Conference of the NFL by two games, never has beaten Detroit in a regular season game, Jimmy Brown, the pace-setter's star fullback needs only 66 yards to become a 1,000-yard ground gainer for the sixth time.

The Lions, with a 5-3-1 record compared to Cleveland's 7-1-1, will be hampered, though, because linebacker Joe Schmidt is out with a shoulder separation.

MEET, VIKINGS

Baltimore, the NFL's Western Conference leader, will be seeking to avenge an opening game setback at the hands of Minnesota Vikings. The Colts have won eight in a row since the early loss.

St. Louis Cardinals, Eastern Conference runners-up, also will be looking to get even. Their target will be the championship New York Giants, last year's conference champs, who defeated the Cards 34-17 two weeks ago.

Buffalo, with a 9-0 record, is the only unbeaten team in pro football and has a sizable lead in the Gate A Eastern Division. But the Bills still are smarting from last year's beating by Boston in the playoff for the divisional title. The Patriots have a second-place, 6-2-1 record this season.

Paul Lowe, one of San Diego's big guns, is a doubtful starter for the Chargers against Kansas City Chiefs, The Chargers with a 6-2-1 record, lead the AFL's Western Division, while the Chiefs have split eight decisions.

Other NFL games Sunday: Dallas and Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Chicago, Pittsburgh and Washington, and Green Bay and San Francisco. In the AFL, it's New York against Denver and Houston against Oakland.

Baltimore Shakes Slump

BALTIMORE (AP) — After spotting Springfield Indians a 2-0 advantage midway through the first half, Baltimore Clippers ended their six-game losing streak by roaring from behind to gain a 5-3 American Hockey League victory Friday night.

After Roger Cote, Springfield winger, tapped in a rebound at close range at 10:53 of the opening stanza, goals by Dick Meissner at 14:37 and Bryan Hextall at 19:25 sent the Clippers off the ice with a 2-1 first-period lead.

There was no scoring in the second period.

In the last period, the Clippers broke the game open with successive tallies by Hextall at 6:36, Jean Ratelle at 9:32 and Gordon Labossiere at 14:08.

All three of the Clippers third-period tallies were registered at close range in which the visitor's forwards repeatedly punctured the Indians' defence.

Boat Hurley spoiled Galt Hornets bid for a first-place tie in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series Friday night.

The Thoroughbreds trailed four-nine, Guelph Regals by two points going into the game but managed to tie them before they left the Regals to a 5-5 shutout, his first of the season.

In a battle of the other end of the standings, the cellar-dwelling Welland Buriboks won their second game of the season by edging Oakville Oaks 6-5.

At Galt, Dave Luciuk scored two goals in the Regals' eighth victory in nine starts. Keith Wentworth, MacGregor and Bert Brown added a goal each.

The Buriboks, playing on home ice, trailed Oakville as they pulled to within two points of the Oaks. They went ahead 2-0 in the first period, tied in the second, and then held off a late Oakville rally for the win.

Georgd Montague led Welland scoring with two goals and Terry McGuire, Bob Hodge, Vance Millar and Eric Unger added singles.

Britian Price, Carl Humers, Bob Bishop, Doug Hillman and Charlie Mitchell scored for Oakville.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Wayne Harris, a young apprentice rider who hasn't started to shave, rode four winners Friday at the Greenwood Race Track. His last victory in the eighth race was the 17-year-old jockey's 100th win of his career.

Harris, who came to Ontario from Vancouver this spring, now leads the jockey standings of the Greenwood meeting with 20 victories, nine more than runner-up Eric Walsh.

Frank Merrill Jr., Canada's perennial leading trainer, added to his leading total at this meeting by saddling three winners. Two of them were ridden by Harris, giving Merrill 19 winners at the meet.

After Merrill sent out Ann's Reply to win the first race, under Paul Maxwell, Harris swung into action. He completed a $108.30 daily-double by winning with Barleycorn in the second, repeated with Kalipera in the third, won the fifth with Ring Around and completed the day with Better Ending.

IS A FIRST

This was the first time Harris had managed to win four races in one day. Last week he rode three winners on three different days.

Most of the 7,338 fans rode right along with Harris. Barley corn paid $8.90, $4.10 and $3.10, Kalipera was an even-money favorite, Ring Around returned $5.80 and Better Ending $6.20.

Fairmar, a pert three-year-old daughter of Flying Fury, owned by F. M. Clark Jr., of Meadow Lake, Sask., took the featured seven - furlong sixth race, defeating Belartie and Menaris, two of the better fillies in Ontario.

Fairmar, ridden by Frank Joda, paid $6.40 winning her first race in the East this season. She also completed a $22.70 quinella with Belarctic.

Sasky Vets Announce Retirements

REGINA (CP)—Tackles Reg Whitehouse and Bill Clarke have announced they plan to retire from professional football after more than a decade each with Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Whitehouse, who joined Riders in 1953, said he "thought it was time to call it days" while on a hunting trip after Saskatchewan lost to Calgary Stampeders in the WFC semi-final series.

Whitehouse was a starting offensive tackle and as a place-kicking specialist amassed more points in his career than any other Saskatchewan player.

Mets Get First Pick In Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets, with the poorest won and lost record in the major leagues last season, will get the first pick in the annual "first" major baseball draft of minor league players in Houston Nov. 30.

The pickings appear slim.

There are a flock of eligibles. In fact, more than 2,000 of them are spread among 138 clubs and listed on 39 pages.

A majority of them, however, are former major leaguers who are either over the hill or never really made the grade.

The draft will be held in two phases. The first will consist of the selection of minor league players with four or more years of experience. The draft price is $25,000 for Double A players.

The second draft will deal with first-year players only. The selling price for these is $8,000 a head.

It is virtually certain that most of the money spent this year will again be for the youngsters. Yet there are a number of veteran players who might be worth a gamble at $25,000.

Canadian Beaten In Jump-Off

TORONTO (CP) — Kathy Kusner, 24-year-old member of the United States Olympic equestrian team, won the International Welcome Stakes Friday to kick off the International Horse Show at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair.

Miss Kusner, riding Untouchable, a nine-year-old chestnut gelding, shrilled the crowd of about 8,000 with a brilliant riding display guiding her mount cleanly through a nine-obstacle course in 41.8 seconds.

The victory came in a five-way jump-off after all five riders were clean on the first round.

Finishing second was Carlos Marcelli of Argentina on Estopin. Marcelli was clean in the jump-off but took 10 seconds longer to navigate the course.

Third was Frank Chapot of the U.S. on Manon. He was timed in 44.7 seconds. But had four faults for knocking down the final jump on the course.

Tom Gayford of Toronto riding Blue Bear rode cleanly in the first round but los teight faults in the jump-off.

Split Motion Killed

Runner Bill Crothers Honored By AAU

MONTREAL (CP) — Toronto's Bill Crothers, who won a silver medal for Canada at the recent Tokyo Olympics, has been named Canada's outstanding track and field Athlete of the Year by the Amateur Athletic Union.

The bespectacled pharmacist, runnerup in the 800-metre run, was awarded the John W. Davies Trophy. He also won the Norton H. Crow Trophy as the AAU's outstanding male athlete.

Awards were announced Friday during the second day of the AAU's annual meeting which concludes today. The AAU also nominated Crothers and Harry Jerome for the Lou E. Marsh Memorial Trophy as Canada's top athlete.

Other groups will also make nominations for the award.

Meanwhile, a controversial resolution that would have split the AAU into autonomous groups died in the conference room.

ASKED CHANGE

The proposal, put forward by the British Columbia branch, asked that any national sport committee be permitted to withdraw from the AAU and apply for membership as an affiliate.

But the motion failed in the legislation committee when it did not get a seconder and a non - concurrence motion was passed. It wasn't even discussed at the subsequent general session.

However, the issue arose later Friday night when the gymnastics committee submitted its report. One provision was that it change its name to the Canadian Gymnastics Association of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

Presumably this would entail selection of officers and establish the gymnastics committee as a separate body within the AAU.

However, the general feeling was that the provision wouldn't get by the legislation committee today and, as a last resort, at the general session.

The general meeting passed several minor resolutions that dealt with technical matters in the Junior Olympics program and standardized medical forms.

Three-Star Program

Planning Centennial Sports

MONTREAL (CP) — Maj.-Gen. Arnold Charbonneau of Ottawa, sports co-ordinator for the federal government's committee planning sports for Canada's centennial, told a general meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada Friday of long-range plans for sports presentations in 1967.

He told the AAU meeting there are three stages in the present plan:

1. Organization on a national scale of events for youngsters six to 18 years old that will provide mass participation, particularly for school children;

2.- Development of special events as an integral part of the celebrations.

3. Staging of major international competitions of various sports in Canada for the first time.

WANTS CHILDREN IN IT

In the first stage, it was hoped that 6,000,000 school children would play a large part with special emphasis towards and medals for achievement and success.

The special-events stage could include such competitions as highland games, particularly in Eastern Canada, physical fitness events and even such competitions as fishing and log-rolling.

Maj. Charbonneau has written and met with various sports bodies in an effort to get them seek international championships to be staged in Canada in 1967.

As an example of what can be done, he said, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is making application to hold the 1967 world hockey championship in this country as part of the centennial celebration.

Both president Stanford Smythe and the team's greatest fear is that Mahovlich may be suffering from mononucleosis, a fatigue-inducing ailment which put goalie Terry Sawchuck on the sidelines for six months eight years ago.

Will Meet To Discuss Braves

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Board Chairman Eugene H. Grobschmidt of Milwaukee County and Lou Perini, president of Atlanta, engaged in the battle of the Braves, agreed Friday to meet in Chicago Sunday.

Grobschmidt, however, agreed to the meeting after a telephone call from Atlanta. The Milwaukee official said the subject was mentioned for the discussion "but I can't just imagine what it will be."

Allen is a prime mover in organizing Milwaukee Braves in attempt to shift their National League franchise to Atlanta. Grobschmidt is leading the fight to force the Braves to fulfill a contract to play all home games in Milwaukee.

The league ordered the Braves to fulfill the contract, but gave club permission to move to Atlanta in 1966. The Braves signed a 25-year lease for Atlanta's new $18,000,000 stadium earlier this week.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Curly Lambert knocked two-fifths of a second off the track trotting mark Friday night in the featured $3,000 Flemington Purse at Garden City Raceway while Superior Richard duplicated his feat in the seventh race, a $1,300 pacing test.

Curly Lambert clocked 2:06 3-5 for a mile and a quarter here while Superior Richard hit 2:04 flat to set the pacing record.

Curly Lambert led all the way to win the Flemington.

He paced the first lengths with Betsy holding on for second and Danny Song A coming on to grab third.

Superior Richard sat in the middle of the Colborne field through most of the co-feature, a $1,500 test for three-year-olds and up.

However, the early leaders faded with Shooting Par coming on for second and Raven Hanover grabbing third over the McNab at the wire.

Every Test In Book For Big "M"

TORONTO (CP) — Doctors at Toronto General Hospital gave Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs "every test in the book" Friday, but said they probably won't know the cause of the left winger's mysterious fatigue until Tuesday.

Mahovlich, who hasn't been feeling up to par lately, entered hospital Thursday. Dr. Hugh Smythe said results of the tests will be available Monday but it will probably be another day before positive conclusions can be reached.

Dr. N. T. McPhedran said the Leafs' medical specialists have no idea how long it will be before Mahovlich rejoins the Leafs' lineup in National Hockey League competition.

Smythe said the team's greatest fear is that Mahovlich may be suffering from mononucleosis, a fatigue-inducing ailment which put goalie Terry Sawchuck on the sidelines for six months eight years ago.

Gee-Gee Star Scoring Champ

OTTAWA (CP) — Vince Thompson of the University of Ottawa Gee-Gees won the individual scoring championship of the Ontario Intercollegiate Football Conference this season with 69 points.

Final statistics for the regular season issued Friday showed Thompson scored a league-leading 10 touchdowns and added two converts to finish seven points ahead of Derek Carrier of Royal Military College, Kingston. Carrier had seven touchdowns plus 13 converts and seven singles.

Waterloo Lutheran's Ed Turek, last year's top scorer with 52 points, faded to sixth this season with 40 points.

In third spot after the 1964 season was Blue Scotte, another player with the second place Gee-Gees, who racked up 34 points. He was followed by team mate Thompson in touchdowns with nine.

Volker Laeger of first-place McMaster led the league in field goals and converts, five and 17, respectively.

Argos Favored To Capture Senior Title

TORONTO (CP) — A balanced attack and deep bench strength make East York Argonauts the favorites to win the Eastern Canada senior football championship when they meet the Quebec champions, St. Lambert Saints, here Sunday.

The sudden-death final will send the winner on to meet for the Canadian final a week later.

Directing the East York attack will be quarterback Jerry McTaggart, who completed 75 passes in 162 attempts this season for 1,334 yards. On 62 punts he averaged 33.3 yards.

His job of directing his offensive boys will be handled by fullbacks Ian Monteith and Ray Williams. Monteith carried 76 times for 620 yards, 10 touchdowns and an 8.1-yard average. He shared the scoring leadership with Williams, who also scored 10 touchdowns with a 7.5-yard average on 73 carries.

OPTION TAYLOR

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League optioned centre Taylor to the Quebec City Central Hockey League Friday. Taylor, 21, scored one goal and was credited with two assists in five games with the Clippers this season. Last year with St. Paul, he scored 30 goals in 69 games.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: We are planning to visit the Royal Winter Fair next week in Toronto, and wondered if, through your most interesting travel columns, you would tell us something about it. — Mrs. B. C., Belleville.

Answer: Toronto's Royal Agricultural Winter Fair might deservedly be called the "world series" of Canadian horsemen and cattle showmen.

Held in the Coliseum at Toronto's Exhibition Park, this year from Nov. 13 to 21, the fair is known to most Canadians as "The Royal". It is an odd blend of high society and barnyard conviviality.

Take the Royal Horse Show. It is perhaps the most elegant occasion in the Canadian social calendar. The private boxes — especially during the visit of the Canadian Governor-general or the Lieutenant-governor of Ontario — are traditionally occupied by people festooned in mink, sparkling with diamonds and military decorations.

In the tanbark ring will be seen some of Canada's best-bred hunters, examples of the international jumping homers with the best of four other countries — the United States, Argentina, Mexico and Brazil.

To keep the name "Royal" in proper perspective, the hunters this year will be judged by the Duke of Westminster, Sir Hugh Grosvenor, of Eton. The duke is an old cavalryman, a lieutenant-colonel in the 9th Lancers during World War II. But despite the opulence of some of the Fair visitors, the Royal Agricultural Fair is still, as it began more than 40 years ago, a farm show, and the directors fight an all-out battle to keep the word "Agricultural" in its long and ungainly title.

A champion's ribbon at the Royal is the ultimate achievement in the art and sciences of agriculture. The highly prized honors and distinctions awarded by the Royal's judges are a powerful incentive in the constant upward climb in the excellence of Canadian farm products.

All the best of all breeds of livestock are carried many hundreds of miles to the Royal and are shown along with most near-perfect examples of vegetables, fruits, grains, butter, cheese, eggs, hone — all the output of the farm. The super-harvest is dramatically displayed and organized for both city and farm visitors in the newly-renovated Coliseum building in which 26 acres are sheltered under one roof. In the Farm Food Fair, a number of food-producer organizations have combined to sponsor cooking demonstrations emphasizing the quality and versatility of Canadian farm food.

In the "Children's Royal", the young of all farm animals — calves, piglets, chicks, ducklings and other members of the barnyard smallfry — are displayed for the special benefit and delight of the youngest visitors.

There are special attractions to interest the whole family throughout the exhibit areas, show rings and barns. It is a wholesome change from the hectic, worrisome world that engulfs us all.

QUESTION: We are going to Ottawa and are planning to visit the Canadian War Museum and the National Gallery of Canada. Would you please tell me the locations and the times they are open? Also about the Changing of the Guard? — H. L., Belleville.

ANSWER: Canadian War Museum: 350 Sussex Drive, Ottawa. Open 9 to 5 daily; 1 to 5 on Sundays. A valuable and interesting collection of war trophies and actual pictures taken during the wars 1914-18 and 1939-45.

National Gallery of Canada: Elgin and Sussex Streets, open weekdays 10 to 6; Tuesdays 10 to 10; Sundays and holidays 2 to 6. A full representation of Canadian Art from the 18th Century to the present day.

The Changing of the Guard Ceremony ended August 31st.

STARRING ROLE A BIG ADVANCE FOR SOPHIA LOREN

Anita Pensotti, popular newspapercowman for one of Italy's weeklies "Europeo," tells her version of how Sophia Loren was signed for $1,000,000 to play the starring role in "The Fall of the Roman Empire," showing at the Belle Theatre on Tuesday at the Belle Theatre.

"Producer Samuel Bronston wanted her so badly that he made a starting offer of $750,000. At the outset, Sophia felt that Carlo Lucilla, daughter of Marcus Aurelius should be a bit more prominent."

"Bronston immediately followed with a further million dollars for Sophia plus a role that would make her happy."

"Still a bit worried that Sophia might escape him, Bronston went to Rome to get her signature on a contract. He cornered Sophia and pulled out his chequebook."

According to Miss Pensotti, Bronston's sense of humor and diplomacy carried the day. "Please," he was reported in have said, "I have just one cheque and I'm going to might spend it. Let me give you an advance right away."

Bronston turned the cheque over—an advance for $300,000. The deal was consummated.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

USEFUL TOES

Have you ever wondered how birds managed to perch on a branch? Their toes are flexible, and their tendons tighten up automatically. You know how a baby's fingers will grasp one of your own fingers. This toe action is quite similar. As long as the branch is heavy enough to hold the weight, a perching bird can sit on it and sleep without danger of falling off. Toes which you might consider much too long simply wrap around the branch and protrude on the other side. Some birds have toes around the beck of the bird's ankle joint, and when the weight of the body bends this joint (as in perching) the tendons pull the toes.

The great majority of birds have four toes — three in front and one behind. A few birds have the ability to actually change at will the position of the outer toe from pointing forward to pointing backward. The osprey does this every time it catches a fish, its only food. This bird dives from a height, catching the prey a few inches under the surface of the water with its rough-soled talons, where the fish is firmly held by two toes directed forward and two backward. The osprey sometimes carries this burden a long distance, keeping the foot which grasps the head of the fish in front of the one that holds the tail.

Parrots and other tropical birds have this ability of moving the outer toe around. Other birds in our climate with reversible toes are the owls.

Like the osprey, owls are flesh eaters, but instead of seizing fish they eat mammals such as mice, rats, squirrels, and chipmunks, smaller birds, frogs, lizards, crawfish and even spiders and insects. They too, have strong feet to hold the prey, and for this purpose the reversible toe is of great assistance. The powerful horned owl even tackles rabbits.

Like songbirds, three out of the four toes of kingfishers point forward. But there is something quite odd about them. The two outer toes are jointed together for half their length. This arrangement is not for catching fish, because this they do with their capacious bills, but rather for digging. Kingfishers make their homes in banks, excavating a tunnel four or five feet long, with an enlarged section at the far end where the eggs are laid.

Woodpeckers (with the exception of the three-toes) have two forward and two backward pointing toes. This extra hind toe aids them in remaining upright on a perpendicular tree trunk, their well-hooked claws especially designed for clinging.

Jim Nabors, a Natural, Became an Instant Star

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Every so often a performer comes along who is such a natural as to be virtually an instant star. Just such a fellow is Jim Nabors.

He plays the title role on CBS' Friday night comedy, Gomer Pyle—USMC, which surprised everyone by landing the No. 3 spot on the first big ratings report of the season.

Jim Nabors was the most surprised of all. "Ah can't remembuh enmuh comedy gotta big rattn' on Frideh nahtt; an wuz scaired," said he (recorded phonetically).

As you can gather, Jim is from the south — Sylacauga, Ala. At times his drawl becomes so acute he makes his mentor, Andy Griffith, sound like a Yankee.

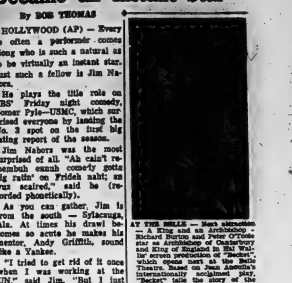
"I tried to get rid of it once when I was working at the Steak House," he said. "But I just couldn't manage it."

Jim worked at a number of jobs after graduating from the University of Alabama in business administration. Among his last was assistant manager at NBC. "I hated it," he recalled. "Some cutters have creative work, but all I was doing was slicing the film to put in commercials."

CONVULSES AUDIENCE

Meanwhile, he was moonlighting at a Santa Monica night spot called the Horn. Though he never had an opera lesson in his life, he could belt out an aria with amazing skill. There he'd translate the words in his own rhetoric. He convulsed the audience, which on one night included Andy Griffith.

The result: A regular spot on the Griffith show, then his own series.



Jim is an easy-moving chap with a mobile face and an offcentre jaw. "I got a terrible bite," he remarked. "Lot of people call me slack-jawed, but it's that way because of a vitamin deficiency when I was a kid."

Tracing Your Family History Is Ideal Retirement Project

By THOMAS COLLINS

Have you given any thought to the idea of tracking down your fifth cousins as a project for your retirement?

A man in the Northwest has, and apparently, is having a great adventure.

He is Carl B. Neal of Olympia, Wash. (3324 Hoadly Rd.). He retired in 1953 as a supervisor in the U.S. Forest Service and has devoted most of his retirement to compiling the saga of his family — Scotch - Irish Presbyterians who migrated from Ireland to Beaver Pond, Va., in 1718. He is now up to his fifth cousins and is Great-Grandpa Zachariah Neal.

Mr. Neal was born in a one-room sod house on a homestead in Western Nebraska in 1897. His father, Joseph King Neal, breaking away from the Virginia home had attended Masonic Institute in Mountain City, Tenn., and then gone on to Nebraska. His mother, Sallie Wills, whose family had migrated from Western Europe to Lancaster, Penna., had grown up in Johnson County, Tenn., and then attended Martha Washington Seminary in Abingdon, Va.

Carl Neal's family gave up Nebraska for Eugene, Ore., in 1903. Carl graduated from the University of Oregon and Yale Forest School, and entered the U.S. Forest Service in 1910. Most of his service was in Washington and Oregon.

"NO PLACE TO STOP"

Since his retirement he had made three trips through the South in search of family records. He has relied largely on information he has dug from Court House files in counties where the family lived and in U.S. Census reports. "I have, or have had, genealogists working for me in nine Court Houses in South Central Virginia, in three counties in North Carolina, and in State Libraries in Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia," he says. He would like to wind up his research, "but there is no place to stop."

Mr. Neal explains that in 1955 he thought he would write a 20-page record of his mother's family, and the same of his father's family. However, by 1960 he had 486 pages on his mother's family alone. He is mimeographed and bound the story.

Among family facts uncovered by Mr. Neal: One ancestor became a militia captain in the Revolutionary War; moved from Prince Edward County, Va., (this was Zachariah Neal) to Caswell County, N.C., and then remarried Rebecca Rice. Their descendants still live there. What Mr. Neal refers to as "the Laurel" in Johnson County, Tenn., figures largely in the history of his mother's family, beginning in 1797.

SAGA GOES ON

And the saga goes on. One of Mr. Neal's daughters, Mrs. Patrick Arnold, now lives in Modesto Calif. Another, Mrs. Preston Phipps, lives in Portland, Ore.

The tracking down of a family history is perhaps the most fascinating activity a man or woman can take up in retirement. There's more to it than discovering that one ancestor was a governor, and that another was hung. It's a matter of how your name has survived, how your family has has managed. In the last 150 years, as Mr. Neal's study shows, American families have travelled far.

It's not difficult to start a study of your family history. Letters to older members of the family around the country who may have preserved family Bibles and records would be the first step. This would lead to old cemeteries, to Court House records, and eventually to amateur or professional genealogists. Once you're launched there's no end to it.

The young have no time for family history, it seems. Only those who are retired have the time, and the sense of history, to start digging. And when they do they preserve for future generations of their families, some priceless information that otherwise will be lost.

Successful Living

Mothers With Firm Hand Will Be Thanked Eventually

DEAR DORIS — Reading your message to a child of 13 who was pregnant, I could not help but wonder what is wrong with parents that would let a child so young go without supervision and be able to get herself in such an unhappy condition.

DORIS CLARKE

I am a nurse and never do I attend a child in her teens going through the terrible experience that I do not feel her parents should be the ones to suffer. The physical pain is terrible for these wee tots; but that ends years before the suffering of being an unmarried mother.

No use anyone saying how hard it is for a mother if she does not let the child go. I have raised five children and neither son nor daughters were allowed to go dating separately until old enough to understand the difference between right and wrong. I have gone through all the heartaches an old-fashioned mother can go through, because my children could not date separately until 16, then had to be home at a respectable hour.

But when you see your daughters married in white (which they are really entitled to do), and have them later come and put their arms around you and thank you for not letting them tear around, as they put it, this gives you a great deal of happiness. It makes all the unpleasant things they say while too young to understand forgotten. — WONDERING MOTHER.

• • •

DEAR MOTHER — I say amen!

• • •

Confidential to PUZZLED — Next time hire a baby sitter. Get in the car and go with your husband to the town where he takes his course, explaining that you want to do some shopping or visit a friend, or see a show. Tell him you'll meet him at the beer parlor later.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — This boy (actually he is 21 and I am 18) played up to me and told me he loved me and, furthermore, he asked me to wear his ring. Then a week later he gives a very silly reason and asks for it back.

I think he really loves this former girl friend whom I resemble, and I was really only her in his eyes. Would I be wise to forget him and get into a different crowd? — STAND-IN.

• • •

DEAR STAND-IN — Yes — and foolish to do anything else.

• • •

Pan Properties Build First Factory Building In North East Industrial Park Area

Belleville's Newest Factory Officially Opened Yesterday

Management of New Industrial Park Sets Speed Record

The Belleville Industrial Commission marked an occasion yesterday when it handed over keys to the first tenants of Belleville's new industrial park, less than nine weeks after receiving notice of space requirements.

Mayor J. R. Ellis, president of the recently-formed Belleville Industrial Commission, told the officials present at the opening ceremonies, which were complete with a champagne reception by the owners, that this lightning development was made possible only by the close co-operation of all the project's participants: the Belleville City Council and City Administration, the Belleville Utilities Commission, Lakeland Natural Gas, Sidor Construction Ltd., and Pan Properties Ltd., owners of the land and building.

The first tenant of the new building (a division of the Northern Electric Co. Ltd. employing some 40 persons and performing certain services for the R.C.A.F.) learned of their requirements for 10,000 square feet of additional space in early September, and appealed to the Belleville Industrial Commission for assistance in finding it. The Commission in turn approached the owners, Pan Properties Ltd., and brought them together with their prospective tenants at Northern Electric.

On September 14th, a letter of intent was signed by both principals. Between that date and today, only 42 working days, almost a half-mile of water main and two miles of gas main have been laid, and the building engineered, built, equipped, landscaped and made ready for occupancy. During this period the Industrial Commission was called on to play a continuing role in the way of co-ordinating the many activities involved and to act as a go-between on occasion.

It is of interest that the Commission promoted the use of the P.E.R.T. diagram on this project. The initials P.E.R.T. stand for program evaluation and review technique which is used by Northern Electric for use in their many complex projects. PERT charts the start and completion times for all activities in the form of a diagrammatic net work, Identifies trouble areas often in advance, and focuses attention on those activities which are likely to be in difficulty. The technique enables the general contractor as well as owners and tenants to evaluate progress at any date. It is felt that the use of the PERT diagram along with the specifications prepared by E. F. Smith, Al Shukster and R. Morry of Northern, helped considerably toward successfully meeting the early deadline.

This first rental unit in the Industrial Park is situated on Adam Street, a newly built service road running parallel to Highway No. 401 in the North east section of the City. Its convenience for industry is enhanced by its proximity to the highway and the C.N.R. yards and by the fact that two transport firms have already located terminals at the eastern end of the street. Recently, the city entered negotiations with another local industrial firm to relocate in the Park area.

The tenant of the new building is known officially as "The R.C.A.F. Contractor Support Group" which is a separate department of the local Northern Electric plant. The group will be operated under the management of A. F. G. Tooth, P. Eng., with C. A. Hunt, P. Eng., as engineering department manager and G. L. Wambolt as depot manager. Mr. Tooth will report directly to T. N. Davidson, P. Eng., manager of the Northern Electric Co. Ltd., Belleville Works.

MR. A. F. G. TOOTH, Manager RCAF Contractor Support

Mr. Tooth, Assistant Superintendent for Product and System Engineering of the Northern Electric Company has been appointed Manager of R.C.A.F. Contractor Support, the first factory in Belleville's new Industrial sub-division.

Mr. Tooth is a graduate of the University of London, England. He joined Northern Electric Company in 1947 and came to Belleville in March, 1948 when he worked in the engineering department. In 1954 he was appointed supervisor of the Radar engineering department and in 1956 Assistant superintendent of products and system engineering. He is a member of the Engineering Institute of Canada, being chairman of the Belleville branch in 1963-65. He is a member of the Professional Engineers of Ontario, and an associate member Institute of Electrical Engineers in Great Britain.

Plans Industrial Plaza

The first major break through in a new planned Industrial development area in the north east section of Belleville, came on Friday with the official opening of the first factory building.

Pan Properties Ltd., a Belleville company, whose officials are President: Hilliard Charles Cooney; Vice-president: Abram Tobe, and Secretary-Treasurer: Sydney Speigel, was formed to buy and make available industrial land and buildings for potential industries. In excess of 90 acres was purchased by Pan Properties adjoining city owned land to provide a 200 acre industrial site with a salla frontin on Adam Street and Highway 401.

The first new factory whose tenant will be Northern Electric Company was built by Sidor Construction in record time, only nine weeks from the time the bulldozers moved in until the key to the completed building was turned over to the first tenant yesterday morning.

Pan Properties already have projected plans for an Industrial Plaza on this land under one roof that could be expanded. They will build and lease back any size building for any size or type of industry large or small.

Israel And Syria Enter Charges Of Aggression

Appear Before Security Council to Get Action

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Israel and Syria go before the UN Security Council today to charge each other with aggression and ask for action to stop it.

The urgent council meeting resulted from artillery and air battles Friday and Saturday in which 10 persons were reported killed and 37 were wounded. It was the most serious outbreak along the border in years.

U.S. Chief Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson, the council president for November, called the 3 p.m. EST meeting at the request of Syrian chief delegate Rafik Asha. Later he got a counter request from Israeli Chief Delegate Michael S. Comay.

A Syrian spokesman said his government was asking the 11-nation council to condemn Israel and to stop her from committing aggression."

Israel was understood to want the council to call on Syria to hold its fire and settle any future grievances peacefully.

ADJOURNMENT EXPECTED

After hearing both nations, the council was expected to adjourn as it usually does to study a report on the clashes from the head of the UN's Palestine truce organization, Lt.-Gen. Odd Bull of Norway.

A Syrian army communique Friday charged that Israeli artillery that day shelled the Arab villages of Tel Hazeir and Ayadat in the demilitarized zone between the two countries. It said Syrian forces hit back at five Israeli settlements and military positions and UN observers finally got a cease-fire. It said seven Syrians were killed and 26 were hurt.

Comay in a letter to Stevenson said Israeli planes brought about the cease-fire by attacking Hilltop Syrian gun positions at Tel Hamra, Asyzist and Nikheila that had been bombarding Israeli villages and settlements of Dan and Shaar Hyshuv for two hours. He said three Israelis were killed and 11 were hurt.

Another Syrian army communique said Israeli planes violated Syrian air space Saturday and, a series of battles and clashes plus hit one that was "seen exploding in mid-air."

The Israeli military spokesmen in Tel Aviv denied any Israeli plane exploded. He said Israeli planes flew into Syria violated Israeli air space and Israeli planes hit one of them, but its fate was unknown.

Government Will Press Program

- - MacEachen

HALIFAX (CP) — Tne Nova Scotia Liberal Association was told Saturday that the federal government plans to press on with its total program so matter what obstacles are created by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

But Labor Minister Mac. Eachen, in an address to the association's annual meeting, warned "we must surely ready ourselves for something the country doesn't want just yet, still another election if it is forced on us."

He added: "We can no doubt expect a few more cliffhangers until the estimates of all the spending departments have been passed."

He said the government had to face the "stubborn determination" of Mr. Diefenbaker, who seemed ready to bring his "once-great party" to "the brink of disintegration rather than agree to reasonable accommodations which would enable Parliament to get on with its business.

"For our part the government . . . will continue to press on with our total program no matter what obstacles the opposition leader throws in our path," he said.

Forestry Minister Sauve, who addressed the delegates at a luncheon, said Canadian unity could only be obtained through equal partnership of English- and French-Canadians.

Mr. Sauve said the Quebec people want to remain Canadians but "we French want to feel at home anywhere in Canada."

He described Prime Minister Pearson as one of the few English - speaking Canadians who fully understood the people of Quebec. Mr. Sauve made brief mention of the possibility of an election, saying simply "we will have an election soon."

PROMOTE PLANTING

TORONTO (CP)—Oak trees will be sprouting all over Ontario early next if the provincial department of lands and forests has its way. School children visiting the department's stand at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair are being handed acorns, bags of acorns and instructions on how to plant them and protect the seedlings.

To Debate Bill For 3 Days

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Where the party leaders failed, their followers succeeded.

That about sums up the arrangement concluded Friday among the political parties to confine themselves to three days of debate on the Canada Pension Plan, starting today.

A limitation on the pension debate to get it into a joint Commons - Senate committee was one of the arrangements which Prime Minister Pearson and the leaders of the opposition groups tried to make in their talks last week and the week before.

It was related to when the Commons would take up the flag committee's report and collapsed, partly because Opposition Leader Diefenbaker refused to accept a time limit on the flag debate.

It went down the drain so far as the leaders were concerned last Monday.

SEE PROOF

Now MPs are chuckling about the apparent proof that the real lives of an oft-repeated point of view—that the per s o n a l incompatibility of Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker is at the root of a lot of the Commons troubles.

People in a position to observe the two men say that they can hardly get talking together without the temperature rising, not so much from personal dislike as from incompatibility of outlook.

After the leaders' talks were called off a week ago, Privy Council President George McIlraith, government leader in the Commons, made the rounds of spokesmen for the opposition groups to see whether an arrangement could be put together to ensure at least speedy passage of the pension plan into the joint committee.

He got co-operation from his opposite numbers — Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre), Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), H. A. Olson (SC — Medicine Hat) and Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste—Lapointe).

The final act of the behind-the-scenes drama was played out on the long distance telephone. A message was relayed to Mr. Diefenbaker from Mr. Churchill, who was in Winnipeg for the annual meeting of the Canadian Progressive Conservative Association.

The arrangement raises the possibility that the Commons will get to debate the flag committee's report this week.

However, a firm decision hasn't been made on this point and, if recess practice is continued, the Commons will spend Thursday and Friday considering 1964-65 spending estimates and turn to the flag debate a week today.

Canadian Navy's Repair Vessel Takes Scientists to Easter Isle

HALIFAX (CP)—The navy's repair ship Cape Scott left here today carrying scientists from five nations who will make a scientific and medical study of the inhabitants of lonely Easter Island in the southeast Pacific before the island gets a big injection of civilization.

The 11,270-ton vessel, loaned for the McGill University-sponsored venture because of its large fuel capacity, is carrying 35 scientists to the isolated outpost 2,500 miles from Chile.

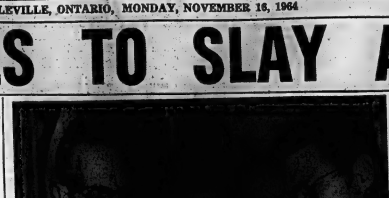
Led by Dr. Stanley C. Skyrme, director of McGill's gas-turbine laboratory, the group will land on the island Dec. 14 and be picked up Feb. 11 after a massive program of data-collecting among the 1,200 residents. The island is one of the last outposts of the 20th century when an airport is established there.

The islanders' only contact with civilization has been an annual visit by an Chilean navy ship after which a disease known as Cocongo crops up among the natives.

Dr. Skyrme said in an interview Sunday night the diseases has many of the characteristics of bronchitis. There has been no incidence of cancer among the inhabitants as "far as we know."

The expedition, expected to cost $500,000, includes scientists from Canada, the United States, Norway, the United Kingdom and Switzerland.

Montgomery In Hospital



LONDON (Reuters) — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery was admitted today to a hospital here for "investigations."

Lord Montgomery, deputy allied supreme commander at the invasion of Europe in 1944, was admitted to the Duke Edward VII Hospital for officers. He was being examined by Sir Arthur Porritt, surgeon to the Queen.

Lord Montgomery will be 77 Tuesday.

EARTHQUAKES FELT

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A severe earthquake rumbled along the U... west coast's San Andreas Fault Sunday night from the San Francisco Bay area to the Big Sur region, about 110 miles south, causing minor household damage. Technicians at The University of California's seismograph laboratory said the disturbance was centred in the heart of the barely-explored sparsely populated Santa Cruz Mountains.

West Germany and U. S. Agree on NATO's Future

From AP-Reuters

BONN (CP)—Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder said today after meeting with George Ball, U.S. undersecretary of state, that West Germany and the United States are in full agreement on NATO's future.

Ball was in Bonn to discuss ways that Europe can be given more of a voice in the control over nuclear weapons He met with Chancellor Ludwig Erhard after talking for two hours with Schroeder at the residence of U.S. Ambassador George C. McGhee.

"Certainly, there is full agreement on NATO's future," Schroeder said in response to questions after the meeting with Ball.

Ball was asked if any changes are being planned in the multilateral nuclear fleet as originally proposed by the Kennedy administration and approved by West Germany.

"I have been having very good conversations with Mr. Schroeder," Ball said. "I don't want to say more than that at this time."

The original proposals for a multilateral nuclear fleet called for 25 surface ships manned by mixed crews, joint y commanded by the participating nations and carrying U.S.-Polaris missiles. But the U.S. president would hold the trigger.

French President de Gaulle has been showing increasing hostility to this and has warned the Erhard government that its participation in the MLF could be considered an act directed against friendship with France Prime Minister Harold Wilson's new British Labor government has turned down the project in its present form.

British Foreign Secretary Patrick Gordon Walker presented his country's proposals for a modified multilateral nuclear force Sunday in meetings with Erhard and Schroeder. These were reported to provide for retaining the mixed-crew feature on a smaller scale, spreading out the force among as many NATO members as possible and including British-built planes.

The West German government promised to give the new ideas study but did not commit itself. Decision steps are expected when Wilson goes to Washington Dec. 7-8 to talk over NATO's future with President Johnson.

Ball told the closing session of the German-American conference in Berlin Sunday that Western Europe is safe today behind the deterrent forces of the Atlantic Alliance.

"But we recognize that other nations may wish to participate in the planning and responsibility for their own nuclear defence without the risks of creating additional nuclear forces" he said, adding:

"For that reason the United States stands ready now to join with other members of the alliance, nuclear and non-nuclear alike, in a combined effort to create and manage a multilateral nuclear force."

Ball said the U.S. did no treat the MLF as a hard-and-fast concept but rather as one further step toward full realization of "our developing relationship" with the nations of Western Europe.

Avoid Imposing 'Solutions' On Anybody Is French Plea

PARIS (Reuters) — French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville warned the NATO Alliance today that there are no easy solutions in Western defence problems and the imposition of "anything upon anybody" must be avoided.

Couve de Murville made no specific reference to the U.S.-proposed NATO multilateral nuclear force as he addressed the opening of a five-day meeting of legislators from the 15 NATO nations. France strongly opposes the MLF.

"There are no ready-made solutions that would, to everyone's satisfaction, solve problems that have been discussed for so long and that oppose the points of view, if not the legitimate interests, of all concerned," Couve de Murville said.

He added that "what is important above all is to avoid trying to impose anything upon anybody."

The NATO legislators were to discuss whether to press for creation of the MLF.

NATO Secretary - General Dirk Stikker of Italy called for frank discussion of NATO differences of opinion, including the MLF. He said NATO should not be reorganized "without the full and unanimous consent of all concerned."

Brosio said the divergence of opinion on the MLF went very deep. "It has come right out into the open and cannot be ignored." He said the MLF problem could be solved "if there is a common will to do so."

Airliner Crashes, 28 Die

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Wreckage of an airliner that hit a mountain peak in a storm Sunday night was found early today, Sheriff's deputies said all 28 persons aboard were dead.

The propeller - jet Bonanza Airlines plane vanished during a snowstorm just before it was due to land here on a flight from Phoenix.

Searchers spotted the wreckage of the twin-engine plane at 7 a.m. Helicopters flew to the scene and began flying bodies to a lower level.

The scene is about 16 miles southwest of Las Vegas near the railway community of Arden.

Searchers were directed to the area by a motorist who told officers he saw the plane skimming the ground Sunday night in a whirl of snow eight miles south of the city. The witness said the plane had one wheel down, as if it were trying to land.

The Fairchild F-27, Bonanza Airlines Flight 114 from Phoenix, Ariz., was three minutes from a landing at McCarran Field when it vanished from the radar screen at 8:27 p.m. PST.

At the time the plane was heading southeast, dropping down into the mountain-rimmed Las Vegas valley for an instrument landing.

Sheriff's officers said Bob Baker, a Las Vegas man, told them:

"I was driving on Highway 91 between 8 and 8:30 p.m. when I saw a Bonanza plane 70 to 100 feet off the ground, heading southeast. There were no landing lights on. One landing gear was down."

Baker's location was about where the plane was last sighted on radar. But the landing gear was in a different direction south instead of north.

The season's first snow was falling heavily as the search was launched. Soon after the F-27 disappeared, McCarran Field was closed to traffic.

The last big list of passengers' names won't be released until word is received of the plane's fate.

NOTED DOCTOR DIES

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. John Robertson McArthur, one of Canada's best-known gynecologists, died Saturday. He was 57. Dr. McArthur, a member of the consulting staff of the Toronto General Hospital and associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Toronto, was a specialist in the treatment of gynecological cancer.

Burn Hundreds Before Statue Of Lumumba

Doctor First Foreigner Condemned After Trial

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—Dr. Paul Carlson, an American medical missionary who refuses to abandon his Congolese patients behind rebel lines, is to be executed in Stanleyville today, a rebel broadcast announced.

Carlson's execution is the first of a white foreigner to be ordered by rebel leaders, though a number of Belgians have been killed by rebel soldiers.

Thousands of Congolese have been murdered. Central government troops who recaptured Kindu, capital of Maniema province, found the foot of a monument of the late Patrice Lumumba, the Congo's first premier, blackened and cracked by heat where rebels had burned hundreds of Congolese alive.

KILLED IN HUNCHES

Messages filtering out of Stanleyville say batches of Congolese are killed there each day at the foot of a monument of Lumumba.

The rebels charged Carlson, 36, was a major in the U.S. armed forces.

Another Radio Stanleyville message heard by a central government listening post Sunday night said Carlson had been sentenced to death by a military tribunal of the "Popular Liberation Army."

The broadcast referred to Carlson as "the American spy Major Carlson." A broadcast today claimed he had fought against the rebels.

U.S. embassy officials in Leopoldville have denied that Carlson, 36, was in the armed forces. They said Carlson belonged to the Protestant Mission Evangelique de Tshangi which has its headquarters in the Covenant World Mission in Chicago.

WAS IN NAVY

They said Carlson's only military experience was 2 two-year hitch in the navy between 1946 and 1948. Details of Carlson's military service were passed by an International Red Cross team in Burundi which made contact with the rebel leaders. Carlson was captured by the rebels Sept. 21 at Yakoma, North of Stanleyville on the Congo's border with the Central African Republic. He had radioed earlier that he decided to stay behind to treat sick and wounded.

Christophe Gbenye, self-proclaimed president of the Communist-backed "Congolese Peoples Republic," Sunday announced last month that Carl son was being held in the rebel capital, Stanleyville.

More than 1,000 foreigners are still in the rebel zone, including 33 Canadians, missionaries and teachers, more than 60 Americans, more than 600 Belgians, nearly 100 Italians, 25 British missionaries and businessmen, several Greeks, Poles and Cypriot traders, and about

Council Entering Last Week

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The current session of the Vatican ecumenical council entered its final week today with word from Pope Paul that important church doctrines must be issued before the session ends.

It promised to be the most busy week for the 2,000 council fathers since they started this third session Sept 14.

The cardinals, archbishops, bishops and patriarchs may have to meet in the evenroons as well as the mornings to get documents ready for the ceremonial closing Saturday

It seemed virtually certain that Pope Paul would be able to issue two council schemata the full church decrees next Saturday.

One blazes a new path for Roman Catholic relations with other Christians. The other establishes the principle that all bishops share collectively with the Pope in governing the church.

CONSPICUOUS VOTING

Final voting on the first schema (draft decree) titled Decumenicism (on unity) was completed last Saturday, leaving only the formality of a vote in public meeting before pronouncement.

For the other schema, De Ecclesia (on the church), final voting on a series of minor changes will take place Tues day and Wednesday.

These two schemata are of outstanding significance to the Christian world. Christian unity is a major goal of the ecumenical council. And Pope Paul has termed the church the centre of papal-episcopal power he council's weightiest task.

The Pontiff was obviously alluding to the two schemata when he told the crowd in St. Peter's Square Sunday.

"In the week, God willing, we must conclude discussions very important on the theme and arguments that there must be promulgated doctrines important to Christian life."
